PREFACE.

THE plan pursued by the Editor in enlarging the Greek Grammar of Dr. Valpy has been, to make such additions and improvements as might render the volume a more complete manual for the student, not only previous to, but also during a portion, at least, of his Collegiate career. In order to accomplish this end, it has been the Editor's endeavour to bring together, in a small compass, the remarks of the latest and best Grammarians, on various points connected with the more accurate knowledge of the Greek language. The general features of Dr. Valpy's work are retained, except that the notes are, in most instances, removed from the bottom of the page, and thrown into the form of observations which follow after the text. This has been done for the purpose of bringing them more immediately under the eye of the student. In using this Grammar, however, his attention should be first called to those parts of it which have an immediate bearing upon his studies, and that, upon a second and third revisal, he should be taken in succession over those portions which might only tend to embarrass him in the commencement of his career. The result of such a mode of proceeding will be, not only to render his Grammar a more agreeable companion to the young Hellenist, but also to give him a more systematic acquaintance with the language itself.

In one or two instances some useless matter has been removed from the work, especially that part which related to the formation of the Greek language, and in which the theory of Hemsterhuis was followed. It may be a very specious and plausible system, to suppose that the Greek language, in its earliest state, consisted of monosyllabic and dissyllabic words; but to this supposition there are two insurmountable objections:

it contains an ill-grounded and gratuitous assumption that the Greek language was original and indigenous, and it is at variance with what we know historically of the language itself.

Under the head of Prepositions, the Editor has taken the liberty of attempting to explain their uses on a new plan, which it is hoped may prove serviceable.

The arrangement of the previous edition has been retained in the present, with the exception of the Remarks on the Tenses and Moods ; these have been enlarged and placed at the end of the Syntax.

Along with the new matter introduced into this edition will be found some observations on the Sanskrit language, under the History of the Dialects, and the admirable dissertation of Thiersch on the Homeric Digamma.

Among the sources whence the principal supplies for the present work have been obtained, the following may be enumerated. The Grammars of Matthiæ, Buttmann, Rost, Weller, Golius, and Lancelot ; the Animadversions of Fischer on the Grammar of Weller, and the Hebrew Grammar of Professor Stuart of Andover. To the last of these the Editor acknowledges himself indebted for some valuable remarks in relation to the resemblance which exists between the letters of the Greek and Hebrew alphabets.

The Editor, having received from Dr. Valpy a copy of the latest English edition of his Grammar, has been enabled to introduce into the present work the most recent improvements of that learned scholar.

Obs. 1. The Hebrew letters are here given only in part, and in the order of the Greek, not of the Hebrew, alphabet. The object, in adding them, was to make the student acquainted with the source whence the Greek characters are generally supposed to have been derived. The Hebrew letters omitted, are Vau, Tsadhe, Qoph, Shin and Sin. The first of these stands sixth in order in the Hebrew alphabet, and is considered to have been the parent of the Greek digamma, which was generally expressed by F, a Hebrew Vau reversed and slightly altered. The digamma was originally a letter of the Greek alphabet, ranked next after ϵ , and having a sound between V and W. It was afterwards rejected by all but the Æolians, as superfluous, and used only by its name Fau, as one mode of expressing the number 6. The Hebrew letter Tsadhe is thought to have been the root of the Greek $\Sigma\alpha\nu\pi$, which also, as it would seem, after having been an actual letter of the old Greek alphabet, was retained only as a numeral, and answered to 900. From the letter Qoph, the Greek Κοππα probably took its rise, a numeral sign for 90, though originally perhaps a letter of the Greek alphabet also, in common with the preceding two. With regard to the two remaining Hebrew characters, Shin and Sin, they were in effect but one letter in the more ancient Hebrew alphabet, no distinction being then made between them in writing. From this source the Doric San or old Greek S is thought to have come.—In the Latin alphabet, derived as some think from the old Greek, Vau is made to have passed into F, and Κοππα into Q.

Obs. 2. * Ε ψιλόν , (smooth, not aspirated) appears to have received this appellation to distinguish it from H, which was anciently the mark of the rough breathing, and was expressed also as a vowel by ϵ .—In like manner * Υ ψιλόν was so named to distinguish it from the Υ as one of the ancient signs of the digamma, since otherwise οι was put for υ .

Obs. 3. The old Greek alphabet is generally supposed to have consisted of 16 letters, viz. $\alpha, \beta, \gamma, \delta, \epsilon, \iota, \kappa, \lambda, \mu, \nu, \omicron, \pi, \rho, \sigma, \tau, \upsilon$, which, according to tradition, were brought by Cadmus from Phœnicia to Greece, and hence were called $\gamma\rho\acute{\alpha}\mu\mu\alpha\tau\alpha \text{Καδμήϊα}$ or Φοινικῆϊα . To these Simonides of Ceos is said to have added $\theta, \zeta, \phi, \chi$, in the 6th century B. C. and Epicharmus the Sicilian, ξ, η, ψ, ω , in the 5th century B. C. The number of letters, however, introduced by Cadmus, is far from being clearly ascertained. The oldest writers who relate the story of their introduction, viz. Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus, say nothing about their number, and the accounts of later times disagree; Aristotle makes 18 (Plin. N. H. 7. 56.), another account 17 (Isidor. Orig. 1. 13.). It is highly probable, both from these varying statements and the remarks under Obs. 1, that the number exceeded 16; nor is it at all certain that Cadmus first brought letters into Greece. Dunbar supposes, that the Greeks, while they adopted the Phœnician letters, did not adopt also the language of that country, but employed such of the letters only of their alphabet as they found necessary, and sufficient to express all the sounds they were accustomed to utter. Dunbar on the Greek and Latin Languages, p. 9. Compare Lempriere's Class Dict. (Anthon's ed.) articles, Cadmus, Homerus, and Pelasgi.

Obs. 4. The Ionians, it is said, first adopted all the 24 letters, and from them the Samians, from whom they were received by the Athenians; but it was not until after the Peloponnesian war, under the Archonship of Euclides (Ol. 94. 2. B. C. 403.) that they were used in public acts by the latter people. Hence the 24 letters are called also Ἰωνικά γράμματα, and the old 16 Ἀττικά γράμματα. Before this period they used instead of θ, φ, χ, TH, ΠH, KH, (H being the mark of aspiration or breathing): for ζ, ΣΔ; for ξ, KΣ, or XΣ, or ΓΣ; for ψ, BΣ, or ΠΣ; for η, ε or εε, δεελοσ for δηλοσ, (Il. κ'. 446.) and for ω, the short ο. They also anciently expressed ε by ε, and ου by ο. The Æolians retained the old mode of writing. Compare Knight, on the Greek Alphabet, p. 10, &c.

Obs. 5. The twofold mode of writing some letters is indifferently used, with the exception of σ and ς: σ is only used at the beginning and in the middle of a word, and ς only at the end. It depends, however, upon a mere principle of Calligraphy. The latter is not to be confounded with ς, called sti, stigma, sigma-tau, ἐπισημοσ, or Fau, and which is used as a numerical sign for 6.

Letters are divided into Vowels and Consonants.

The vowels are seven,

Two long, η, ω.

Two short, ε, ο.

Three doubtful, α, ι, υ.

Obs. When α, ι, υ, are called doubtful vowels, it is not meant that there is, in every case, something doubtful and wavering in their nature, between long and short. All the single vowels are in certain words positively long, in others positively short. It merely means that they are vowel signs of a twofold nature or use, i. e. the same signs serve to denote the long and short quantities; whereas the ε and ο sounds have a separate sign or letter.

When two vowels are pronounced with one sound, they constitute a diphthong.

Obs. 1. The sounds of ι and υ, being formed by the palate and lips, in the front part of the mouth, may be denominated front-vowels. Those of α, ε, ο, being formed by the organs in the back part of the mouth, may be called back-vowels. Hence the following more accurate definition of a diphthong.

Diphthongs are formed, when a back-vowel (α, ε, ο,) unites itself in utterance with a front-vowel (ι, υ,) producing one sound.

Thus,

| | | | | | | |
|---|----|----|--|---|---|----|
| ε | ει | ευ | | η | η | ηυ |
| ο | οι | ου | | ω | ω | ωυ |
| α | αι | αυ | | ᾱ | ᾱ | αυ |

Obs. 2. The iota after the long vowel is usually placed as a point underneath, and is called iota subscribed. Thus, as above, η, ω, ᾱ. Hence these diphthongs are called by some improper diphthongs. The sound of the vowels is not affected by the iota subscribed, which serves only to indicate the derivation of the word. Anciently perhaps it was heard in the pronunciation. The ancients moreover wrote the iota in the line; and in capital letters this is still practised, as, ΘΗΙ ΣΟΦΙΑΙ, (τῆ σοφίᾳ): τῷ Ἀιδῇ (or ᾷδῇ).

Obs. 3. υι is also found as a diphthong, but the ι was (in this case) originally pronounced with an aspirate similar to W (digamma); e. g. υῖός was pronounced whios; μεμᾰνῖα, memawhia; υι, consequently, was not, properly speaking, a diphthong.

Obs. 4. With regard to the change of the Greek diphthongs into the corresponding forms of the Latin language, it is to be observed that the usage of the latter language is not always uniform: Αι, for example, sometimes becomes æ in Latin, as Μοῦσαι, Musæ; and sometimes, though more rarely, αι or aj, as Μαῖα, Maia, or Maja. This irregularity, however, is particularly apparent in the case of ει, as Ἰφιγένεια, Iphigenia; Μήδεια, Medæa, &c. it being changed in the former into the long i, and in the latter into the long e. These deviations, in the case of ει, may be accounted for by supposing, that ει was pronounced, according to the custom of the more ancient Greeks, like εῖ separately, yet in one syllable ; so that, according to the different dialects, sometimes ε, sometimes ι had the leading sound.—As to the remaining diphthongs, οι becomes in Latin, oe, and ου the long u, as, Βοιωτία, Boeotia ; Θρασύβουλος, Thrasybūlus.—A few diphthongal forms in οια remain unchanged when written in Latin, except that the ι passes into j according to Latin usage, as Τροία, Troja.

Obs. 5. When two vowels, which generally coalesce into a diphthong, retain their separate sounds, two dots are placed over the latter vowel, and form a diæresis, as ἄννρος.

Of the seventeen Consonants, nine are mutes, and are divided into Three soft, π, κ, τ,

 Three middle, β, γ, δ,
 Three aspirate, φ, χ, θ.

Each soft mute has its corresponding middle and aspirate, into each of which it is frequently changed ; thus π has β for its middle, and φ for its aspirate. These are called Cognate Letters.

Obs. 1. The soft consonants are so termed because they are uttered without any perceptible breathing. The consonants φ, χ, θ, are the most strongly aspirated, for which reason they are called aspirate. Between these two classes, as to the strength of the aspirate, are found β, γ, δ, and are hence denominated middle.

Obs. 2. When two mutes come together, they must be both, either soft, middle, or aspirate ; as, τέτυπται, not τέτυφται ; έτυφθην, not έτύπηθην.

Four are Liquids, λ, μ, ν, ρ, to which some add the simple sibilant σ.

Obs. 1. Liquids are so called because they readily unite with other consonants, and glide into their sounds. They are also termed semivowels, as forming, by their humming or sibilant sounds, a transition to the articulate sound of the vowels.

Three are double letters, viz. ζ, ξ, ψ, and are formed by the union of σ with the mutes : thus,

Hence when these letters are thus joined, the double letter is substituted ; as "Αραψι for "Αραβ-σι, from "Αραψ ; λέξω, for λέγσω, from λέγω ; πλέξω for πλέκσω, from πλέκω ; αλείψω for αλείφ-σω, from αλείφω.

Obs. 1. The Æolians never used the double consonants, but the corresponding simple letters, as αἶψα for αἶψα, ὑποσ-δεύκασα for ὑποζεύξασα. In expressing ζ they made use of σδ, a form which was also retained by the Dorians. Some grammarians maintain that the letter ζ should always be considered as standing for σδ and not for δς. The sound of ζ, which was that of a soft s, favours this idea.

Obs. 2. The double letters are not used for the corresponding simple ones, when the two simple letters belong to two different parts of a compound word ; as ἐκσεύω, not ἐξεύω. Yet Ἀθήναζε is used instead of Ἀθήνασδε.

The simple letters are divided, according to the organs with which they are pronounced, into Labials, β, μ, π, φ, ψ.

Linguals, δ, ζ, θ, λ, ν, ρ, σ, τ.

Palatics, γ, κ, ξ, χ.

Γ before γ, κ, ξ, χ, has the sound of NG ; thus ἄγγελος is pronounced ἄνγελος, like n in angle.

No genuine Greek form terminates in any consonant except σ, ς, ρ, for those which end in ξ and ψ are to be considered as terminating in κς and πς. The only exceptions to this remark are ἐκ, οὐκ, and οὐχ, and these never occur at the end of a clause.

BREATHINGS.

To the written characters belong also the spiritus or breathings, of which there are two, the soft (spiritus lenis, πνεῦμα ψῖλόν,) and the rough or aspirate (spiritus asper, πνεῦμα δασύ). One of these breathings is placed over every vowel or diphthong beginning a word.

The aspirate is equivalent in pronunciation to the English H, as ὅτι, hoti; οὗτος, houtos.

Y and ρ at the beginning of a word have always the aspirate. If two ρ come together, the former has the soft, the latter the aspirate; as, ἔρρεον, ἄρρητος, Πύρρος.

Obs. 1. In diphthongs which begin a word, the breathing is placed over the second vowel, as Εὐριπιδης, οἶος. This, however, is not the case with the improper diphthongs, as Ἄιδης, ᾗδης.

Obs. 2. Anciently H was the mark for the aspirate in Greek, as it is in the Latin: thus HEKATON was written for ἑκατόν. This was afterwards divided, and one half F used as the mark for the aspirate, the other I as the mark for the soft breathing. This form was afterwards simplified into L and J; and lastly rounded into the present shape, (') and ('). Both the F and the H or I seem, according to Knight, to have been dropt from the Greek Alphabet, nearly at the same time, probably about the period of the Persian war. The first figure of the latter was, however, retained to represent the double or long E, and the former seems to have continued in use in particular places, where a fondness for the ancient dialects prevailed, even to the final subversion of the Greek republics by the Roman arms. Knight on the Greek Alphabet, p. 12.

Obs. 3. All words which begin with a vowel, but are not pronounced with the rough breathing, have, or are supposed to have, the soft breathing over their initial letter; because every word that begins with a vowel can be distinguished in the pronunciation by no other means from the preceding letters than by drawing the breath from the lungs with a moderate effort. The spiritus lenis therefore has an actual force, and is, in fact, the oriental aleph. The ancients were the rather led to denote it as they wrote in general without a division of words.

Obs. 4. The ancient Greek language appears to have had no spiritus asper, at least the Æolians were without it; and in the Ionic dialect, like all other aspirates, it rarely occurs. Hence ἄλτο from ἄλλομαι, ἔκμενος from ἐκνέομαι, ἥλιος for ἡλιος.

But the ancients pronounced every word which began with a vowel with a peculiar species of aspirate, which had a sound between our v and w, and was often expressed by β or υ , and also γ . For this the figure of a double Γ was invented (F), whence the name digamma; which was called Æolic, because the Æolians, who of all the tribes retained the greatest traces of the old language, kept this letter in use among them after the other dialects had laid it aside. Thus the Æolians wrote Φοῖνος, Φελέα, whence vinum, Velia, in Latin, (for the Latins expressed this digamma by a V); so also ναΦος, navis; οΦις, ovis; αιΦων, avum, &c. A more enlarged account of the Digamma, by Thiersch, will be found under Appendix A. In the mean time it may be as well to remark, that Dr. Burgess, formerly Bishop of St. David's, in a letter to the late Bishop of Durham, maintains that the Digamma was originally no other than two Vaus, one placed on the other. A Letter to the Lord Bishop of Durham, &c. 10, seqq.

Change and Omission of Letters for the sake of Euphony.

Gen. Obs. The great principle which pervades the Greek language is strict attention to Euphony, and an endeavour to avoid the concurrence of consonants which were difficult to be pronounced together, or of different kinds, as well as the meeting of two vowels of separate pronunciation. Hence result the following rules :

RULE 1. Three consonants, or one with a double consonant, can never (except in the case of composition like δύσφρατος, ἐκπτωσις, ἐκψύχω,) stand together, unless the first or last be a liquid or γ before γ , κ , χ ; as πεμφθείς, σκληρός, τέγξω.

RULE 2. As in some instances the concurrence even of two consonants may produce roughness, this is avoided in two ways. 1. By the introduction of a third consonant, as μεσημερία for μεσημυρία, ἀνδρός for ανρός. 2. By the transposition of a consonant, as ἐπράβον for ἐπαρβον, from πέρβω; κράδια for καρδία.

NOTE. In μεσημβρία, the letter β appears to supply the place of an aspirate : so γαμβρός for γαμερός. (Knight on the Greek Alphabet, p. 7. Lennep. Analog. Græc. p. 286.) In ανδρός, the δ is inserted after the ν, being of the same class with it, viz. a lingual.

RULE 3. In the concurrence of two or more consonants, those only which are of the same class are put together. Hence an aspirated consonant is joined to an aspirate, a middle to a middle, a smooth to a smooth; as φθίνω, ἄχθος, βδελυρός, ἑπτὰ, νυκτός. When, in the formation of words, therefore, two dissimilar consonants come together, the first generally assumes the properties of the second. Thus, by adding the terminations τός, δῆν, θείς, are formed, from γράφω, γραπτός, and γράξδην, and from πλέκω, πλεχθείς.

Obs. 1. In the case, however, of two like mutes already combined, one alone cannot be changed, but always both together. Thus, from ἐπτά, is formed ἑβδομος; from ὀκτώ, ὄγδοος; from ἐπτά and ἡμέρα, εφθήμερος. The preposition ἐκ alone remains unaltered before all consonants, as ἐκθλίβω, ἐκθῆναι, ἐκδοῦναι. Before a vowel it is changed into ἐξ, as ἐξαίρετος, from ἐκ and αἰρέω.

Obs. 2. If two words stand together, the second of which begins with an aspirated vowel and the first ends with a soft one; or, if the final vowel of the first word is rejected and the second begins with an aspirated vowel; in both of these cases the mute which precedes the second word becomes an aspirate, as οὐχ ἴνα, οὐχ ὅπως, ἀφ' οὗ, ἀνθ' ὧν. So also in the crasis θοιμάτιον for τὸ ἱμάτιον, θάτερον for τὸ ἔτερον. The soft mute before the aspirate thus introduced, becomes an aspirate itself in conformity with the rule; as, νύχθ' ὕπν, for νύκτια ὑπό.

RULE 4. Two successive syllables very seldom begin each with an aspirate. Whenever two syllables, immediately following each other, would, according to their peculiar derivation, or the original form of the word, begin each with an aspirate, the first aspirate is changed, with a few exceptions, into a lenis. Thus, θρίξ, τριχός, not θριχός; πεφίληκα, not φεφίληκα; τρέχω, not θρέχω; τρέφω, not θρέφω. In these last two verbs, the aspirate enters again, however, in the first syllable of the future, the second aspirate being lost, as, έρέξω, έρέψω.

Obs. 1. There are five exceptions to this rule. 1. In compound words; as ύρνιθοθήρας, ύνθοφόρος; (though sometimes in this case also the first aspirate is changed, as έκχειρία from έχω and χείρ; έπαφή, άπεφθος; for έφαφή, άφεφθος, from άφή, έφθος). 2. The passive ending in θην, with its derivatives; as έχύθην, άφείθην, ώρθώθην; (excepting two verbs only, θύω and τιθημι, which form έτύθην, and έτέθην). 3. If a consonant, whether rough or smooth, immediately precede the second aspirate; as θρεφθεις, θαλφθεις, έθελχθην, τιθեսθαι. 4. If the second, by changing the lenis before a rough breathing, becomes an aspirate; as έθηνχ' ό άνθρωπος. 5. By affixing the adverbial terminations θεν and θι; as πανταχόθεν, Κοριϑύθι.

Obs. 2. The second of two aspirates is seldom thus changed: it is regularly done, however, in imperatives in θι; as θείτι, τύφθητι; for θείθι, τύφθιθι.

Obs. 3. This rule, perhaps, extended not only to the aspirated letters, but also to the rough breathing, which it turned into the smooth. But one solitary trace, however, remains of this, viz. in the verb έχω, which has έξω in the future, and should properly have έχω in the present, but the rough breathing is changed into the smooth on account of the following χ, an aspirate.

RULE 5. The aspirates are never doubled, but, instead thereof, an aspirate must be preceded by the kindred mute; as 'Ατθίς, not 'Αθθίς; Βάχχος, not Βάχχος; Ματθαῖος, not Μαθθαῖος; Σαφώ, not Σαφφώ.

RULE 6. When ρ stands at the beginning of a word, if a simple vowel be made to precede it in composition or inflection, the ρ is usually doubled; as έρρέπον, άρρέπης, from ρέπω; περίρροος from περί and ρέω. This rule, however, does not hold in the case of diphthongs, as ἐθροστως, from εῦ and ρόννυμι.

RULE 7. ν is changed into

into μ, before β, μ, π, φ, ψ; into λ, ρ, σ, before λ, ρ, σ.

Thus, ἐγγράφω for ἐνγράφω; ἐμβαίνω for ἐνβαίνω; συλλαμβάνω for συνλαμβάνω; συρρέω for συνρέω; συσκευάζω for συνσκευάζω. Except πέφανσαι (2. pers. perf. pass. of φαίνω), ἐλμινς, πέπανσις, and a few others. It remains unaltered in general only before δ, θ, τ.

Obs. The preposition ἐν, before ρ, σ, and ζ, remains unchanged; as ἐνρυθμος, ἐνριζώω, ἐνσειώω, ἐνζέομαι. But in σὺν, when followed by two consonants or ζ, the ν is thrown out; as σύστημα. In πάλιν, however, in the same case, the ν is retained, as παλινσχιος, or also, παλίσχιος.

RULE 8. Before μ, the labials β, μ, π, φ, ψ, are changed into μ; as λέλειμμαι for λέλειπμαι; τέτυμμαι for τέτυπμαι. Before the same letter, κ and χ are changed into γ, as λέλεγμαι for λέλεχμαι; δέδογμαι for δέδοχμαι; and the linguals δ, θ, τ, ζ, into σ.

Obs. The following are exceptions, ἀκμή, αὐχμός, ἰδμων, κεκορυθμένος, πότιμος.

RULE 9. The linguals δ, θ, τ, ζ, can only stand before λ, μ, ν, ρ. They are dropped before σ. Thus πόδεσι, ποδσὶ, ποσί, from ποῦς; πλήθω, πλήθσω, πλήσω; σωμάτεσι, σωμάτσει, σωμάσι, from σῶμα. So also, ἀρπάσω for ἀρπαζέσω.

RULE 10. ν is dropped before ζ and σ in declension, and also in the preposition σὺν; (Rule 7. Obs.) as μῆνες, μῆνεσι, μηνσί, μησί; συζῆν for συνζῆν ; συζητέω for συνζητέω. When this takes place, the syllable preceding ζ and σ is long.

Obs. 1. The preposition ἐν remains unchanged, and the adverb πάλιν, as noticed in the Obs. to Rule 7.

Obs. 2. If, after the rejection of ν before σ, only ε or ο remains, then ες is changed into εις, ος into ους, and the short α is made long. Thus, the present participle of τιθῆμι is properly τιθέης, which the Æolians retained, and which becomes, after the rejection of ν and the changing of ε into ει, τιθεις. So the present participle of δίδωμι is διδούς, whence comes by rejecting ν and changing ο into ου, διδοús. And lastly, τύψας, σιάς, and other participles of this termination, come from forms in ανς ; as τύψανς, σιάνς, and have the α long. The same remarks will apply to verbs, nouns, and adjectives. Thus, from the verb σπένδω comes the future σπένδεσσω, contracted into σπένσω, and changed by the operation of the rule into σπεισω ; from ὀδόνς comes ὀδούς ; from χαρτενς, χαρτεϊς ; from ἀπανς, ἀπας. Thus, too, the Æolians and Dorians said, instead of τύψανς, ποιήσανς, having rejected the ν, τύψαις, ποιήσαις. The ν which appears in the genitive, proves conclusively that the same letter entered originally into the form of the nominative. The Latins in their present participles active retain this old form, as docens, amans, &c.

OF THE HIATUS.

Gen. Obs. A word which ends with a vowel, followed by another which begins with a vowel, produces what is termed an Hiatus. The Attics endeavoured to avoid such a concurrence of vowel-sounds much more anxiously than the other Greeks, and among the Attics the Poets were much more attentive to this than the prose writers. The Ionians, on the contrary, who were not offended at the concurrence of two or more vowels, seldom made use of any means to prevent such an Hiatus, and only in poetry. In Homer the ν ἐφεκλυστικόν occurs nearly regularly, in Herodotus not at all. But nevertheless many instances of Hiatus occur in Homer ; to remove the most offensive of which, recourse is had to the Digamma. (vid. Appendix, A.)

The Attics, in order to avoid Hiatus, employed three modes :

1. The addition of ν to the end of a word.
2. Apostrophe.
3. Contractions.

1.—N ἐφελκυστικόν.

ν ἐφελκυστικόν is added to datives plural in σι, and consequently in ξι and ψι, to the third person of verbs in ε or ι, to the word εἴκοσι (twenty), and to the adverbs πέρυσι, παντάπασι, νόσφι, πρόσθε, ὀπίσθε, κε, νυ, when the following word begins with a vowel; as ἐν μηνὶν ὀλίγοις, πᾶσιν εἶπεν ἐκεῖνοις, ἔτυψεν αὐτόν, εἴκοσιν ἔτη γεγονώς, &c.

Obs. 1. The Ionians and Attics also affixed a ν to the diphthong ει in the third person sing. plusq. perf. active.

Obs. 2. It is denominated by the Grammarians ν ἐφελκυστικόν, because it draws or attracts the second vowel to the first. The datives ἡμῖν, ὕμῖν, have it also, they being contracted from ἡμέσι, ὕμέσι.

Obs. 3. The ν ἐφελκυστικόν is also applied to the terminations in σι, expressing a place, which are formed from datives plural; as Πλαταιάσιν, Ὀλυμπιάσιν.

Obs. 4. The letter σ is sometimes inserted on the same principle with the ν; as οὕτω before a consonant, οὕτως before a vowel; so also ἄχρι, ἄχρις; μέχρι, μέχρις; ἀτρέμα, ἀτρέμας.

Obs. 5. The same remark will apply to the negative οὐ, which retains this form before a consonant, but has οὐκ before a vowel, and consequently οὐχ before an aspirate. The κ in οὐκ, however, is dropped at every pause, even when the next sentence begins with a vowel, since no Greek word by itself can terminate in κ: as Οὐ· ἀλλ' ὅταν.

Obs. 6. The Ionians omit this ν even before a vowel; on the other hand, the poets use it before a consonant to effect a position for the preceding vowel. This is also sometimes done in Attic prose, and at the end of a sentence it is rarely omitted. (Upon this whole subject, however, see Buttman's Ausführliche Griech. Sprachl. § 26. anm. 2. who denies, in opposition to other Grammarians, that the ν σφελκ. is ever used to prevent an hiatus).

2.—APOSTROPHE.

Apostrophe is the turning away, or rejecting, of the final vowel of a word, when the next word begins with a vowel, as πάντ' ἔλεγεν for πάντα ἔλεγεν, δι' ὧν for διὰ ὧν.

When an apostrophe takes place, a lenis before an aspirate is changed into its corresponding aspirate: thus, for ἀπὸ οὗ, ἀπ' οὗ is changed into ἄφ' οὗ.

Apostrophe in general removes the short final vowels, α, ε, ι, ο. The following, however, are exceptions: 1. The ο in πρὸ is not cut off, but in certain cases coalesces with the following vowel. 2. The ι in περὶ is not cut off except in the Æolic dialect. 3. The ι in ὄτι is not cut off; since, if this were done, ὄτ' might be confounded with ὄτε, and ὄθ' with ὄθι. 4. The ι is rarely cut off in the dative singular and plural of the third declension.

Obs. 1. Not only short vowels, but diphthongs also, are elided; not indiscriminately however, for 1. They are not elided in the infinitive of the perfects active and passive, nor in that of the aorists passive, neither are they elided in the 3*d.* person singular of the optative, nor in the nominative plural of nouns. 2. Diphthongs are not elided by the Attic poets before short vowels. 3. Diphthongs are rarely, if ever, elided in prose.

Obs. 2. The Attics and Dorians use the apostrophe, in final long syllables, on the short vowels of the following word; as ποῦ 'στιν for ποῦ ἔστιν; ὦ 'γαθέ for ὦ ἀγαθέ. The poets reject also from the diphthong, with which a word begins, the first short vowel, when the preceding word ends with a vowel, as ἡ εὐσέθεια for ἡ εὐσέθεια, ὦ υἱεπιδη for ὦ Εὐριπιδῆ.

Obs. 3. For farther remarks on Apostrophe, vid. Appendix, B.

3.—CONTRACTIONS.

Contractions are chiefly used by the Attics, the characteristic difference between the Attic and Ionic dialects being this, that the former delights in contractions, whereas the latter in most instances avoids them, and is fond of a concurrence of vowel sounds.

Contractions are of two kinds, proper and improper, or, as they are otherwise termed, Synæresis and Crasis.

A proper contraction, or Synæresis, is when two single vowels are contracted without change into one diphthong, as τείχει contracted into τείχει, from τείχος, a wall.

An improper contraction, or Crasis, is when a vowel or diphthong of different sounds is substituted, as τείχεος, contracted into τείχους, τείχεα contracted into τείχη.

Obs. 1. A syllable contracted by Crasis has commonly a mark (') placed as a sign over it, as ταῦτά for τά αὐτά, τοῦναντιον for τὸ ἐναντιον.

Obs. 2. The ι subscribed is only used when, beside the contraction, the ι is still found in the last of the two contracted syllables; as κἄτια for καὶ εἴτια; ἐγῶ οἶδα. Hence κἄπι for καὶ ἐπὶ, not κἄπι; κἄρειτη, for καὶ ἄρειτή, not κἄρειτη.

Obs. 3. Among the instances of Crasis which are of common occurrence, besides those already mentioned, the following may be enumerated. Τοῦνομα for τὸ ὄνομα, τάμά for τὰ ἐμά, ἐγῶμαι for ἐγὼ οἶμαι, θουμάτιον for τὸ ἱμάτιον, οὐνεκα for οὐ ἐνεκα, προῦτρεψεν for προστρέψεν, κακοῦργος for κακοςεργός, τοῦμόν for τὸ ἐμόν, ὧ ἄνθρωποι for οἱ ἄνθρωποι, χ' ὥπως for καὶ ὅπως, χ' ὥστις for καὶ ὅστις, κάκεινος for καὶ ἐκεῖνος.

Obs. 4. For farther particulars respecting contractions, vid. Appendix, C.

Of Figures affecting Syllables.

1. Prosthesis is the adding of one or more letters to the beginning of a word, as σμικρός for μικρός, εἰκοσι for εἴκοσι.

2. Paragoge is the adding of one or more letters to the end of a word, as ἦσθα for ἦς, τοῖσι for τοῖς.

3. Epenthesis is the insertion of one or more letters in the body of a word, as ἔλλαβε for ἐλαβε, ὀπότερος for ὀπίτερος.

4. Syncope is the taking away of one or more letters from the body of a word, as ἦλθον for ἦλυθον, εὐράμην for εὐρησάμην.

5. Aphæresis is the cutting off of one or more letters from the beginning of a word, as στεροπή for ἀστεροπή, ὄρη for ἐσρη.

6. Apocope is the cutting off of one or more letters from the end of a word, as δῶ for δῶμα, Ποσειδῶ for Ποσειδῶνα.

7. Metathēsis is the transposition of letters and syllables, as ἐπραθον for ἐπαρθον, from πέρθω ; ἔδρακον for ἔδαρκον, from δέρκω ; κρατερός for κρατερός, κάρτος for κράτος.

Obs. The Ionians often, by a species of Metathesis, change the breathing in a word, as κῑθών for χιτών, ἐνθαῦτα for ἐνταῦθα.

8. Tmēsis is when the parts of a compound are separated by an intervening word, as ὕπερ τινὰ ἔχειν for ὑπερέχειν τινά.

OF ACCENTS.

There are three accents, the acute (´), the grave (`), and the circumflex (˘).

The acute is placed on one of the three last syllables of a word.

The grave is never placed but on the last syllable.

The circumflex is placed on a long vowel or a diphthong in one of the two last syllables.

Obs. 1. The circumflex was first marked ˆ, then ˘, and lastly ˘.

Obs. 2. The acute is called in Greek ῥῆμα (προσῳδία, accent, being understood) ; the grave is styled βαρεῖα ; the circumflex περισπωμένη, that is, wound about.

Obs. 3. In accentuation, words are called, in Greek,

1. ὀξύτονα, which have the acute (ὀξύς τόνος) on the last syllable ; as θεός.

2. Παροξύτονα, which have it on the penultima ; as τετυμμένος.

3. Προπαροξύτονα, which have it on the antepenultima ; as ἄνθρωπος.

4. Περισπώμενα, which have the circumflex on the last syllable ; as τιμῶ.

5. Προπερισπώμενα, which have it on the penultima ; as πρῶγμα.

6. Βαρύτονα, are all words which have no accent on the last syllable, because, according to the custom of grammarians, the syllable which is neither marked with the acute nor the circumflex has the grave, (βαρύν τόνον).

Obs. 4. For a more enlarged view of the doctrine of accents, vid. Appendix, D.

MARKS OF READING.

1. When two vowels are separated in pronunciation, and do not constitute a diphthong, the latter of the vowels has two points over it, as προῦπαρχω, ἀίδης. This is called Diæresis.

2. Diastole or Hypodiastole is a comma put at the end of the compound in compound words, to distinguish it from other words consisting of the same letters ; as ὀ τς, the neuter of ὀς and τς, to distinguish it from ὀτς (since). So also τό τς and τότς, ὀ τι and ὀτι.

Obs. The Diastole is rendered almost useless by the art of printing. Many, instead of the Diastole, only leave a small space between the parts of the compound, as is the case in old MSS. and editions ; ὀ τς, τό τς, ὀ τι.

3. The marks of punctuation in Greek are for the most part the same as those in Latin, except the colon and mark of interrogation. The colon is put at the upper part of the last word, as εἶπε. The colon and semicolon are not distinguished from each other.

4. The mark of interrogation is (;), the semicolon of modern languages.

5. Besides these, there is a mark which shows that two words belong to each other, and which is called Hyphen, (ὄφ' ἐν). This consists in a cross line placed between the words, as ἡ οὐ-διάλυσις. It no longer occurs, however, in editions.

Obs. 1. The marks of reading were invented by the Alexandrian Grammarians. They do not occur in inscriptions, nor old MSS. In most of these there are no separating marks, in others a simple dot is put after each word, in others again a small space is left between the words.

Obs. 2. The Greek denominations of the points are as follows : 1. τελευτα σιγμή, a full stop, which denotes that the sense is complete. 2. μέση σιγμή, points out where breath is to be taken. 3. ὕποσιγμή, a short pause, indicating that the sense is not complete. Nicanor the Grammarian imagined eight σιγμαί.

PARTS OF SPEECH.

There are in Greek eight species of words, called Parts of Speech ; viz. Article, Noun, Adjective, Pronoun, Verb, Adverb, Preposition, and Conjunction.

Obs. The Greek Grammarians in general rank Interjections among adverbs ; improperly, however, if we consider the ad-verbal nature, which always coincides with some verb as its principle, and whose meaning it qualifies.

The first four are declined with Gender, Number, and Case.

There are three Genders: Masculine, Feminine, and Neuter. To indicate the gender, use is made of the Article; δ for the masculine, η for the feminine, and $\tau\delta$ for the neuter; as δ $\alpha\nu\eta\rho$, the man; η $\gammaυν\eta$, the woman; $\tau\delta$ $\zeta\omega\omicron\nu$, the animal.

Some nouns are both masculine and feminine, as δ , η , $\pi\acute{\alpha}\nu\nu\rho\omicron\varsigma$, the papyrus; δ , η , $\kappa\acute{o}\tau\iota\nu\omicron\varsigma$, the wild olive-tree. These are said to be of the Common Gender.

There are three Numbers, Singular, Dual, and Plural. The first speaks of one, the second of two or a pair, the third of more than two. Thus, δ $\alpha\nu\eta\rho$ the man, $\tau\acute{\omega}$ $\alpha\nu\delta\rho\epsilon$ the two men, $\omicron\iota$ $\alpha\nu\delta\rho\epsilon\varsigma$, the men.

Obs. 1. The dual, which adds to the precision of the Greek language, did not exist in the oldest state of the language, neither was it used in the Æolic dialect, nor in the Latin. It is not found in the New Testament, in the Septuagint, nor in the Fathers. It was used most frequently by the Attics, who, however, often employ the plural instead of it. In the corruption of the language by the modern Greeks, it has been omitted.

Obs. 2. The Dual, according to Buttman, is only an old and shortened form of the plural, which became gradually limited in its use to an expression of the number two. Hence, as it was not an original form, nor actually needed, the reason appears why it was so often neglected and its place supplied by the ordinary plural. vid. Buttman's Ausf. Griech. Sprachl. vol. 1. p. 135.

Obs. 3. The Attics in particular often put the article, the pronouns, and participles, in the masculine, before feminine nouns of the dual number; whence some conclude, that the dual of these parts of speech, and of the adjective, had once only one form, viz. the masculine.

There are five cases: Nominative, Genitive, Dative, Accusative, and Vocative.

Obs. 1. Cases (in Greek πτώσεις, in Latin, casus), mean fallings. The ancient Grammarians, in making the nominative a case, proceeded on the supposition that words fell as it were from the mind. Hence, when a noun fell thence in its primary form, they called it πτώσις ὀρθή, casus rectus, a straight or perpendicular case or falling, and likened its form to a perpendicular line. The variations from the first case or nominative, they considered to be the same as if this line were to fall from its perpendicular position, and make successive angles with the horizon. These they called πτώσεις πλάγαι, casus obliqui, oblique cases or sidelong fallings. Thus,

AB is the πτώσις ὀρθή; BC, BD, BE, BF, are the πτώσεις πλάγαι. Hence, Grammarians called the method of enumerating the various cases of a noun, κλίσις, declinatio, or declension, it being a sort of progressive descent from the noun's upright form, through its various declining or falling forms.

Obs. 2. The Greek language has no ablative. Its place is supplied partly by the genitive, and partly by the dative. The Latins also had anciently no ablative, but instead of it the dative was used, as in Greek. At length an ablative was formed, governed by prepositions, which ceased thenceforth to be put before the dative. One of the most recent advocates for a Greek ablative is Professor Dunbar, in his work on the Greek and Latin Languages, p. 54.

The Nominative and Vocative are frequently the same in the Singular, always in the Dual and Plural.

Obs. Even, however, where the Vocative has a separate form, the Nominative is often used for it, particularly by the Attic writers.

The Dative singular in all three declensions ends in ι. In the two first, however, the ι is subscribed.

Obs. The Dative plural properly in all three declensions ends in σιν or σι; for αις and οις are only abbreviations of the more ancient forms αισιν and οισιν.

The Genitive plural ends always in ων.

Obs. The more ancient form, however, was ων and ων, though not in all words.

The Dual has only two terminations, one for the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative, the other for the Genitive and Dative.

Neuters have the Nominative, Accusative, and Vocative, alike; and in the plural these cases end always in α. In the Dual they are the same in form as the masculine.

Obs. We are not to conclude that the ι was wanting in the dative case of the old Greek, because it is omitted in several inscriptions. In the case of those words where it was not pronounced separately, it was omitted by the Dorians and Æolians; and by the stone-cutters in all dialects. It is consonant with analogy to suppose, that the termination of the dative case was originally uniform. The very ancient datives οικοι, παιδοι, were retained even in the Doric dialect. Adverbs in ι were also compounded of datives, as αμαχι, ανοικτι, and the like. Ενταυθοι and ποι are old datives.

ARTICLE.

The Article is a word prefixed to a noun and serving to ascertain or define it.

There are commonly reckoned two Articles in Greek, the Prepositive, ὁ, ἡ, τό, and the Subjunctive, ὅς, ἥ, ὅ. The latter, however, is, in fact, a relative pronoun, and will be treated of under that head.

The Prepositive Article, or, as it should be more correctly styled, the Article, answers in general to the definite article the in English, as ὁ βασιλεὺς the king, ἡ γυνή the woman, τὸ ζῶον the animal. When no article is expressed in Greek, the English indefinite article a or an is signified, as βασιλεὺς, a king; γυνή, a woman; ζῶον, an animal.

The declension of the Article is as follows:

‘ O, ἡ, τό, The.

| Singular. | | | Dual. | | | Plural. | | |
|-------------------|----|----|-------------------------|--|--|---------------------|----|----|
| M. | F. | N. | | | | M. | F. | N. |
| N. ὁ, ἡ, τό, | | | M. F. N. | | | N. οἱ, αἱ, τὰ, | | |
| G. τοῦ, τῆς, τοῦ, | | | N. A. τῷ, τᾷ, τῷ. | | | G. τῶν, τῶν, τῶν, | | |
| D. τῷ, τῇ, τῷ, | | | G. D. τοῖν, ταῖν, τοῖν. | | | D. τοῖς, ταῖς τοῖς, | | |
| A. τόν, τήν, τό, | | | | | | A. τοὺς, τὰς, τὰ. | | |

Obs. 1. That the appellation of ὑποτακτικὸν ἄρθρον, or subjunctive article, which many of the ancient Grammarians applied to the relative ὅς, is an improper one, appears fully from a remark of Apollonius. In comparing it with the προτακτικὸν ἄρθρον, or prepositive article, he not only confesses it to differ, as being expressed by a different word, and having a different place in every sentence, but in Syntax, he adds, it is wholly different. De Syntax. Lib. 1, c. 43. Theodore Gaza makes a similar acknowledgment. Gramm. Introd. Lib. 4.

Obs. 2. There is no form of the article for the vocative; for ω is an interjection, ranked with the other interjections under adverbs; improperly, however. vid. p. 17.

Obs. 3. If the particles γε and δε are annexed to the article, it has the signification of the pronoun “this.” The declension remains the same, ὃδε, (Att. ὅδι), ἡδε (ἡδι), τόδε (τοδι); τοῦδε, τῆσδε, τοῦδε, &c.

Obs. 4. In the old language the article was τός, τή, τό; hence the plural τοι in Doric and Ionic, and the τ in the neuter and in the oblique cases. In Homer and the other old epic writers, the article, with a few exceptions, is, in fact, the same as the demonstrative pronoun, οὗτος, this. In some passages a large portion of the demonstrative force is, however, lost, and then the use of the article approaches to that of the common ὁ, ἡ, τό. In the old language, the same form τός was also used to denote the relative pronoun “which,” for which the form ὅς, arising from τός, after the general rejection of τ, was afterwards used. Hence in the Doric and Ionic writers the relative pronoun often occurs under the same form with the article; as τός for ὅς, τή for ἡ, τό for ὁ, &c.

NOUN.

Declensions of Nouns are three, answering to the first three declensions in Latin.

The first ends in α and η , feminine; and in $\alpha\varsigma$ and $\eta\varsigma$ masculine.

The second ends in $ο\varsigma$ generally masculine, and sometimes feminine; and $ο\nu$ neuter.

The third ends in α , ι , υ , neuter; ω feminine; ν , ξ , ρ , ς , ψ , of all genders, and increases in the genitive.

Obs. 1. In the two first declensions, the termination only of the nominative case is changed in the oblique cases, so that the number of syllables remains the same. In the third, on the contrary, the terminations of the other cases are affixed to the nominative, yet with some change. Hence the two first declensions are called parisyllabic, the third imparisyllabic.

Obs. 2. The old grammarians reckoned ten declensions; five simple and five contracted. The simple were, 1. $\alpha\varsigma$, $\eta\varsigma$. 2. α , η . 3. $ο\varsigma$, $ο\nu$. 4. $\omega\varsigma$, $\omega\nu$. 5. α , ι , υ , ν , ξ , ρ , ς , ψ .—Of these the four first are parisyllabic, the last is imparisyllabic. The contracted were, 1. $\eta\varsigma$, $\epsilon\varsigma$, $ο\varsigma$. 2. $\iota\varsigma$, ι . 3. $\epsilon\nu\varsigma$, $\upsilon\varsigma$, ν . 4. ω , $\omega\varsigma$. 5. $\alpha\varsigma$. These are all imparisyllabic.

Observations on the First Declension.

Obs. 1. The termination in α, which makes ας in the genitive, is generally long. Hence words in ᾱ contracted, as Ἀθηνᾶ, μνᾶ, &c. make ας. The termination in α, on the contrary, which has ης in the genitive, is always short. The vocative in α of masculines in ας is long, of those in ης short. The Dual termination in α is always long.

Obs. 2. From the genitive in ας is derived the ancient genitive of the first declension of Latin nouns, as paterfamilias, materfamilias. The Dorians said μούσας for μούσης; and the Æolians, adding an ι to it, made it μούσαις, from which the Latins, cutting off the S, have taken musai or musæ in the genitive. So also the Æolians said μέλαις for μέλας, τάλαις for τάλας. Etym. M. p. 575, l. 53. Maittaire Dial. p. 208. ed. Sturz. From the Dative in αι or α, is formed the Latin Dative in æ. The similarity between the Accusative in αν and the Latin am, is obvious.

Obs. 4. Some nouns in ας make the genitive in α as well as in ου; as Πυθαγόρας, G. — ου, and — α; πατραλοίας, G. — ου, and — α . Some keep α exclusively ; as $\Theta\omega\mu\tilde{\alpha}\varsigma$, G. $\Theta\omega\mu\tilde{\alpha}$; $\text{Βορρ}\tilde{\alpha}\varsigma$, G. $\text{Βορρ}\tilde{\alpha}$; $\Sigma\alpha\tau\alpha\tilde{\nu}\alpha\varsigma$, G. $\Sigma\alpha\tau\alpha\tilde{\nu}\alpha$; $\pi\acute{\alpha}\lambda\pi\alpha\varsigma$, G. $\pi\acute{\alpha}\lambda\pi\alpha$. The genitives in α were the Doric form. The Doric form for the genitive singular is formed by contraction from the oldest form of the genitive singular of masculines in $\alpha\varsigma$, viz. from $\alpha\omicron$. Hence it is always long. This Doric genitive, in some few words, particularly proper names, remained in common use, as $\text{Ἀνν}\tilde{\iota}\beta\alpha\varsigma$, Hannibal, G. $\tau\omicron\upsilon$ $\text{Ἀνν}\tilde{\iota}\beta\alpha$; $\Sigma\omicron\upsilon\tau\tilde{\iota}\delta\alpha\varsigma$, G. $\tau\omicron\upsilon$ $\Sigma\omicron\upsilon\tau\tilde{\iota}\delta\alpha$; $\Gamma\omega\beta\rho\tilde{\alpha}\varsigma$, G. $\tau\omicron\upsilon$ $\Gamma\omega\beta\rho\tilde{\alpha}$.

Obs. 4. The Attic form $\omicron\upsilon$ for the genitive, comes by contraction from the old Ionic form $\epsilon\omega$, which is itself deduced by some Grammarians from the still older Doric form $\alpha\omicron$. Others, however, maintain that there was anciently a double form for the genitive singular, viz. $\alpha\omicron$ and $\epsilon\omega$, each distinct from the other, and that $\alpha\omicron$ remained in Doric, while $\epsilon\omega$ was retained in Ionic. They both occur in Homer, Il. ϕ' . 85 and 86.

Obs. 5. Two opinions are likewise maintained respecting the form of the genitive plural ; one, that the genitive plural of all endings was anciently $\alpha\omega\nu$, contracted by the Dorians into the circumflexed $\tilde{\alpha}\nu$, and changed by the Ionians into $\epsilon\omega\nu$; the other, that anciently two forms for the genitive plural were used, $\alpha\omega\nu$ and $\epsilon\omega\nu$, both of which occur in Homer, and hence were both used in the old Ionic, and that the first of these was subsequently retained by the Æolo-Doric, while the latter alone remained in use in the Ionic.—From the Ionic $\epsilon\omega\nu$ comes by contraction the Attic circumflexed $\tilde{\omega}\nu$.

Obs. 6. The terminations $\eta\varsigma$ and $\alpha\varsigma$ were $\tilde{\alpha}$ in Æolic, and also in the old language of Homer, as $\Theta\upsilon\tilde{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\alpha$, $\mu\eta\tilde{\tau}\iota\epsilon\tau\alpha$, $\nu\epsilon\phi\epsilon\lambda\eta\gamma\epsilon\rho\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\alpha$, $\epsilon\delta\rho\tilde{\upsilon}\delta\pi\alpha$. Hence in Latin, cometa, planeta, poeta, from $\kappa\omicron\mu\eta\tilde{\tau}\eta\varsigma$, $\pi\lambda\alpha\tilde{\nu}\eta\tilde{\tau}\eta\varsigma$, $\pi\omicron\iota\eta\tilde{\tau}\eta\varsigma$, and hence the Latins regularly changed the Greek names in $\alpha\varsigma$ into α ; and the Greeks, on the other hand, turned the Roman names in α into $\alpha\varsigma$, as $\Sigma\tilde{\upsilon}\lambda\lambda\alpha\varsigma$, $\Gamma\tilde{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\alpha\varsigma$, $\text{Κατ}\tilde{\iota}\lambda\iota\lambda\alpha\varsigma$.

Obs. 7. Of Nouns in $\eta\varsigma$ of the first declension, the following make the Vocative in $\tilde{\alpha}$: Nouns in $\tau\eta\varsigma$; compounds in $\pi\eta\varsigma$, as $\kappa\upsilon\nu\tilde{\omega}\pi\eta\varsigma$; Nouns in $\eta\varsigma$ derived from $\mu\epsilon\tau\rho\tilde{\omega}$, $\pi\omega\lambda\tilde{\omega}$, $\tau\rho\tilde{\iota}\beta\omega$; as $\gamma\epsilon\omega\mu\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\rho\eta\varsigma$, $\mu\upsilon\rho\sigma\tilde{\omega}\lambda\eta\varsigma$, $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\omicron\tau\rho\tilde{\iota}\beta\eta\varsigma$; or denoting nations, as $\text{Π}\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\sigma\eta\varsigma$, Persian, V. $\text{Π}\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\sigma\alpha$; but $\text{Π}\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\sigma\eta\varsigma$, the name of a man, $\text{Π}\tilde{\epsilon}\rho\sigma\eta$: $\lambda\acute{\alpha}\gamma\eta\eta\varsigma$, $\mu\epsilon\tilde{\nu}\alpha\iota\chi\mu\eta\varsigma$, $\pi\upsilon\rho\alpha\iota\chi\mu\eta\varsigma$ also make α . But $\text{Α}\tilde{\iota}\theta\eta\tau\eta\varsigma$, $\alpha\iota\nu\alpha\rho\tilde{\epsilon}\tau\eta\varsigma$, $\pi\alpha\lambda\lambda\iota\lambda\alpha\mu\tilde{\pi}\epsilon\tau\eta\varsigma$ make η . Nouns in $\sigma\tau\eta\varsigma$ make α and η .

Obs. 8. With regard to the dialects it may be observed, that the Dorians in all the terminations use α long for η , as $\tau\iota\tilde{\alpha}$, $\tilde{\alpha}\varsigma$, $\tilde{\alpha}$, $\tilde{\alpha}\nu$. The Ionians, on the contrary, change α into η after a vowel or the letter ρ, as σοφίη, ης, η, ην. μάχαιρα, ης, η, ην. This, however, is never done in the Accusative plural.

Obs. 9. This declension has also some words contracted, as γῆ from γέα, (hence γεωμέτρης,) λεοντιῇ from λεοντιέη, μνᾶ from μνάα, Ἀθηνᾶ from Ἀθηνάα, Ἑρμῆς from Ἑρμέας. They are declined exactly the same as the examples which have been given under this declension; viz. those in α like the pure nouns: while in those in οη the η absorbs the vowel preceding, as ἀπλόη, ἀπληῇ.

Observations on the Second Declension.

Obs. 1. The termination in ον is neuter, that in ος for the most part masculine. Some few nouns in ος occur, which are of the feminine, and others again which are of the common gender. These are best learned by actual observation. Among the feminines in ος, however, there are several which are in reality adjectives with a feminine substantive understood, as, ἡ διάλεκτος, the dialect, (φωνή understood); ἡ διάμετρος, the diameter, (γραμμή understood); ἡ ἄτομος, the atom, (οὐσία understood); ἡ ἄνυδρος, the desert, (χώρα understood); &c.

Obs. 2. A strong analogy subsists between this and the second declension of Latin nouns; thus, the Greek nominatives in ος and ον are sometimes written in os and on in Latin as Alpheos or Alpheus; Ilion or Ilium. Again, the genitive singular of the second declension in Latin, in words of Greek origin, ended anciently in u, like the Greek ov, as Menandru, Apollodoru, afterwards Menandri, Apollodori. The dative singular of the Latin second declension was originally oi, like the Greek φ, as dominoi, ventoi, and the accusative om, as morbom, servom. In the same manner, the Greek and Latin vocative singular of this declension coincide, they ending respectively in s and e; and, as the Greeks sometimes retain ος for s in the vocative, so also do the Latins use in some words us for e, as Deus, &c. The analogy might be extended throughout the plural also. vid. Ruddimanni Instit. L. G. ed. Stalbaum. Lips. 1823. Vol. 1. p. 54.

Obs. 3. The poets change the termination ov of the genitive singular into οιο, as λόγοιο, σῦκοιο.

Obs. 4. Instead of the vocative in s the form of the nominative is sometimes used, as φίλος ὦ Μενέλαε, Il. δ', 189. This is particularly the case in the Attic dialect. The word Θεός, God, always has ος in the vocative.

Obs. 5. In the genitive and dative of the dual, the poets insert an ι, as ἵπποιιν, σταθμοῖιν, ῥομοῖιν.

Obs. 6. The Æolians and Dorians insert an ι after the ο in the accusative plural, as they do in the first declension after the α; as κάπτοις νόμοις, for κατὰ τοὺς νόμους. The poets use ος in the accusative plural when a short syllable is necessary, as τὰς δασυκέρκος ἀλώπεκας. Theocr. 5. 112. τὼς κύνθαρος, 114. τὼς λύκος, 4. 11.

Obs. 7. The name of Attic, which is commonly applied to the form in ως of this declension, is not a very proper one for two reasons. 1. Because the Attics did not decline in this way all nouns in ος; and 2. because it is by no means peculiar to the Attic dialect, but occurs also in the Ionic and Doric writers. It is, in fact, an old mode of declining, and the number of words to which it is applied is very small, and even of some of these there exist forms in ος, as ὁ λαός, the people, and ὁ λεώς; ὁ ναός, the temple, and ὁ νεώς. In the accusative singular of these nouns in ως, the Attics often omit the ν, as λαγῶ, νεῶ, ἔω, for λαγών, νεών, ἔων. In proper names this is almost always done, as Κῶ, Κέω, "Ἀθω."—The Attics often declined, after this form, words which otherwise belong to the third declension, as Μίνω from Μίνως, for Μίνωα; γέλων from γέλως, γέλωτος, for γέλωτα; ἦρων from ἦρως, for ἦρωα.—The last thing to be remarked is, that the neuter of some adjectives of this form has often ω instead of ων, as ἀγῆρω for ἀγῆρων; and that only one neuter of this form is found ending in ως, viz. τὸ χρεώς, the debt. This last must not be confounded with χρεών, an Attic form for χρεόν, the participle of χρή "it is necessary," and which occurs as indeclinable in Eurip. Herc. fur. 21. εἴτε τοῦ χρεῶν μέτα.

Obs. 8. In the contracted forms of the second declension, if the latter vowel be short, the contraction is in ου; if long, the former vowel is dropt; as the student will perceive from the declension of νόος. The compounds of νόος and ῥόος are not contracted in the neuter plural, nor in the genitive: thus we say ἐδνοα, ἐϋνόων, not ευνᾶ, ευνῶν.—Σάος is contracted thus; Sing. N. σάος, σῶς, A. σάον, σῶν: Pl. A. σάους, σάας, σῶς; σάα, σᾶ.

Obs. 9. By the later ecclesiastical writers, νοῦς was inflected after the following manner, νοῦς νοῦς, νοῦ, νοῦ.

GENITIVE.

The inflexion of words of this declension, depends chiefly upon the consonants which precede the termination ος of the genitive, and are retained through all the other cases, except some deviations in the accusative singular.

Obs. 1. The termination of the genitive singular is ος. This is subject to various rules. 1. It is in some cases annexed immediately to the nominative, as μήν, μῆν-ος, σωτήρ, σωτήρ-ος. 2. In the greater part of the nouns which belong to this declension, ος is not only added to the nominative, but the long vowel in the termination of the nominative is changed into the corresponding short one, as λιμήν, λιμέν-ος; μητήρ, μητέρ-ος. There are, however, exceptions to this remark; thus, in some words, particularly monosyllables, the long vowel is retained, as in μήν, σπλην, χήν, κλών, αἰών, &c. 3. When the nominative ends in a double consonant, ξ, (γς, κς, χς,) or ψ, (βς, πς, φς,) this is separated, and ς is changed into ος; ξ is changed into γος, κος, χος; ψ into βος, πος, φος: as αἰξ, αἰγός, φλέψ, φλεβός; ὦψ, ὦπός: 4. The nominatives in ας, εις, ους, are, for the most part, formed from the terminations, ανς, ενς, ονς, and hence have the genitive in αντος, εντος, οντος.—There are, however, many deviations from these general rules, but these are best known by actual practice.

Obs. 2. It has been conjectured that all nouns of this declension originally ended in ς, and that the genitive was formed by the insertion of ο before ς, as is still the case in a large class of words, as ῥφης, ῥφιος; μῦς, μῦος; ἥρως, ἥρωος; &c. thus γύναις, ος; γῦψ, ος; βῆχς, ος; Ἀραβς, ος; Κύκλωπς, ος. On this principle, the terminations in δς, τς, θς, νς, ρς, may be supposed to have dropped their first letter, as ἐλπς for ἐλπίδς-ιδος; χαρς for χαρτίς-ιτος; φῶς for φῶτις-ωτός; ὄρνς for ὄρνιθς-ιθος. Sometimes the preceding vowel was lengthened, as ποῦς for πόδς-οδος; κτείς for κτένς-ενός. Sometimes the last letter was dropped, as νέκταρ for νέκταρς-αρος; εἰς for εἶνς. Sometimes both letters were dropped, as σῶμα for σῶματς-ατος; μέλι for μέλιτς-ος. The analogy has been extended to the Latin third declension, and the termination is supposed to have been originally in s, and the genitive to have been formed by the insertion of i, as it is still in sus, suis; plebs, plebis; heros, herois; thus, pacs, pacis; regs, regis; lapids, lapidis; &c. Among the advocates for this theory, which was first introduced we believe by Markland, may be mentioned Dr. Murray (History of European Languages, vol. 2. p. 54.) Professor Dunbar, on the other hand, has recently published some very ingenious speculations on this subject, which go very far towards establishing the position, that the inflections of the noun, &c. in Greek and Latin, are produced by pronouns. Thus, the primitive form of the nominative of ἐλπς will be ἐλπίδ-ος, changed to ἐλπίδς to prevent its being confounded with the genitive, and softened subsequently to ἐλπίς. So ῥφς originally made ῥφι-ος in the nominative; πους, ποδ-ος, &c. The learned Professor's remarks on the other cases of the noun, as well as on the inflections of the adjective, participle, &c. are remarkable for their ingenuity and acuteness. vid Dunbar on the Greek and Latin Languages, p. 50. seqq.

ACCUSATIVE.

The accusative singular of nouns not neuter is formed from the genitive by changing ος into α; as μήν, μῆν-ος, μῆν-α.

To this, however, there are the following exceptions—1. Nouns in ις, υς, αυς, ους, whose genitive ends in ος pure, take ν for α; as ῥφς, α serpent, G. ὄφις, A. ὄφιν; bunch of grapes, G. βότρυς, A. βότρυν; ship, G. ναὺς, A. ναῦν; ox, G. βόος, A. βοῦν.—2 Barytons in ις and υς, whose genitive ends in ος impure, make both α and ν; as ἔρις, strife, G. ἔριδος, A. ἔριδα and ἔριν; helmet, G. κόρυθος, A. κόρυθα and κόρυν.

Obs. 1. Sometimes in the accusative of words in ν, the syllable να is omitted, as Ἀπόλλω for Ἀπόλλωνα; Ποσειδῶ for Ποσειδῶνα; ἐλάσσω for ἐλάσσονα.

Obs. 2. Λᾶς also makes λᾶν; Δις, Διος makes Δια; χρῶς makes χρῶα. The poets frequently use the regular termination in α.

Obs. 3. κλεις, κλειδός has both terminations. Δημοσθενής makes σα and ην. Χάρις, a Grace, has Χάριτα; χάρις, favour, χάριν. The compounds of ποδός have also both terminations, as ὠκύπους, ὠκύποδα, and ὠκύπουν.

VOCATIVE.

Frequently in the third declension, a noun, which has a vocative of its own, is found, especially among the Attic writers, to make the vocative like the nominative. The following are the general rules by which the vocative of this declension is formed: it must be left to observation, however, in particular cases, whether the vocative be actually formed according to them, or be made like the nominative.

The termination of the Vocative either, 1, shortens the long vowel of the Nominative, as Ἑκτωρ, Hector, V. Ἑκτορ; or, 2, drops the ς, as μῦς, a mouse, V. μῦ; or, 3, changes ς into ν, as τάλας, miserable, V. τάλαν.

Obs. 1. The short vowel is substituted in the vocative for the long vowel of the nominative, generally in those nouns which have ε or ο in the genitive; as μήτηρ, G. μητέρος (by syncope μητρὸς), V. μήτερ; τλήμων, G. τλήμονος, V. τλήμον; χελιδών, G. χελιδόνος, V. χελιδόν. The words which retain the long vowel in the genitive, retain it also in the vocative; as Πλάτων, G. Πλάτωνος, V. Πλάτων; Ξενοφών, G. Ξενοφώντος,

V. Ξενοφῶν; ἰητήρ, G. ἰητήρως, V. ἰητήρ. There are only three of this latter class of nouns which shorten the vowel in the vocative, viz. Ἀπόλλων, G. Ἀπόλλωνος, V. Ἀπόλλων; Ποσειδῶν, G. Ποσειδῶνος, V. Πόσειδον; σωτήρ, G. σωτήρως, V. σῶτερ.

Obs. 2. Proper names in κλης make κλεις in the vocative; for the nominative is properly — κλέης, and the vocative — κλεες, contracted — κλεις: as, Ἡρακλῆς (contracted from Ἡρακλέης), V. Ἡράκλεις, (contracted from Ἡράκλεες.)

Obs. 3. ε is dropped in the vocative of nouns whose nominative ends in ες, ις, υς, ους, and ας; as, βασιλεύς, V. βασιλεῦ; Πάρις, V. Πάρι; Τῆθύς, V. Τῆθυ; νοῦς, V. νοῦ; παῖς, V. παῖ.

Obs. 4. Words in ας and εις, which arise from ανς and ενς, and have αντος and εντος in the genitive, throw away ε and resume ν; as, Αἴας (Αἴανς), G. Αἴαντος, V. Αἴαν; Ἀτλας (Ἀτλανς), G. Ἀτλαντος, V. Ἀτλαν; τύπας (τύπανς), G. τύπαντος, V. τύπαν; χαρτεῖς (χαρτενς), G. χαρτεντος, V. χαρτεν. In proper names, however, the poets often reject the ν, as Αἴα for Αἴαν; Θόα for Θόαν.

Obs. 5. Words in ω and ως make -οι, as Σαμφώ, V. Σαμποῖ; αἰδῶς, V. αἰδοῖ.

Obs. 6. γυνή has γύναι in the vocative from the old nominative γύναιε; and ἄναξ has in the vocative ἄνα in addressing a Deity, otherwise ἄναξ.

DATIVE PLURAL.

The Dative Plural appears to have been formed originally from the Nominative plural, by annexing the syllable σι, or the vowel ι; so that in neuter nouns, instead of α, ες was considered the termination. These old forms remained in use in the Ionic, Doric, and Æolic Dialects; as, παῖς, a boy, N. P. παῖδες, D. P. παῖδεσσι; as also, χεῖρες, χεῖρεσσι; ἄνδρες, ἄνδρεσσι; πόλιες, πολίεσσι; ἱππῆες, ἱππῆεσσι; πρᾶγματα (πράγματα) πραγμάτεσι; &c.

When ες came together before σσι, a triple form arose, viz. in εεσσι, εσσι, and εσι; as, βέλεα (βέλεες) βελέεσσι, Il. ε. 622, &c. βέλεσσι, Il. α. 42. &c. βέλεσι, Od. π. 277. Again, ἔπεα (ἔπεες) ἐπέεσσι, Il. δ. 137. &c. ἔπεσσι, Od. δ. 597. &c. ἔπεσι, Π. 4. 77. In other words also, ι only was annexed to the nominative, instead of σι; as, ἀνάκτεσι, Od. δ. 556. from ἄναξ, ἀνακτες; so παίδεσι, μήνεσι; &c.

In the gradual softening and improvement of the language, various changes were introduced into these old forms, the most important of which are here enumerated.

1. The ε preceding the single σ was omitted; as δεπάεσσιν, δεπάεσιν, δέπασιν, from δέπας; θήρεσσι, θήρεσι, θηρσί, from θήρ; σωτήρεσσι, σωτήρεσι, σωτήρσι, from σωτήρ. Only one exception occurs to this rule, in the case of words which end in ης and ος, and which have in the nominative plural, εες, or its equivalent in declension εα. These reject only ε, and retain the other; as, ἀληθέεσσι, ἀληθέεσι, ἀληθέσι, from ἀληθής; τείχεα, (τείχεες) τείχεεσσι, τείχεεσι, τείχεσι, from τείχος.

2. If a consonant occurred before σι, it was changed according to the rule of euphony; that is, δ, θ, τ, ν, and ντ, were omitted before σ; as, πόδεσσι, πόδεσι, ποδί, ποσί, from πούς; δρνίθεσσι, δρνίθεσι, δρνίθσι, δρνίσι, from δρνις; φρένεσσι, φρένεσι, φρεσί, from φρήν; σώματεσσι, σώματεσι, σώματι, σώμασι, from σῶμα; πάντεσσι, πάντεσι, πάντι, πᾶσι, from πᾶς.—The quantity in the dative plural was regulated by the quantity in the rest of the oblique cases, and in the nominative plural. Hence κτεῖς, in the dative plural does not make κτείσι, but κτεσί, from the nominative plural κτένες; πούς, not πουσί, but ποσί from πόδες; so also, δαίμων, δαίμονες, δαίμοσι; δρυς, δρυες, δρυσί. Again, if, after the rejection of the consonants ντ before σι, the foregoing syllable is short, then the doubtful vowels α, ι, υ, become long, as πᾶσι, γυγᾶσι, ξευγνῦσι, or ας is changed in words in αῦς into αυ; as γραῦς, γρᾶς, γραυσί; and from ε and ο, are made the diphthongs ει and ου; as, τυφθέντες, (τυφθέντεσσι, τυφθέντεσι, τυφθέντι,) τυφθεῖσι; διδόντες, (διδόντεσσι, διδόντεσι, διδόντι,) διδούσι. In words which end in εως, however, the ε becomes ευ; as, ἱππέως, ἱππέεσσι, ἱππέεσι, ἱππέσι, ἱππεῦσι; Δωριέως, Δωριεῦσι; βασιλέως, βασιλεῦσι, &c.

3. When β, π, φ, or γ, κ, χ, precede the termination σι, they are changed, together with the σ which follows, into the double consonants ψ and ξ; as, Ἀραβες, Ἀράβεσι, Ἀραψι; αἶγες, αἶγεσι, αἶξι; μέροπες, μερόπεσι, μερόψι; κόρακες, κοράκεσι, κόραξι; τρίχες, τρίχεσι, θριξί.

4. Of those which reject ε before σι, some change the ε mute into the more sonorous α; as πατέρες, (πατέρεσι, by syncope πατρείσι,) changed to πατράσι; ἄνδρες, (ἄνδρεσσι, ἄνδρείσι,) changed to ἀνδράσι; so also, μητράσι; θυγατράσι; ἀστράσι; &c.

Obs. 5. The theory for forming the dative plural, as we have here given it, is stated by Matthiæ in his Grammar, and third declension, in the plural, after the second ; as, γερόνοις adopted by nearly all the philologists of the day. Dunbar's theory, however, (vid. page 31. Obs. 2. extr.) is directly in opposition. "The formation of the dative plural of Greek nouns," observes the Professor, "appears to have been effected by a double dative singular. Thus, the dative singular of λόγος was λόγῳ. If we add to it another form, viz. ἑῷ, in which the aspirate was pronounced as a sigma, we shall have λογόισι, and then, by the omission of one of the iotas, λόγοισι, the Ionic form; the Attic became λόγοις by dropping the last vowel. The same process took place in the formation of the dative plural of the third declension. Thus ἔπος has in the dative singular ἔπει. Let us subjoin the dative εῖ, the same as the Latin ei by the omission of the sigma, and we have ἔπει-εῖ; then, by dropping the iota, ἔπε-εῖ, a form which occurs often in Homer; and again, by omitting one of the epsilons, ἔπεσι, the common dative plural. * ὄρνις had originally in the dative singular ὄρνιθει; dat. plur. ὄρνιθει-εῖ, then ὄρνιθέ-εῖ, ὄρνιθεσι, ὄρνιθσι, and lastly ὄρνισι. In such examples as λέων, the dative singular was λεοντεῖ; the dat. plur. λεον-τε-εῖ, λεοντεσι, λεοντισι, λεονσι, and last of all, λεονσι, by the well-known conversion of the ν into a vowel, to form with the ο a proper diphthong. In some nouns, such as βασιλεὺς and βοῦς, the subjunctive vowel of the diphthong, which disappears in the formation of the genitive and dative, is said to be resumed in the dative plural. The reason seems to be this: The vowel υ, though omitted in writing, was evidently used in pronunciation, as in the Latin bovis: so also in Greek βόφος, dative βόφει; in the dative plural βοφέ-εῖ, and hence βοεσι. By making the usual omissions and contractions, the dative became in the common dialect βοῦσι." Dunbar on the Greek and Latin Languages, p. 92. seqq.

CONTRACTED DECLENSION

Contracts of the First Declension

In the First Declension εα is contracted into ῆ; as, N. γέα, γῆ, the earth; G. γέας, γῆς; D. γεᾶ, γῆ; A. γέαν, γῆν; V. γέα, γῆ, &c.; and εας is contracted into ῆς, as N. Ἑρμέας, Ἑρμῆς, Mercury; G. Ἑρμέου, Ἑρμοῦ; D. Ἑρμέα, Ἑρμῆ, &c.

Ρεα, and all other terminations, drop the former vowel; as, N. ἐρεα, ἐρᾶ, the earth; G. ἐρέας, ἐρᾶς, &c.; N. ἀπλόη, ἀπλῇ, simplicity; G. ἀπλόης, ἀπλῆς, &c.

Contracts of the Second Declension.

In the Second Declension, if the latter vowel is short, the contraction is in ου; if long, the former vowel is dropt; as, N. νόος, νοῦς, the mind; G. νόου, νοῦ; D. νόω, νοῶ, &c.

Contracts of the Third Declension.

1. Nouns in υς, υος, have only two contractions, viz. υες and υας into υς: thus, ὁ βοτρυς, the bunch of grapes.

2. Nouns in ις and ι have three contractions, viz. εἷ into ει, εες and εας into εις; those in ις have also the Attic form in the genitive singular, and genitive and dative dual; viz. εως and ειων: those in ι follow the common dialect, and have εος and εοιν: thus, ὁ ὄφις, the serpent.

3. Nouns in ως and ω have three contractions, viz. οος into οῦς, οῖ, into οῖ, and οα into ω : thus,

ἡ αἰδώς, the modesty.

| Singular. | Dual. | Plural. |
|-----------------|---------------------------------|------------|

4. Nouns in εως, and υς, make in the Genitive εως, and have four contractions, viz. εῖ into ει, εε into η, εες and εας into εις : but those in υς alone contract the genitive and dative dual; thus, ὁ βασιλεύς, the king.

| Singular. | Dual. | Plural. |

| N. βασιλεύς, | N. A. V. βασιλες, ἦ, G. D. βασιλέοιν. | N. βασιλεες, εἶς, |

| | | V. πέλεκεες, εἷς. |

5. Neuters in υ make the Nominative Accusative and Vocative Plural in εα, η, and also contract εῖ into ει, and εε into η; they have also the common genitive, in εος; thus, τὸ ἄστυ, the city.

| Singular. | Dual. | Plural. |
|-------------------|-----------------|--------------|

6. Nouns in ης, ες, and ος, are contracted in every case except in the Nominative and Vocative Singular, and Dative Plural; thus, ἡ τριήρης, the trireme.

| A. τεῖχος, V. τεῖχος. | | A. τεῖχσα, η, |
| | | V. τεῖχσα, η. |

Proper names in κλέης have a double contraction, which, however, is confined in general to the Dative ; as,

*Remarks on some of the Contracted Forms of the Third Declension.*Nouns in ης and ι.

Obs. 1. The dative singular very frequently occurs in Ionic writers, with a single ι, as μήτι for μήτεϊ, Il. ψ'. 315. πόλι for πολεῖ, Herod. 1, 105. δυνάμι for δυνάμεϊ, Herod. 2, 102. ὄψ for ὄψεϊ, Herod. 2, 141, &c. Besides these, the form εῖ is used by the Ionians, as πόσει, πόλει, &c. In Homer and others, the contracted form ει is one of very common occurrence.

Obs. 2. Instead of the accusative in ιν, the form α also occurs, as πόληα, Hesiod. Scut. 105.—The contracted form in the plural is frequent in Homer. In the accusative he has the contraction in ις. This contraction in ις was regular in Attic in the words οἷς and φοῖς, as τάς οἷς ; τούς φοῖς for φοῖδας ; so also δρνις for δρνιθας, Soph. Oed. T. 966.

Nouns in ευς.

Obs. 1. The accusative singular in ῃ of nouns in ευς is of rare occurrence. The nominative plural of the same class of nouns was contracted by the earlier Attic writers into ῆς, as βασιλῆς. The accusative plural, according to the observation of the old Grammarians, was in the genuine Attic dialect — εας, not — εῖς, and yet the form — εῖς frequently occurs. If a vowel preceded the termination, the Attics contracted εας into ᾱς ; as, ἀγυῖᾱς for ἀγυιέας ; χοᾱς for χοέας. The Ionians make uniformly βασιλῆος, βασιλῆϊ, βασιλῆα, βασιλῆας, &c.

Obs. 2. Words which have a vowel before the termination ευς, contract in the genitive έως into ῶς ; as Πειραιεύς, Πειραιέως, contracted Πειραιῶς ; χοεύς, χοέως, contracted χοῶς.

Nouns in ης, ες, and ος.

Obs. 1. Like τριήρης, are declined also proper names which are not patronymics ; as, ὁ Δημοσθένης ; yet these have sometimes the accusative according to the first declension, as τὸν Σωκράτην, τὸν Ἀντισθένην, τὸν Ἀριστοφάνην.

Obs. 2. The Dorians and Ionians, in the genitive, use the contraction ευς for ους ; as, Ἀριστοφάνευς, Εὐμήδευς, Χεῖλεις from χεῖλος, ὄρευς from ὄρος, θέρεις from θέρος.

Obs. 3. The Æolians in the genitive and vocative omit ς, as Σωκράτου, Σώκρατε.

Neuters in ας pure and ρας.

Obs. 1. The declension of κέρας is given according to the usual form ; it admits of a doubt, however, whether this mode of inflexion be the true one. The Attics said κέρας, κέρατος, as they did φρέας, φρέατος, and it certainly does not seem correct to form from it, by syncope, κέρᾱος with a short penult. The opinion of Dr. Maltby appears to be a more correct one, that κέρας forms only κέρατος in the genitive ; and that κέρᾱος comes from κέρας κέρᾱος, not from κέρας κέρατος. Blomfield suggests, that, wherever κέρᾱος and κέρᾱων occur in Homer, we should probably read, κέρσεος and κέρσων. These are, in fact, true Ionic forms ; κέρσεος occurs in Herod. 6. 111. whence we have κέρσα, id. 2. 38. 4. 191. and κέρσων is found, id. 4. 183.

The reason why κρας has the long penult in the genitive and dative singular, and nominative, genitive, and accusative dual and plural, is that these cases are in reality contracted forms. Thus κράτιος from κράατιος, κράτι from κράατι, &c. Vid. Thes. Græc. Poes. ed. Maltby. Observ. p. lxxx. Blomfield's Remarks on Matthiæ's Gr. Gr. p. xxxix. Brunck, ad Eurip. Bacch. 909. and Brasse's Greek Gradus, s. v.

Obs. 2. According to the examples given, the Ionians declined also the substantives γόνυ, or γούνυ, and δόρυ. Thus. N. τὸ γόνυ and γούνυ, G. τοῦ γούνατος and γουνός, D. τῷ γούνατι, Pl. N. τὰ γούνατα and γούνα, G. τῶν γουνάτων and γούνων, &c. So N. τὸ δόρυ, G. τοῦ δουρός and δορός; D. τῷ δουρί and δορί, Pl. N. τὰ δούρα, G. τῶν δούρων, D. τοῖς δούρασι and δούρεσσι, &c.

Remarks on ἀνήρ, πατήρ, &c.

Obs. 1. The principle on which δ is inserted in the oblique case of ἀνήρ, has already been explained.

Obs. 2. The particular most worthy the student's attention is this; that, μήτηρ, πατήρ, and γαστήρ, form the accusative singular without contraction; as μητέρα, πατέρα, γαστέρα. This is done in the case of μήτηρ, in order to prevent its being confounded with μήτρα, ας, a womb; it is done in like manner in πατήρ, to prevent its being confounded with πάτρα, ας, a paternal land; and in γαστήρ, to prevent its being confounded with γάστρα, ας, the bottom of a vessel. It should be remembered, also, that γαστήρ makes in the dative plural, γαστήρσι, not γαστράσι.

Remarks on the noun ναῦς.

Obs. 1. The Doric form was νᾶς, the oblique cases of which occur in the Attic poets also, not only in the chorusses but elsewhere; as ναός, Eurip. Hec. 1253. ναί, Iphig. T. 891, (in the chorus). νᾶες, Iphig. A. 242. (in the chorus). The accusative νᾶας occurs in Theocr. 7. 152 : 22. 17.

Obs. 2. The Hellenistic writers use ναᾶ in the accusative singular, and ναᾶς in the accusative plural.

Obs. 3. In like manner with ναῦς is declined ἡ γράυς, the old woman, (Ion. γρηῦς) G. τῆς γραός, D. τῇ γραί, A. τὴν γραῦν, V. γραῦ, (Ion. γρηῦ), Pl. N. αἱ γράες and γρηες, (not αἱ γραῦς), G. τῶν γραῶν, D. ταῖς γραυσί, A. τὰς γραῦς. Yet of this in general only the nominative sing. accusative sing. and plural, and the genitive plural are used: in the rest of the cases γραῖα is more common.

So also, ἡ βοῦς, G. τῆς βοός, D. τῇ βοτ, A. τὴν βοῦν, (not βόα). Pl. N. αἱ βόες (not βοῦς), G. τῶν βοῶν, D. ταῖς βουσί, A. τὰς βοῦς, and βόας.

GENERAL REMARKS.

In the genitive and dative singular and plural, the poets annex the syllable φι, or (with ν ἑφελκυστικόν) φιν; this the Grammarians term φι paragogicum. When this is done, if the substantive end in η, the ς of the genitive is omitted; if the substantive end in ος or ον, the ο alone remains before φι, while in those in ος, gen. εος, ους, the form ες, or ευς (the Ionic contraction from εος) enters; as, ἐξ εὐνῆφι, for ἐξ εὐνῆς; φρήτηρ, ης, D. φρήτηρφιν, for φρήτηρ; ἀπὸ στρατόφιν, for ἀπὸ στρατὸν; θεόφιν, Dat. for θεῶ; ἐξ ἐρέβεοσφιν, for ἐξ ἐρέβους; ἀπὸ στήθεσφι, for ἀπὸ στήθους; κλισίησφι, Dat. for κλισίαις; σὺν ὄχεσφι, for σὺν ὄχεσι; παρὰ ναῦφιν, for παρὰ ναῦσιν.

The termination θεν appears to be an appendage of a similar nature, but is found only in the genitive; ἐξ ἀλόθεν, for ἐξ ἀλὺς. In the same manner θεν is annexed to the genitive of the pronouns, ἐγῶ, σύ, οὗ; as ἐμέθεν (from ἐμέο), σέθεν (σέο), ἐθεν (ἐό). Afterwards these forms of nouns were used as adverbs; as Ἀθήνηθεν, Θήβηθεν.

IRREGULAR NOUNS.

1. Some nouns have different genders in the singular and plural.

Obs. 1. Thus, ὁ δίφρος, the chariot-seat, in the plural τὰ δίφρα; ὁ θεσμός, the decree, plural τὰ θεσμά; ἡ κέλευθος, the way, plural τὰ κέλευθα; ὁ κύκλος, the circle, plural τὰ κύκλα; ὁ λύχνος, the lamp, plural τὰ λύχνα; ὁ σῖτος, the corn, plural τὰ σῖτα; ὁ σταθμός, the station, plural τὰ σταθμά; ὁ Τάρταρος, Tartarus, plural τὰ Τάρταρα.

Obs. 2. In the substantives above enumerated, the singular does not occur as neuter. But the following, which are considered as belonging to this class, are found neuter in the singular; as, τὰ νῶτα from τὸ νῶτον; τὰ ῥετμά from τὸ ῥετμόν; τὰ ζυγά from τὸ ζυγόν.

Obs. 3. The following nouns, neuter in the plural, and masculine in the singular, are of more rare occurrence; as τὰ δρυμά, the forests, from ὁ δρυμός; τὰ δάκτυλα, the fingers, from ὁ δάκτυλος; τὰ τράχηλα, the necks, from ὁ τράχηλος; τὰ ῥύπα, the filth, from ὁ ῥυπος.

2. Some have different declensions.

Obs. 1. Greek words, in which double forms are used together in one case, are said to be redundant (abundantia). Generally, however, these double forms are not both peculiar to one dialect, but each to a different one.

Obs. 2. Examples follow; as ὁ ταός, the peacock; Attic ταώς, ταώ; and ταών, ταῶνος; λαγός, a hare, Ionic λαγῶς, Attic λαγώς; so also ναός, a temple, Attic νεώς; λαός, a people, Attic λεώς; in like manner δάκρυ and δάκρυον both occur in Homer, from the first comes δάκρυοις (Eurip. Iph. A. 1175.) and from the latter δάκρυσι (id. Troad. 315.) Instead also of δένδρον, ου, another form occurs, δένδρος, εος, whence δένδρει, δένδρεα, δένδρεων, δένδρεσι.

Obs. 3. The Attics particularly declined nouns in ὦν, ὄνος, in ὦ, οῦς; as χελιδώ, οῦς, for χελιδών, ὄνος; ἀηδῶ, οῦς, for ἀηδών, ὄνος. This also takes place in the Ionic dialect.

Obs. 4. A word which is almost universally redundant is χρώς, χρωτός. Another from χροῦς occurs, which is declined like βοῦς, (vid. page 44.) and hence we have in the genitive χρωτός and χροός, dative χρωτί and χροτί, accusative χρώτα and χροά. The dative has still a third form χροῖ, which is used mostly in prose. Adjectives compounded of χροῦς have also, among the Attics, usually the termination χρως, as λευκοχρως.

Obs. 5. Some words in the plural are derived from other forms different from those of the singular; as πρεσβυτής, which has οἱ πρέσβεις in the plural, from πρέσβυς, or πρέσβις. Frequently a new form of the nominative arises from an oblique case of the old form, as φύλαξ, φύλακος; and φύλακος, ου; μάρτυς, μάρτυρος; and μάρτυρος, ου; διάκτωρ, διάκτορος; and διάκτορος, ου. So from the accusative Δημητέρα, a new nominative Δημήτρα, ας, arose.

3. Some are termed anomalous.

Obs. Those are called anomalous or irregular nouns, whose oblique cases pre-suppose a nominative different from that in use, without having double forms in the rest of the cases; thus, γυνή, γυναικός, as from γύναιξ; γόνυ, γόνατος, as from γόνας; δόρυ, δόρατος, as from δόρας; ὕδωρ, ὕδατος, as from ὕδας. So also Ζεύς, Δίος or Ζηνός, as from Δίς or Ζήν. There are commonly reckoned ten different forms for the nominative Ζεύς, viz. Ζεύς, Βδευς, Δευς, Δίς, Δήν, Δάν, Ζής, Ζήν, Ζάς, Ζάν. These, however, differ only in dialect, and may be reduced to two, Δίς and Ζήν, and yet even these nominatives are obsolete.

4. Some double forms of cases pre-suppose only one form of the nominative, which, however, are declined according to two different declensions, or different kinds of one declension. These are called Heteroclita. In this manner are declined,

1. After the first and third declension, substantives in ης, yet only in the accusative and vocative ; thus, Σωκράτης of the third declension, makes Σωκράτην after the first, and Σωκράτη after the third. So also Ἀριστοφάνην and Ἀριστοφάνη, from Ἀριστοφάνης ; and, in the vocative, Στρεψιάδῃ after the first, and Στρεψιάδης after the third, from Στρεψιάδης. The Ionians especially declined different nouns of the first declension after the third ; as δεσπότηα, and δεσπότηας, for δεσπότην, δεσπότηας, from δεσπότης : so also κυβερνήτεα for κυβερνήτην ; Πέρσεα for Πέρσην.

2. Sometimes a noun is declined after different forms of the same declension ; as ἔγγελυς, which was declined by the Attics in the singular, ἔγγελυος, ἔγγελυι, &c. and in the plural ἔγγέλεις ἔγγελέων.

Obs. Other changes are not founded upon the circumstance of the form of the nominative being capable of a double inflexion. The number also of obsolete forms of nominatives would be too much increased, if, for every deviation, another form, grown into disuse, should be referred to. It seems more probable, that the proper termination of the case was sometimes changed into the termination of the same case in another declension, which might easily take place in a language not as yet perfectly established and fixed. This change is called μεταπλάσμις κλίσεως, a transformation of the termination of the case. The following are the principal kinds of Metaplasasm.

1. Proper names in —κλος are often declined like those in —κλῆς, and again those in —κλῆς like those in —κλος.

2. Some nouns of the first and second declension have, particularly in the dative and accusative singular, and in the genitive also, the termination of the third declension ; thus we find ἄϊδος, ἄϊδι, in Homer, for αἰδου, αἰδῇ ; so also ἀλκί for ἀλκῇ κλαδί for κλάδι, &c.

3. In the same manner the plural of different neuters in ον, particularly the dative, is formed after the third declension, as ἀνδραπόδεσσι for ἀνδραπόδοις, πρόβασι for προβάτοις, προσώπατα and προσώπασι for πρόσωπα and πρόσωποις.

4. The Ætolians, an Æolic tribe, formed the nouns of the third declension, in the plural, after the second ; as, γερόντοις for γέρονσι, from γέρων ; παθημάτοις for παθήμασι, from παθήμα ; as the Latins also said, epigrammatis, dilemmatis, for epigrammatibus, dilemmatibus.

5. Some nouns are indeclinable.

Obs. These are, 1. Names of letters, as τὸ ἄλφα, τοῦ ἄλφα, τῷ ἄλφα, &c. 2. The cardinal numbers from πέντε to ἐκατὸν. 3. Poetic nouns which have lost the last syllable by apocope, τὸ δῶ for δῶμα, τὸ κᾶρα for κάρηνον. 4. Foreign names which are not susceptible of Greek inflexions, as ὁ Ἀβραάμ, τοῦ Ἀβραάμ, &c.

6. Some are defective in the number of their cases.

Obs. These are, 1. Monoptots, as, τὸ ὄφελος, and το ἥδος, advantage, only used as nominatives ; μᾶλης genitive of μᾶλη for μασάλη, a shoulder, which case is alone in use ; δῶς, a house, used only in the nominative ; ὦ τάν, friend, used only in the vocative ; ὦ πόποι, O Gods, used only in the same case. 2. Diptots, as, ὄναρ, a vision, ὄπαρ, a real appearance, used only in the nominative and accusative. λῆς, a lion, used only in the nominative, and in the accusative λῆν or λῆνα. 3. Triptots, as, G. ἀλλήλων, D. ἀλλήλοις, αἰς, οἰς, A. ἀλλήλους, ας, α. So also N. Dual ἄμφω, G. and D. ἀμφοῖν.

7. Some have no singular, others no plural.

Obs. The following want the singular. 1. Such as in their nature, cannot well occur in more than one number ; as, τὰ ἔγκυα, the entrails, αἱ ἐτήσιαι, the Etesian winds. 2. Names of Festivals, as τὰ Διονύσια, the feast of Bacchus. 3. Names of Cities, as Ἀθῆναι, Athens. The following want the plural, viz. ἅλς, salt, γῆ, earth, πῦρ, fire, and many others, known by the sense.

PATRONYMICS.

Patronymics are substantives which signify a son or a daughter. They are derived from the proper name of the father, and sometimes also, from that of the mother. The rules for their formation follow.

RULE 1. From nouns in ος of the second declension come the forms of patronymics in ιδης and ων; as from Κρόνος come Κρονίδης and Κρονίων, the son of Kronos, i. e. Jupiter. So also, Κοδριδης, Τανταλιδης, Ατακιδης, from Κόδρος, Τάνταλος, Ατακος. The form in ων was peculiar to the Ionians.

RULE 2. From nouns in ιος comes the form ιάδης; as, Ἥλιος, Ἡλιάδης; Ἄγνιος, Ἀγνιάδης; Ἀσκληπίος, Ἀσκληπιάδης. So also, Λαερτιάδης from Λαέρτιος for Λαέρτης. A deviation from this rule is Ἀλκείδης from Ἀλκαῖος, instead of which the form Ἀλκένυς appears to have been also used. Pindar has Ἀλκαίδης. (Ol. 6. 115.)

RULE 3. From nouns in ης and ας, of the first declension, comes the form in άδης; as, Ἰππότης, Ἰπποιάδης; Ἀλεύας, Ἀλευάδης. From nouns in ας the Æolians formed patronymics in άδιος; as Υἱόέδιος, from Υἱόας.

RULE 4. In nouns of the third declension, the genitive serves as the basis of the derivation. If the penultima of the genitive be short, the patronymic from ος is formed in ιδης; as, Ἀγαμέμνων, Ἀγαμέμνονος, Ἀγαμεμνονιδης; Ἀητώ, Ἀητός, Ἀητοΐδης: if it be long, then in ιάδης, as Ἀμφιτρώων, Ἀμφιτρώωνος, Ἀμφιτρωωνιάδης; Τελαμών, Τελαμώνος, Τελαμωνιάδης.

Obs. 1. Hence nouns in εύς, which in the Ionic have the genitive in ῆος, give rise to the patronymic form ῆιάδης, as Πηλεύς, Πηλῆος, Πηληϊάδης; Περσεύς, Περσῆος, Περσηϊάδης. But since these have also the termination έως in the genitive, which continued the prevailing one in the Attic and in the common dialect, hence arose from Περσεύς Περσέως, Περσειδης. So also Ἀτρεΐδης, from Ἀτρεύς.

Obs. 2. The origin of the different forms in ιδης and ιάδης, was probably owing to the cultivation of the Greek language by means of the Hexameter verse, since neither Ἀγαμεμνόνι-αδης, nor Τελαμῶνιδης could enter into that measure.

Obs. 3. The forms in ιδης, ιονιδης, and ιωνιάδης, are often interchanged. The reason is, that of the proper names in ος another form in ων was used, which is properly the patronymic of the first.

Obs. 4. Instead of the form in ιάδης, the form in ιδης also is used, particularly in Attic, as Ἀιαντίδαι, Ἀλκμαίωνιδαι, Ἀσονίδαι.

Obs. 5. A Doric form of patronymics was in ώνδας, as Ἐπαμυνώνδας.

RULE 6. Patronymics of the female sex have the following terminations. 1. ιάς and ις; as Ἀητωΐάς, and Ἀητωΐς, from Ἀητώ: so also Βρισηΐς from Βρισεύς, ῆος; Νηρηΐς from Νηρεύς, ῆος; Ἀτλαντίς from Ἄτλας, αντος. 2. In ινη and ώνη; the latter when the primitive has ι or υ before the termination ος or ων; as Ἀκρισιος, Ἀκρισιώνη; Ἡλεκτρώων, Ἡλεκτρούνη; the former when the primitive has a consonant before the termination ος or ευς, as Ἀδρηστιος, Ἀδρηστινή; Ῥικεανός, Ῥικεανή; Νηρεύς, Νηρινή.

Obs. Some nouns have the form only of patronymics without the signification, as Μιλτιάδης, Ἀριστείδης, Εὐριπίδης, Σίμωνίδης. Patronymics are also often interchanged with their primitives: thus, sometimes, Ἀλεξανδρίδης for Ἀλέξανδρος; Σίμωνίδης for Σίμων; Ἀμφικτρώων for Ἀμφικτυωνιάδης.

ADJECTIVES.

Adjectives are declined like substantives.

Declensions of Adjectives are three:

The first of three terminations,

The second of two;

The third of one.

1. Adjectives of three terminations end in

DECLENSION OF COMPARATIVES.

Comparatives are declined in the same manner with σώφρων, except that in the Accusative singular, and the Nominative Accusative and Vocative plural, they syncopate and contract : thus,

Adjectives of one termination are the Cardinal numbers from πέντε to έκατόν, both inclusive. Others are Masculine and Feminine only; such are, 1. Adjectives compounded with substantives which remain unchanged, as μακρόχειρ, αὐτόχειρ, εὔριν, μακραίων, μακραύχην, from χείρ, ρίν, αἰών, and αὐχήν; except those compounded with ποῦς and πόλις. 2. Those derived from πατήρ and μήτηρ; as ἀπάτωρ, ἀμήτωρ, ὁμομήτωρ. 3. Adjectives in ης, ητος, and ως, ωτος; as ἀδμής, ἡμιθνής, ἄγνής, ἄγνώς. 4. Adjectives ending in ξ, or ψ; as ἥλιξ, μώνυξ, αἰγίλιψ, αἴθιοψ. 5. Adjectives in ας, αδος, and ις, ιδος; as ὁ, ἡ, φυγὰς; ὁ, ἡ, ἀναλκίς. The greater number, however, are found only with substantives of the feminine gender.

IRREGULAR ADJECTIVES.

Μέγας and πολύς have only the Nominative Accusative and Vocative Masculine and Neuter of the Singular, and borrow the other cases from μεγάλος, η, ον, and πολλός, ἡ, όν: thus,

Μέγας, great.

Singular.

N. *ΜΕΓΑΣ, μεγάλη, ΜΕΓΑ,*G. *μεγάλου, ης, ου,*D. *μεγάλῳ, η, φ,*A. *ΜΕΓΑΝ, μεγάλην, ΜΕΓΑ,*V. ΜΕΓΑ, μεγάλη, ΜΕΓΑ.

*Remarks on Adjectives of Three Terminations.*1. Termination in ος.

Obs. 1. Adjectives in ος pure, and ρος, have the feminine in η in the Ionic dialect; thus, φίλιος, α, ον, in Attic, becomes φίλιος, η, ον, in Ionic; and μακρός, α, ον, in Attic, is μακρὸς, η, ον, in Ionic.

Obs. 2. Some Adjectives in σος, expressing a substance or material, are contracted into ους; thus,

| | | | |
|--------|-----------|----------|--------------|
| N. | χρύσεος, | χρυσέα, | χρυσέον, |
| Contr. | χρυσουῖς, | χρυσῇ, | χρυσουῖν, |
| G. | χρυσέον, | χρυσέας, | χρυσέου, |
| Contr. | χρυσουῖ, | χρυσυῆς, | χρυσουῖ, &c. |

When another vowel or the letter ρ precedes the termination ος, the feminine is contracted not into η, but into α, as, ἐρέσος, woollen, contr. ἐρεοῦς, ἐρεᾶ, ἐρεοῦν.

ἀργύρος, silver, contr. ἀργυροῦς, ἀργυρεᾶ, ἀργυροῦν.

The neuter plural, however, always has α; as τὰ χρύσεα, contracted χρυσᾶ; τὰ ἀργύρεα, contracted ἀργυρᾶ.

Obs. 3. Adjectives in όος make η in the feminine, as ὄγδοος, ὄγδοη, ὄγδοον, the eighth; θόος, θοή, θόον, swift. But if ε precede, they have α; as ἀθρόος, ἀθρόα, ἀθρόον, frequent; ἀθροῦς, noiseless, is a different form, viz. ὁ, ἡ, ἀθροῦς, τὸ ἀθροῦν.

Obs. 4. Some adjectives in ὅος are contracted into οῦς: as ἀπλόος, διπλόος, &c. These uniformly contract οη into ῃ, and οα into ᾱ: thus,

| | M. | F. | N. |
|----------|-----------|-----------|-----------|
| Sing. N. | ἀπλόος, } | ἀπλόη, } | ἀπλόον, } |
| Contr. | ἀπλοῦς, } | ἀπλῃ, } | ἀπλοῦν. } |
| Pl. N. | ἀπλόοι, } | ἀπλόαι, } | ἀπλόα, } |
| Contr. | ἀπλοῖ, } | ἀπλαῖ, } | ἀπλᾱ. } |

The compounds of πλοῦς, navigation, form a class of adjectives totally distinct, and must not be confounded with the numerical adjectives in πλοῦς. Thus, ὁ, ἡ, ἀπλους, unnavigable; ὁ, ἡ, εὐπλους, easy to sail into, &c. These are adjectives of two terminations, and form the neuter singular in ουν, and the neuter plural in οα.

2. Terminations in εῖς and οὐς.

Obs. 1. Most of the adjectives of this termination have, in the penultima, the vowels, η, ο, ω; as τιμήεις, αἵματόεις, κητώεις; even χαρεῖς must have arisen from χαριτόεις.

Obs. 2. The terminations ῃεις and ὀεις, are often contracted; viz. ῃεις, ῃεσσα, ῃεν, into ῃς, ῃσσα, ῃν, and ὀεις, ὀεσσα, ὀεν, into οῦς, οῦσσα, οῦν: thus,

N. τιμῆς, τιμῆσσα, τιμῆν; G. τιμῆντος, τιμῆσσης, &c. from τιμήεις, ῃεσσα, ῃεν.

N. μελιτοῦς, μελιτοῦσσα, μελιτοῦν; G. μελιτοῦντος, μελιτοῦσσης, &c. from μελιτόεις, ὀεσσα, ὀεν.

Obs. 3. πλακοῦς is a contracted form from πλακοῖς. When it signifies a flat cake, it has ἄριος understood. vid. Bos. El-lips. Gr.

3. Terminations in υς, εἶα, υ.

Obs. 1. The termination of the feminine εἶα is, in Ionic, εα; as δξέα, ἡδέα, for δξεῖα, ἡδεῖα:—some adjectives of this termination, have in the accusative, εα for υν; as εὐθέα, for εὐθύν; εὐρέα, for εὐρύν.

Obs. 2. In the accusative plural, the uncontracted form is as much used in Attic as the contracted; as τοὺς ἡμίσεας, Xen. Cyrop. 2. Later Greek writers contract the genitive also, as ἐξ ἡμισους, Dio Chrysost. 7. p. 99. The neuter plural is very rarely contracted. We have, however, in Theophrastus, Chact. 2. ἡμισα.

Obs. 3. These adjectives in υς are also sometimes used as common ; as θῆλυς ἐέρση, Od. ε, 467. ἡδὺς αὔτιμή, Od. μ', 369 τὰς ἡμισέας (for ἡμισείας) τῶν νεῶν, Thucyd. 8. 8. ἡμισεος ἡμέρας, id. 4. 104.

Obs. 4. In πρέσβυς, instead of the obsolete πρέσβεια, the feminine in use is πρέσβειρα and πρέσβα. 'The former occurs, Hom. H. in Ven. 32. Eurip. Iphig. T. 963. Aristoph. Acharn. 883. The latter, Il. ε, 721, and elsewhere.

4. Termination in ων.

Obs. ῶν, ῶσα, ῶν ; and ῶν, οῦσα, οῦν ; are both contracted forms : thus, τιμάων contracted τιμῶν, τιμαύουσα contr. τιμῶσα, τιμάον contr. τιμῶν : this is the form of the present participle of contracted verbs. And again, τυπέων the eldest form, Ionic τυπέων, Attic τυποῦν. Feminine τυπέσουσα, τυπέουσα, τυποῦσα, Neuter τυπέσον, τυπέον, τυποῦν, &c. This is the form of what is called the second future participle, which will be treated of more at large under the verb.

5. Termination in ως.

Obs. Some cite πλέως, πλέα, πλέων, as an adjective in ως of three terminations ; πλέα, however, does not come from πλέως, but from the old πλέος, whence came πλέον, Eurip. Alcest. 730. and instead of which Homer and Hesiod have πλεῖος. The same remark applies to the feminine and neuter plural, πλέαι and πλέα.

Remarks on Adjectives of Two Terminations.

1. Termination in ος.

Obs. 1. To this class belong particularly compound adjectives, as, ὁ, ἡ, ἀθάνατος ; ὁ, ἡ, ἀκόλαστος, &c. But not adjectives which are derived from compound words ; as ἐπιδεικτικός, ἡ, ὁν, from ἐπιδείκνυμι ; εὐδαιμονικός, ἡ, ὁν, from εὐδαίμων.

Obs. 2. The Grammarians call it an Attic usage, when an adjective is found in ος of two terminations. It is indeed a peculiar feature of that dialect, although not exclusively confined to it, for the usage occurs also in Homer.

2. Termination in ης.

Obs. 1. From μουνογενής comes the feminine μουνογένεια in the Poets ; so also ἡριγένεια, an epithet of Αὔρα ; Κυπρογένει- νεια, of Venus; Τριτογένεια, of Minerva. Ἡριγενής as feminine occurs in Apollon. Rhod. 2. 450.

Obs. 2. Many compounds in ης, particularly those in της, have only one termination, and follow the first declension; as νεφεληγερῆτης, ἀκακῆτης, ἀκερσεκόμης, &c. In the old language, and in Æolic and Doric, the termination in τα was used; as ἱππότα, νεφεληγερέτα, ἀκηκῆτα, &c.

2. Termination in ις.

Obs. The compound adjectives of this termination are mostly declined like the substantives from which they come; as from χάρις, χάριτος, comes εὐχαρίς, εὐχάριτος. The compounds of πόλις, however, have in the genitive ιδος; as ἀπολις, ἀπόλιδος. In the accusative they have α and ν; as ἀπόλιδα and ἀπολιν.

4. Termination in ους.

Obs. 1. The compounds in ους of three terminations, have already been treated of. With regard to compounds of two terminations, it must be observed, that in the case of the compounds of ποῦς, (which are all of only two terminations, and properly make ποδός in the genitive after the third declension,) the Attics often use the second declension; as τοῦ πολύπου, τὸν πολύπου, τοὺς πολύπους: this peculiar Attic form is given in the declension of δίππου, in the accusative and vocative only, as it is of more frequent occurrence in those two cases.

Obs. 2. Compounds in ους of two terminations, like those in ις, follow the declension of the substantive of which they are compounded. The compounds of ποῦς have been mentioned in Obs. 1. So also, ἀνόδους, ἀνόδοντος, from ὁδός, ὁδόντος; εὐρους, εὐρου, from νοῦς, νοῦ, &c.

5. Termination in υς.

Obs. The compound adjectives in υς, which are derived from δάκρυ, occur only in the nominative and accusative singular, in the rest of the cases the form υτος is used; as ἀδακρύτου, ἀδακρύτω, &c. The declension of ἀδακρυς, therefore, as given by Valpey, is rather to be considered as an exercise for the student, in forming cases by analogy, than a list of forms which actually occur.

6. Termination in ως.

Obs. 1. Adjectives in ως of this termination, sometimes form the neuter also in ω; as ἀγήρως, neuter ἀγήρων and ἀγήρω.

Obs. 2. The compounds of γέλως, γέλωτος, commonly forsake the declension of this substantive and follow the Attic second declension : so also those which are formed from κέρως, κέρωτος, with a change of the α into ω. Both, however, have the genitive ωτος also ; thus, φιλόγελως, δίκερως ; neutr. ων ; gen. ω and ωτος.

Remarks on Adjectives of One Termination.

Obs. 1. Some were used also with neuter substantives, in all the cases except the nominative and accusative singular and plural ; as φοιτάσι πτεροῖς, Eurip. Phæn. 1052. μαριάσιν λυσσῆμασιν, Or. 264. Some were used only as masculine ; as γέρων, and adjectives in ας and ης of the first declension ; as γεννάδας, ἐθελοντής. The feminine forms of πρέσβυς and μάκαρ were πρέσβειρα and μάκαιρα.

Obs. 2. The neuter, which is deficient, is supplied when necessary by derivative or kindred forms, as βλακικόν, ἀρπακτικόν, μώνυχον, ὁμομήτριον, ἀγνωστόν, μαινόμενον, δρομαῖον, &c. So the feminine of γέρων is supplied by γεραιά.

Irregular Declension.

Obs. From the old μέγας we have ὁ μέγας Ζεῦ, in Æschylus Sept. c. Th. 824. The forms πολλός, πολλόν, are Ionic ; the regular forms of πολύς occur in the Epic writers ; thus πολέος, Il. δ', 244. ε', 597. The accusative singular masculine and neuter, passim. Nominative plural masculine πολέες, Il. β', 610, &c. and πολεῖς, Il. λ', 707. genitive pl. πολέων, Il. ε', 691. δ, 680, &c. dative, πολέσι, Il. δ', 388. accusative πολέας, Il. α, 559. also πολεῖς, Il. δ, 66. The nominative πολλός, and accusative πολλόν, however, also occur in Homer. The regular forms of πολύς are occasionally met with also in the Dramatic writers.

DEGREES OF COMPARISON.

Since adjectives show the properties or qualities of objects, they may also be so changed as to exhibit, by their inflexion, a higher or the highest degree in which an object possesses those properties. These inflexions are called Degrees of Comparison, of which there are two, the Com- parative and the Superlative. The Positive is the proper determination of the adjective, and cannot properly be considered as a degree of Comparison, since it expresses none.

1. The Comparative is most usually formed by the addition of τερος, the Superlative by the addition of τατος, to the Nominative; as μακὰρ, μακάρτερος, μακάρτατος.

1. Adjectives in ος drop ς before these terminations. If the penultima of the positive be long, ο remains unchanged; as ἄπμος, ἄπμότερος, ἄπμότατος; δεινός, δεινότερος, δεινότατος. If, however, the penult be short, ο is changed into ω; as σοφός, σοφώτερος, σοφώτατος; στενός, στενώτερος, στενώτατος.

2. Adjectives in εις change εις into έστερος, έστατος; as χαρίς, χαρίστερος, χαρίστατος; τιμήεις, τιμήςτερος, τιμήςτατος.

3. Adjectives in ας, ης, and υς, annex τερος and τατος to the termination of the neuter; as μέλας, μελάντερος, μελάντατος; ἀηδής, ἀηδέστερος, ἀηδέστατος; εὐρύς, εὐρύτερος, εὐρύτατος.

4. Adjectives in ων and ην, add τερος and τατος to the Nom. Plur. Masc. as σώφρων, σωφρονέστερος, σωφρονέστατος; τέρην, τερωνέστερος, τερωνέστατος.

5. Adjectives in ξ make ιστερος and ιστατος, as ἄρπαξ, (ἄρπαγς), ἀρπαγίστερος, ἀρπαγίστατος; βλάξ, (βλάκς) βλακίστερος, βλακίστατος.

6. The Attics compare many other adjectives by ιστερος, ιστατος; αἰτερος, αἰτατος; έστερος, έστατος. In the two last this is done by the Ionic and Doric dialects; thus,

| | | |
|-------------|----------------|------------------|
| λάλος, | λαλίστερος, | λαλίστατος |
| πτωχός, | πτωχίστερος. | |
| λάγνος, | | λαγνίστατος. |
| ψευδής, | | ψευδίστατος. |
| πλεονέκτης, | | πλεονεκτίστατος. |
| μέσος, | | μεσαιτατος. |
| ἴσος, | ισαίτερος. | |
| ἥσυχος, | ἥσυχαιτερος. | |
| πλησίος, | | πλησιαίτατος. |
| ῥάδιος, | ῥαδίστερος. | |
| ἄφθονος, | αφθονέστερος. | |
| σπουδαῖος, | | σπουδαιέστατος. |
| ἐρῶμενος, | ἐρῶμενέστερος. | |

Observations.

Obs. 1. The change of the short ο into ω, in adjectives which end in ος and have a short penult, was probably caused by the conditions of the Hexameter verse, by means of which the Greek language was first formed; since otherwise four short syllables would come together. This rule, however, could not have been observed in κακοξεϊνώτερος, (Hom. Od. ι, 376.) nor in ἄζυφώτερον, (Il. ρ', 446.) since a measure would thus have been produced equally incompatible with Hexameter verse.

Obs. 2. In some adjectives ο or ω is rejected before the termination of the comparative and superlative; as, φίλος, φιλότερος, φιλιώτερος; for φιλωτέρως, φιλιώτατος, which do not occur: φίλος, it will be remembered, however, has also the Attic forms φιλαίτερος, φιλαίτατος, and φιλίων, φιλιστος. The ο is also omitted in γεραίτερος, παλαιέτερος, σχολαίτερος, &c.

Obs. 3. The terminations έστερος, έστατος, contracted with the preceding vowel into ούστερος, ούστατος, were regularly used in adjectives in ος contracted ους, for οώτερος, οώτατος; thus, εύνοέστερος, contracted, εύνούστερος; ἀπλοέστερος, ἀπλούστερος; so also, κακονούστερος; ἀθροούστερος.

Obs. 4. The forms given under No. 6. are such as occur in the Attic, Ionic, and Doric writers. The student is not to imagine, however, that the other forms not given are wanting; these may possibly have escaped as yet the notice of grammarians, or, had we more remaining of the Greek writings, would very probably be found in them.

II. Some adjectives form the Comparative in ίων (neuter ιον) and the Superlative in ιστος; as ήδύς, ήδίων, ήδίστος. These Comparatives in ίων have the penult long in the Attic dialect, but short elsewhere.

1. Some adjectives ending in ος, ρος, ης, and ας, have the comparative in ίων, and the superlative in ιστος; as,

|-----------|------------|--------------|
| τερπνός, | τερπνίων, | τέρπνιστος. |
| κακός, | κακίων, | κάκιστος. |
| φίλος, | φιλίων, | φιλιστος. |
| αισχρός, | αισχρίων, | αἰσχυριστος. |
| ἐχθρός, | ἐχθρίων, | ἐχθριστος. |
| οἰκτιρός, | οἰκτιρίων, | οἰκτιστος. |
| μέγας, | | μέγιστος. |
| ἐλεγχής, | | ἐλέγχιστος. |

Obs. 1. κακός makes also κακώτερος, Π. γ', 106. τ', 321. αισχρός makes αισχρότερος, though less frequently than αισχίων; ἐχθρός makes also ἐχθρότατος. To the adjectives above mentioned may be added κυδρός, sup. κύδιστος; μακρός, comp. μακίων, changed to μάσσων (vid. Obs. 2.) sup. μήκιστος for μάκιστος; ὀλίγος, sup. ὀλιγιστος.

Obs. 2. In some comparatives in ων, the ι is changed, together with the foregoing consonant or consonants into σσ; in the new Attic dialect into ττ; as ἐλαχός, ἐλαχίων, changed to ἐλάσσων or ἐλάττων, ἐλάχιστος; μέγας, μεγίων, changed to μέσσων, (in Herodotus μέζων, in Attic μελίων), μέγιστος; μακρός, μακίων changed to μάσσων, μήκιστος for μάκιστος; κρατός, κρατίων changed to κράσσων, (in Herodotus κρέσσων, in Attic κρελσσων), κράτιστος; ταχύς (changed, on account of euphony, from its original form θαχύς) ταχίων (for θαχίων) changed to θάσσων, τάχιστος (for θάχιστος): ταχύτερος and ταχύτατος are less Attic. The comparative ἥσσω or ἥτιων, is in like manner changed from ἥκίων; the positive is unknown, but we have a near approximation to it in the Homeric adverb ἥκα, gently, in a very small degree.

Obs. 3. The last particular worthy of notice is, that some of the adjectives in υς have other forms besides those in ων, ιστος; thus, γλυκός makes also γλυκυτέρος; ταχύς, ταχύτερος; βαθύς, βαθύτερος; βραδύς, βραδυτέρος, βραδυτάτος; βραδύς, thus compared, was more Attic than βραδίων, βραδιστος. In like manner, βραχύς forms sometimes βραχυτέρος, βραχυτάτος; and ἥδυσ make ἥδιων less frequently than ἥδυτέρος. From ὠκύς and πρέσβυς come, in the comparative only, ὠκύτερος, πρεσβύτερος, but in the superlative ὠκιστος, πρεσβιστος.

Remarks on the Irregular Comparisons.

Ἀγαθός.

Obs. 1. In the application of the several comparatives which have been given to this adjective, it must be understood to signify not only good, but strong, and brave; qualities which were thought the most desirable in the early ages of civilization. Thus, among the Romans, courage was thought the first and most manly virtue; whence virtus from vir. Ἀγαθός among the early Greeks denoted one who was good at plundering, and, in conformity with its derivation from ἄγω, one good at leading off animate plunder, such as men, cattle, &c. On the contrary, φέρτερος, φέρτατος, were applied to one skilled in bearing off inanimate plunder, being derived from φέρω. Hence the Greek phrase ἄγειν καὶ φέρειν, to plunder, which Livy (22, c. 3.—38, c. 15.) has expressed by agere et ferre. The adjective κακός appears to be derived from κέκακα, the perfect middle of κάω, allied to κείω, I sleep, I am inactive; I sleep, or, am inactive, while others are abroad to the prey; i. e. I am a coward, a bad man.

Obs. 2. The proper comparative and superlative of ἀγαθός, are ἀγαθώτερος and ἀγαθώτατος. These, however, occur only in later writers and such as are not Attic, as Diod. Sic. 16. 85. Ἀμείνων, according to Fischer, is for ἀμενίων, from ἄμενος, whence the Latin amēnus.—Ἀρσίων, ἄριστος, are formed, in fact, from Ἄρης, Mars.—Βελτίων properly signifies, more sagacious; its usual Attic forms are βελτίων, βέλτιστος, though the others occur sometimes in the Attic poets.—Κρείσσω, κρείττων, have been mentioned already; the form κάβρων is for the older κάρσων; the true positive is κρατός, brave, powerful.—Λύων, properly signifies more desirable. It is generally derived from λύω, I will, I wish; it may, however, have been formed from λωτός, which occurs in Theocritus, and be put for λωτίων.—Φέρετερος, &c. are usually formed from φέρω, (vid. Obs. 1.): if, however, we imagine a positive φερής analogous to this, we shall have, 1. φερέστερος, φερέστατος, by syncope φέρτερος, φέρτατος. 2. (φερίων), φέριστος. Fischer derives the former from φερτός, and considers them as contractions for φερτότερος, φερτότατος.

Obs. 3. Χείρων, χείριστος, appear to be altered from χερείων. From the old positive χέρης, (probably the same originally with χερνης), which has the sense of a comparative, inferior, (Il. α, 80. δ', 400.) a comparative χερείων was derived, and a superlative χείριστος, as from ἄρης, ἀρσίων, ἄριστος. From this, by transposition, came χείρων, χείριστος.

Obs. 4. The forms ῥήων, ῥῆιστος, assigned to ῥῥήδιος, appear to have come from the old word ῥήϊος, of which the Ionic ῥήϊδιος, and Doric ῥαϊδιος, are merely lengthened forms. So in the comparative, the oldest form was ῥήϊτων, contracted to ῥήτων, Doric ῥατων, Attic ῥήων: and the superlative old form ῥήϊστος, Doric ῥαῖστος, Attic ῥῥιστος. There are other forms, however; as, from ῥήϊος comes (ῥήϊότερος) ῥήϊτερος, (Il. σ', 258. ω, 243,) Doric, ῥαϊτερος, ῥαϊτερος, Pind. Ol. 8, 78.

IV. Sometimes, particularly in the Poets, new comparatives and superlatives are derived from comparatives and superlatives already in use: thus, Obs. 1. We have in English an instance of a double superlative, in the phrase Most Highest, in the Psalms, to express the superlative excellence of the Supreme Being. Our vulgar term lesser, may also be cited as an instance of a double comparative. Such constructions, however, are in violation of the idiom of our own, and, in fact, of every, language.

Obs. 2. We have some instances of double superlatives in the Latin language likewise; thus, extremissimus, Tertull. Apoll. c. 19. postremissimus, in the oration of C. Gracchus, quoted by Aulus Gellius, 15. 12: minimissimus, Arnob. 5: so also of a kind of double comparatives; as, intimior, proximior. The last of these is used not only by Ulpian and Vegetius, but also by Seneca, Epist. 108. In Plautus, an instance occurs of a superlative formed from a noun, as occulissimus; this, however, is rather to be regarded as a piece of wit on the part of the poet.

Obs. 3. The forms given above of comparisons from adverbs, occur more frequently in an adverbial form, as, ἀνωτέρω, ἀνωτάτω; κατωτέρω, κατωτάτω, &c. To these may be added ἀγχοῦ, comp. ἀγχοτέρω, and ἄγχιον changed to ἄσσον, sup. ἀγχοτάτω, and ἄγχιστα; μάλα, comp. μᾶλλον, sup. μάλιστα: so also from ἀπὸ the preposition, ἀπώτερω, ἀπώτατω.

Obs. 4. Some, among whom is Fischer, derive the comparatives and superlatives given above, not from substantives, adverbs, or prepositions, but from obsolete adjectives. But not any trace of such adjectives is to be found, either in the Greek writers themselves, or in the old Grammarians; and, as prepositions, with their case, and adverbs, by prefixing the article, are made to answer the significations of adjectives, there is no contradiction in supposing that forms of comparison are derived from these adverbs and prepositions, which are used as adjectives. And, as in many verbs, tenses occur, although the verbs, from which they must have been more immediately derived, never existed; so comparatives and superlatives, of which the positive had no existence, were formed after the analogy of the substantive.

NUMERALS.

Numbers are either Cardinal, which answer to the question, "how many?" or Ordinal, answering to the question, "which of the number?"

1.—Cardinal Numbers.

| One. Sing. | Two. Dual | Two. Plural. |
|-----------------------------|-------------------------------|-----------------|
| N. εἷς, μία, ἓν, | N. A. δύο, and δύο, | N. — |
| G. ἑνός, μιᾶς, ἑνός, | G. D. δυεῖν and δυοῖν. | G. δυῶν, |
| D. ἐνί, μίᾳ, ἐνί, | | D. δυοί. |
| A. ἕνα, μίαν, ἓν. | | A. — |

| Three. Plural. | Four. Plural. |
|------------------|---------------------|
| N. | N. |
| N. τρεις, | N. τέσσαρες, |
| G. τριῶν, | G. τεσσαρων, |
| D. τρισι, | D. τέσσαρσι, |
| A. τρεις, | A. τέσσαρες, |
| τρία, | τέσσαρα. |

Like εἷς are declined,

N. οὐδεις, οὐδεμία, οὐδέν,
G. οὐδενός, οὐδεμίας, οὐδενός, &c.

N. μηδεις, μηδεμία, μηδέν,
G. μηδενός, μηδεμίας, μηδενός, &c.

1. The Cardinal numbers from πέντε, five, to ἑκατόν, a hundred, are indeclinable. The round numbers from 200 are declined regularly like adjectives. The termination —όσιοι indicates 100 ; as διακόσιοι, αἱ, α, 200 ; τριακόσιοι, 300, &c..

2. To express the 9 units, the 9 tens, and the 9 hundreds, the Greeks used the letters of the alphabet. But as there are only 24 letters, they used Ϛ, called Ϛαν, or ἐπίσημον, for 6 ; ϙ, called κόππα, for 90 ; and Ϙ, called σάν πῖ, (a π covered with a reversed C, or old sigma ; σαν being the name applied to the sigma in the old Greek, and also in Doric) for 900.

3. A mark is placed over the letters to denote the numbers. Placed under them, it expresses thousands ; thus ε is 5, but ς is 5000. The figures of the present year are αὐλ', 1830.

4. In the expression of numbers by capitals, the following characters are used : viz.

| I , 1, is the mark of Unity. | H , 100, is the initial of Ἑκατόν . |
| II , 5, is the initial of Πέντε . | X , 1000, - - - Χίλιοι . |
| Δ , 10, - - - Δέκα . | M , 10,000, - - - Μύριοι . |

Each of these may be repeated four times : thus, IIII, 4, ΔΔΔΔ, 30, ΔΔΔΔΔ, 40. MM, 20,000, MMM, 30,000, MMMM, 40,000. II, inclosing a numeral letter, multiplies it by 5 ; thus, FI, 50, &c.

5. The names of the Greek numbers, with the mode of expressing them by the letters of the alphabet, are as follow :—

|----|-----|------------------|---------|----|-----------------|
| 1 | α' | εἷς, | 40 | μ' | τεσσαράκοντα, |
| 2 | β' | δύο, | 50 | ν' | πεντήκοντα, |
| 3 | γ' | τρεις, | 60 | ξ' | ἑξήκοντα, |
| 4 | δ' | τέσσαρες, | 70 | ο' | ἑβδομήκοντα, |
| 5 | ε' | πέντε, | 80 | π' | ὀγδοήκοντα, |
| 6 | ς | ἕξ, | 90 | ρ' | ἐννεήκοντα, |
| 7 | ζ' | ἐπτά, | 100 | ϕ' | ἑκατὸν, |
| 8 | ή' | ὀκτώ, | 200 | σ' | διακόσιοι, |
| 9 | θ' | ἐννέα, | 300 | τ' | τριακόσιοι, |
| 10 | ι' | δέκα, | 400 | υ' | τεσσαράκοντα, |
| 11 | ιά | ἐνδεκα, | 500 | φ' | πεντακόσιοι, |
| 12 | ιβ' | δώδεκα, | 600 | χ' | ἑξακόσιοι, |
| 13 | ιγ' | τρισκαίδεκα, | 700 | ψ' | ἑπτακόσιοι, |

6. In the composition of numbers, either the smaller precedes, and the two are joined by καί; or the greater is placed first, in which case the conjunction is omitted; as πέντε καὶ εἴκοσι, or εἴκοσι πέντε. Yet custom admitted of many deviations; thus, εἴκοσι καὶ ἑπτά, Herod. 8. 1. ἑβδομήκοντα καὶ μία, Id. 8. 2. ἑβδομήκοντα καὶ ὀκτώ, Id. 8. 48. When three numbers are reckoned together, the greatest comes first, and so on in succession with the conjunction καὶ; as νέας ἑκατὸν καὶ εἴκοσι καὶ ἑπτά, Herod. 8. 1. νῆες τριῆσαι καὶ ἑβδομήκοντα καὶ ὀκτώ, Ib. 48.

7. Instead of the numbers compounded with 8 and 9, more frequent use is made of the circumlocution ἐνός (or μῆς) δέοντος, δέουσαι, or δέοντα; δυὸν δέοντες, δέουσαι or δέοντα; in which the latter word is the participle of δεῶ, I want. Thus, νῆες μῆς δέουσαι εἴκοσι, 19 ships; ἔτεα δυὸν δέοντα εἴκοσι, 18 years; ἄνδρες δυὸν δέοντες πενήκοντα, 48 men. Sometimes the participle is referred to the subtractive number, and the genitive absolute is formed; as ἐνός δέοντος τριακοστῷ ἔτει, in the 29th year. This usage, however, it will be remembered, does not take place in Homeric Greek.

8. The cardinal numbers compounded with συν, express, 1. Together; as, σύνδυο, two together; σύντρις, three together, &c. 2. The signification of Latin distributives; as, σύντρις αινύμενος, taking three at a time. Od. l, 429. σύνδυο ἤμαρ, we were two together, by twos. Demosth. in Mid. σύνδυο λόχους ἤγον, they led each two companies. Xen. Anab. 6. 3. Sometimes the prepositions κατά, ἄνα, &c. are used.

2. Ordinal Numbers.

1. Of the Ordinal Numbers, all under 20, except second, seventh, and eighth, end in τος. From thence upwards all end in οστής. Thus, 1st. πρῶτος, (in speaking of two, πρότερος), 2d. δεύτερος, 3d. τρίτος, 4th. τέταρτος and τέτρατος, 5th. πέμπτος, 6th. έκτος, 7th. έβδομος, and έβδόματος, 8th. ὄγδοος, and ὀγδόατος, 9th. έννατος, ένατος, and είνατος, 10th. δέκάτος, 11th. ένδέκατος, 12th. δωδέκατος, δυωδέκατος and δυοκαιδέκατος, 13th. τρισκαιδέκατος, and τρίτος και δέκατος, 14th. τεσσαρακαιδέκατος, and τέταρτος και δέκατος, &c. 20th. είκοστής, 21st. εἷς και είκοστής, μία και είκοστή, and είκοστής πρώτος, 30th. τριακοστής, 40th. τεσσαρακοστής, 50th. πεντηκοστής, 60th. έξηκοστής, 70th. έβδομηκοστής, 80th. ὀγδοηκοστής, 90th. έννενηκοστής, 100th. έκατοστής, 200th. διακοσιοστής, 1000th. χιλιοστής, 10,000th. μυριοστής.

2. The Greeks used the letters of the alphabet in their natural order to express a consecutive series, or marks of division. Thus the 24 books of the Iliad and Odyssey, are marked by the 24 letters, as the stanzas of the 119th Psalm are by the Hebrew letters.

3. The Greeks, in order to express half or fractional numbers in money, measures, and weights, used words compounded of the name of the weight, &c. (μνᾶ, ὀβολός, τάλαντον,) with the adjective termination ον, ιον, αιον appended to it, and ἡμι, half, and placed before the ordinal number of which the half is taken; as τρίτον ἡμιτάλαντον, $2\frac{1}{2}$ talents, i. e. the first a talent, the second a talent, the third a half talent: τέταρτον ἡμιτάλαντον, $3\frac{1}{2}$ talents, i. e. the first a talent, the second a talent, the third a talent, the fourth a half talent: τρίτον ἡμιδραχμον, $2\frac{1}{2}$ drachmæ: τέταρτον ἡμιμναιον, $3\frac{1}{2}$ minæ: έννατον ἡμιμναιον, $8\frac{1}{2}$ minæ. So in Latin; Sestertius, two asses and a half, is shortened from Semistertius: the first an As, the second an As, the third a half As. (tertius semis.) From this must be distinguished, however, the phrase when those words are in the plural, and joined with the cardinal number: as τρία ἡμι- τάλαντα, not $2\frac{1}{2}$ talents, but three half talents, i. e. one talent and a half: πέντε ἡμιτάλαντα, five half talents, two talents and a half: πέντε ἡμιμναῖα, $2\frac{1}{2}$ minæ: τρία ἡμιμναῖα, $1\frac{1}{2}$ minæ.

Remarks on the Numerals.

1. Cardinal Numbers.

Εἷς.

Obs. 1. The feminine of εἷς is derived from ἕως, ἕα, ἕον; of which ἕα or ἕη still occurs in Homer, (Il. δ', 437, ι, 319, λ', 174.) The dative ἧ for ἐνι occurs, however, only in Il. ζ', 422. Hesiod, Th. 145, has εἷς for εἷς. The oldest form of εἷς, judging from analogy, must have been ἐνς, which bears a resemblance to our English once. From the neuter of an old form μεῖς, may be derived the particle μέν, signifying, according to its derivation, in the first place, while the particle δεῖ may have an analogy with δύο, and may denote in the second place.

Obs. 2. Instead of οὐδεῖς, μηδεῖς, an unattic and incorrect form is used by later writers; as οὐθεῖς, μηθεῖς. In these, however, the feminine resumes the δ. This last circumstance proves conclusively that it is wrong to consider these forms as coming from οὐτε and μήτε compounded with εἷς. It is, in fact, only the customary change of δ into θ, before an aspirate. Some of the old Grammarians supposed οὐδεῖς to come from οὐ and δεῖς, with which latter form they compared the pronoun δεῖνα, but this derivation is opposed by the forms οὐδεμῖα and οὐδέτερος.

Obs. 3. Οὐδεῖς and μηδεῖς are often separated, and this separation increases their negative signification; as οὐδ' ἓν ἐνός κρατηθέντες, having been subdued not even by one, i. e. even by no one. Εἷς, μῖα, ἐν, from their very nature, can have no plural; but οὐδεῖς and μηδεῖς have οὐδένες and μηδένες. In the older language, however, the use of the plural of these forms was frequently superseded, especially the dative case, by the forms οὐδαμοί, μηδαμοί, (vid. Steph. Thes. and Herod. 9, c. 58. οὐδένες ἐν οὐδαμοῖσι.) The singular number, however, of these last mentioned forms was not in use, except in the adverbial cases οὐδαμοῦ μηδαμῇ, οὐδαμά.

Δύο.

Obs. 1. δύο is the Attic mode of writing. In Homer and Herodotus it is indeclinable: δυοῖν is the form for the genitive and dative; δυεῖν is more rare, and is used only in the genitive. Instead of δυοῖν, the Ionians said δυῶν. The dative δυοι is of rare occurrence.

Obs. 2. Other old forms were, δύος, of which δίω apparently is merely the dual; and δοιός, the same as δισσός. These were both used also in the plural. From δοιός come the substantive δοιή, doubt, and the verbs δοιάζω, δοάζω; ἐνδοιάζω.

Obs. 3. Ἀμφω accords with δίω. In the old Poets it is frequently indeclinable; otherwise, αμφοῖν is used in the genitive and dative throughout the three genders.

2. Ordinal Numbers.

Obs. 1. τέτρατος, another form for τέταρτος, occurs Il. ψ', 615. Od. β', 607: πέμπτος is from the Æolic πέμπε for πέντε: ἐβδόματος is the more ancient form of ἐβδομος, and occurs Od. κ', 81: ὀγδόατος is also an old form of ὀγδοος, and is found Od. γ', 306. Hesiod. ἔργ. 790: ἐνατος is the most ancient form, and occurs Il. β', 313. Soph. El. 707: hence come εἰνατος, Il. β', 295. and the common ἐννατος: δυωκαιδέκατος is the older form. Hes. ἔργ. 774.

Obs. 2. Numerals in αῖος are derived from the ordinal numbers, and answer to the question "on what day?" In other languages they can only be expressed by several words. Thus, δευτεραίος, on the second day: τριταῖος, on the third day: εἰκοσταῖος, on the twentieth day, &c. There is, however, no such numeral from πρῶτος, but instead of it αυθήμερον may be used, on the first day. From πρότερος comes προτεραίος, which, however, is not referred to the person, but joined with ἡμέρα, as τῇ προτεραῖᾳ ἡμέρᾳ, on the day previous; τῇ ὑστεραῖᾳ ἡμέρᾳ, on the day after.

Obs. 3. A second class of derivatives are the numeral nouns, with an abstract signification; as, ἡ μονάς, the unity; δύας, the number two; τριάς, the number three, in ecclesiastical writers, the Holy Trinity; so also, τετράς, πεντάς (likewise πεμπάς and πεμπτίς), ἑξάς, ἐβδομάς, ὀγδοάς, ἐννεάς, δεκάς, ἐνδεκάς, &c. The two numbers εἴκοσι and τριάκοντα, reject before this termination their peculiar ending as far as ς, thus; εἰκάς, τριᾶκάς. All the remaining numbers adhere to the analogy, (and the compound ones seldom appear); as, τεσσαράκοντάς, πεντηκοντάς, ἑκατοντάς, χιλιάς, μυριάς, &c.

Obs. 4. When other words are compounded with numerals, then for unity we have μονο-, for 2 δι-, for 3 τρι-, for 4 τετρα-; as, μονόκρωτος, δίκρωτος, τριμήνων, τριόδος, τετράγωνος. All the remaining numbers terminate generally in α or ο, as πεντάμετρος, εἰκοσάκωπος, χιλιοτάλαντα.

Obs. 5. The numeral adverbs are as follows ; ἅπαξ, once ; δις, twice ; τρίς, thrice ; (all the remaining end in κίς) τετράκις, four times ; πεντάκις ; ὀκτάκις ; ἐννέακις or ἐννάκις ; εἰκοσάκις ; ἑκατοντάκις ; χιλιάκις, &c.

Obs. 6. The multiplicative adjectives, are ; ἀπλοῦς, simple, διπλοῦς, double ; τριπλοῦς, triple ; τετραπλοῦς, four-fold ; πενταπλοῦς, five-fold, &c.

Remarks on the Pronouns.

1. Personal Pronouns.

Obs. 1. The Dialects of the Personal Pronouns, at large, are given in the Remarks on the Dialects, towards the end of the volume.

Obs. 2. In the genitive singular, ἐμοῦ, σοῦ, οὗ, are Attic contractions from the Ionic forms ἐμέο, σέο, ὄο. When the genitive, dative, and accusative singular of ἐγὼ are emphatic, they are written ἐμοῦ, ἐμοί, ἐμέ; otherwise μοῦ, μοί, μέ. The Dual forms, νῶ, νῶν; σφῶ, σφῶν; are Attic. In the plural, ἡμεῖς, ὑμεῖς, and σφεῖς, are contractions from ἡμέες, ὑμέες, σφέες; and so of the other cases. In the Dative, however, a different change occurs; ἡμῖν and ὑμῖν are contracted from ἡμέσι, ὑμέσι, and have the ν ἐφελεκυσσικόν added

Obs. 3. The pronoun οἷ is very seldom used in the Attic dialect; since, in order to express a reflexive meaning, ἐαυτοῦ takes its place. Among the Ionic and Epic writers, however, it is more frequently employed, not only in a reflexive sense, but also, and more generally, for the oblique cases of αὐτός.

Obs. 4. According to Theodosius Alexandrinus, (ed. Goetling.) the ancient pronoun of the third person was ἷ, whence the Latin is, ejus.

2. Possessive Pronouns.

Obs. ἐός, ή, όν, occurs only in the singular in the Ionic and Doric writers, and in the poets; ός is an abbreviated form from ἐός: σφωτέρως occurs only in the Ionic Poets, as also νωτέρως: ήμετέρος was used sometimes for ἐμός, as ήμεῖς for ἐγώ: σφέτερος is sometimes used by the Attic poets for the pronoun possessive of the third person singular.

3. Demonstrative Pronouns.

Obs. 1. In ὅδε, the enclitic δε is annexed only to give greater strength. Instead of this δε, the Attics also annex the syllable δι; as ὅδι, ήδι, τοδι; which is analogous to the Latin hicce.

Obs. 2. In the pronoun οὔτις, the Ionians frequently insert ε before the termination of the case, as τουτέω, τουτέων, τουτέους. The Attics annex an ι to this pronoun in all cases and genders, to give a stronger emphasis; as οὔτισι, αὐτιή. In the neuter, this ι took the place of ο and α; as τουτι, ταυτι. For the same reason the Latins annexed met, te, pte, ce; as ego-met, tute, meapte, hicce. Hence οὔτισι is only used in an absolute designation, οὔτις with reference also to a pronoun relative which follows it.

Obs. 3. Instead of ι the syllables γι and δι are annexed to the cases which end in a short vowel, for the same purpose; as τουτογι, ταυταγι, τουτιοδι. This appears only to have been used in familiar discourse, as it occurs in the comic writers alone. Ὅδι also does not occur in the tragedians. From this we must distinguish the ι which the Attics and Ionians frequently annex to the dative plural, as τούτοιςι, ταύταιςι.

Obs. 4. Some adjectives compounded with οὔτις follow its declension, but reject the τ throughout; as τοσοῦτις, τοσαύτη, τοσοῦτο, from τόσος: τοιοῦτις, τοιαύτη, τοιοῦτο, from τοῖος: τηλικούτις, τηλικαύτη, τηλικοῦτο, from τηλίκος. The ι paragogicum is often annexed to these also, as τοιουντονι, τοιουτοῖι, τοιανταῖι, τοιανταῖ.

Obs. 5. The Attics sometimes use τοῦτον for τοῦτο; as τοῦτον πέλαγος, Pausan. 8. 54. (See Obs. 9. below.) So also, τοσοῦτον for τοσοῦτο, and τοιοῦτον for τοιοῦτο. Xen. Cyrop. 1. 1. Thucyd. 2. 50. In like manner, τὸ ἄλλον for τὸ ἄλλο, Arrian. Exp. Alex. 1. 19.

Obs. 6. ἐκεῖνος has also the paragogicum; as, ἐκεινοσί, ἐκεινουτί, ἐκεινονί. For ἐκεῖνος, the Ionians, and likewise the Attic tragic writers, used κείνος. The Æolians said κῆνος. The Dorians τῆνος.

Obs. 7. Αὐτός was used for the third person; and yet it has the proper signification of he, she, it, only in the oblique cases; and even in these only when they stand after some other word or words in the clause. In the nominative, and in the oblique cases when these last begin a clause, it signifies, not he or him; but he himself, himself, &c.; thus, ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς, he gave to them; οὐχ ἑώρακα αὐτόν, thou hast not seen him; but αὐτός ἐφη, he himself said it: παρεγένοντο αὐτοί, they themselves were present: αὐτόν ἑώρακα, I have seen the person himself: αὐτοῖς ἔδωκε, he gave to the persons themselves, &c. When the article immediately precedes, the phrase means the same; as, ὁ αὐτός ἀνὴρ, the same man: τὸ αὐτό or τὸ αὐτίδ, the same thing.

Obs. 8. αὐτοῦ, αὐτῷ, αὐτόν, &c. with the rough breathing on the initial syllable, are not from αὐτός immediately, but are contracted for ἑαυτοῦ, ἑαυτῷ, ἑαυτόν, &c.

Obs. 9. The Attics frequently use ταῦτον, for τὸ αὐτό, Aristoph. 253. Xen. Ages. 3. 2. id. Anab. 6. 3. &c.

4. Reciprocal Pronouns.

Obs. 1. These pronouns are not compounded of ἐμέ, σέ, ἔ, and αὐτός, but of ἐμέο, σέο, ἐο, old genitive forms for ἐμοῦ, σοῦ, οὗ. These pronouns never occur in Homer as one vowel, but separate, as ἐμὲ αὐτόν, σὲ αὐτόν, ἔ αὐτόν, &c. In Herodotus they are separated and transposed; as, αὐτοῦ ἐμεῦ, αὐτῷ μοι, &c. The Attics separate or transpose, when they wish to convey a reflexive meaning: for it is observable, that in these compound pronouns, unless thus arranged, αὐτός loses its peculiar force; thus, σαυτόν means thee merely, but αὐτόν σε, thee thyself.

Obs. 2. Properly, according to their composition, only the genitive of these pronouns should have been in use. It is owing to arbitrary usage, that ἐμέο, σέο, and ἐο, are compounded with other cases of αὐτός besides the genitive.

Obs. 3. Whenever there is need of a plural for ἑαυτοῦ, and σεαυτοῦ, the parts of the compound are declined separately; as ἡμεῖς αὐτοί, ὑμεῖς αὐτοί, ἡμῶν αὐτῶν, ὑμῶν αὐτῶν, &c.

5. Indefinite Pronouns.

Obs. 1. The Indefinite τις, as being an enclitic, is commonly used without an accented mark; the interrogative τις (who?) has the accent always on the ι in the dissyllable cases, (τινες, τισι,) and is thereby distinguished, as also in the nominative singular, by the invariable acute accent, from the indefinite τις.

Obs. 2. The Ionians said for τινός, τινι, &c. τέο, and contracted, τεῷ. Dat. τέω. Gen. pl. τέων, Dat. τέοις, τέοιαι. The Attics contracted τινός into του, τινι into τι, in all the genders, and wrote them without an accent. In the plural they used only τινῶν, τισι. There existed also different forms of the pronouns τις and τεός. The Grammarians say, that from τινός a new nominative τιος, τίου, τιω, was formed; and from this, according to them, came τοῦ, by the Ionians resolved into τέο and τέω.

6. Remarks on the combination of δς and τις.

Obs. 1. The indefinite τις is sometimes subjoined to the relative δς, and a new form arises, with the signification, whosoever, which has each of its constituent parts separately declined; as ὅστις, ἥτις, ὅτι, (or ὁ τι, to distinguish it from ὅτι, that.) Gen. οὗτινος, ἧστινος, οὗτινος; Dat. ὅτινι, ἥτινι, ὅτινι, &c.

Obs. 2. Homer says ὁ τις, for ὅστις, and retains, with the rest of the Ionic writers, the ὁ unchanged in all the cases, as ὅτεν, Od. ρ', 424. and ὅττεο, ὅττεν, Od. α', 124. χ', 377. ρ', 121. for οὗτινος, ἧστινος. So also in the dative ὅτεω, Il. 6, 664. Accus. ὅτινα, Od. θ', 204. Nom. Pl. Neut. ὅτινα, Il. χ', 450. Gen. ὅτεων, Od. κ', 39, &c. The Attics retained this in the genitive and dative singular; as ὅτου, ὅτω, for οὗτινος, ὅτινι. The form ὄιων, however, also occurs, Xen. Anab. 7. 6. and likewise ὄτοισι in Sophocles and Aristophanes.

Obs. 3. Instead of the neuter plural ὅτινα, Homer and Herodotus have ἄσσα, from the Doric σά for τινά. The Attics instead of this say ἅτια. This last, however, must not be confounded with ἅτια, which the Attics used in certain combinations, particularly with adjectives, for the neuter plural τινά; as ἅλλ' ἅτια, εἰτερ' ἅτια, τοιαῦτ' ἅτια, and for which the form ἄσσα occurs, Od. τ', 218.

VERB.

VERBS are of two kinds ; 1. in Ω , 2. in MI .

Verbs in Ω are either such as have a consonant before ω , or such as have a vowel, α , ε , o , before it. The former are called barytone verbs ; because they have the acute accent on the penultima, and the last syllable necessarily has the grave accent, ($\beta\alpha\rho\acute{\upsilon}\nu\ \tau\acute{o}\nu\omega\upsilon$,) not expressed in writing : the latter are called pure, or contracted, verbs, because ω is contracted by the Attics into one vowel with the preceding : they are also styled circumflex verbs, because, after contraction, the ω receives a circumflex ; as $\phi\acute{\iota}\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\phi\acute{\iota}\lambda\tilde{\omega}$. These, however, are not at all different from the barytons, since it is merely required to contract in the present and imperfect.

Verbs have three Voices ; the Active, Passive, and Middle : Five Moods ; Indicative, Imperative, Optative, Subjunctive, and Infinitive :

Nine Tenses ; Present, Imperfect, Perfect, Pluperfect, First and Second Future, First and Second Aorist, and, in the Passive, Paulo-post-futurum : Three Numbers ; Singular, Dual, and Plural.

Obs. The older Grammarians, and the earliest modern ones, reckoned fourteen conjugations ; seven of barytone verbs, according to the characteristic consonant of the present tense, and the formation of the future ; three of verbs circumflex ; and four of verbs in μ . I. Barytone verbs. 1st. in β , π , φ , $\pi\tau$, Future ψ . 2d. in γ , κ , χ , $\kappa\tau$, Future ξ . 3d. in δ , θ , τ , Future in σ . 4th. in ζ , $\sigma\sigma$, $\tau\tau$, Future ξ or σ . 5th. in λ , μ , ν , ϱ , Future $\tilde{\omega}$. 6th. ω pure, as $\alpha\tilde{\upsilon}\omega$, Future σ . 7th. in ξ and ψ , Future $\eta\sigma\omega$. II. Verbs circumflex. 1st. $\acute{\epsilon}\omega$. 2d. in $\acute{\alpha}\omega$. 3d. in $\acute{\omicron}\omega$. III. Verbs in μ . 1st. in $\eta\mu$, $\eta\varsigma$, Infin. $\acute{\epsilon}\nu\alpha\iota$. 2d. in $\eta\mu$, $\eta\varsigma$, Infin. $\acute{\alpha}\nu\alpha\iota$. 3d. in $\omega\mu$, Infin. $\acute{\omicron}\nu\alpha\iota$. 4th. in $\upsilon\mu$, Infin. $\acute{\upsilon}\nu\alpha\iota$. The modern and more simple division takes its origin from Vervey and Weller.

Observations on the Voices of the Greek Verb.

THE Active and Passive Voices having nothing very peculiar in their signification, as compared with those of the Latin language, we shall confine ourselves, therefore, to a consideration of the Middle Voice.

The Middle Voice, in Greek, is so called, because it has a middle signification between the Active and Passive Voices, implying neither action nor passion simply, but an union, in some degree, of both. Middle Verbs may be divided into Five Classes, as follows :

1. In Middle Verbs of the First Class, the action of the Verb is reflected immediately back upon the agent; and hence Verbs of this Class are exactly equivalent to the Active Voice joined with the Accusative of the reflexive Pronoun; as λούω, I wash another; λούομαι, I wash myself; the same as λούω ἑμαυτόν.

2. In Middle Verbs of the Second Class, the agent is the remote object of the action of the Verb, with respect to whom it takes place; so that Middle Verbs of this Class are equivalent to the Active Voice with the Dative of the reflexive Pronoun (ἑμαυτῷ, σεαυτῷ, ἑαυτῷ); as αἰρεῖν, to take up any thing for another, in order to transfer it to another; αἰρεῖσθαι, to take up in order to keep it one's self, to transfer to one's self. Hence Verbs of this Class carry with them the idea of a thing's being done for one's self.

3. Middle Verbs of the Third Class express an action which took place at the command of the agent, or with regard to it; which is expressed in English by to cause. In other words, this Class may be said to signify, to cause any thing to be done; as γράφω, I write; γράφομαι, I cause to be written, I cause the name, as of an accused person, to be taken down in writing by the magistrate before whom the process is carried, or, simply, I accuse.

4. The Fourth Class of Middle Verbs includes those which denote a reciprocal or mutual action; as σπένδεσθαι, to make libations along with another, to make mutual libations, i. e. to make a league; διαλύεσθαι, to dissolve along with another, to dissolve by mutual agreement. To this class belong Verbs signifying "to contract," "quarrel," "contend," &c.

5. The Fifth Class comprehends Middle Verbs of the First Class, when followed by an Accusative, or some other Case; in other words, it embraces all those Middle Verbs which denote an action reflected back on the agent himself, and which are at the same time followed by an Accusative, or other Case, which that action farther regards; as, ἀναμνήσθαι τι, to recall any thing to one's own recollection.

6. As regards the Tenses of the Middle Voice, the student will take notice,—

(a) That the Future Middle has usually an Active, sometimes a Passive sense, while the Future Passive has seldom, if ever, the signification of the Middle.

(b) In many Verbs the Aorist Passive has a Middle signification. In such Verbs, either the Aorist Middle is obsolete or rare, or else it has one of the meanings of the Verb, and generally the original one, appropriated to itself, and the Passive Aorist another: thus, the Aorist Passive σταλῆναι, is attached with the medial signification to στεῖλλεσθαι, to journey; whereas στεῖλασθαι, the proper Aorist middle, belongs only to στεῖλλεσθαι, to clothe one's self, or send for.

(c) The Perfect Middle, in some Verbs, supplies the place of the Perfect Active, this latter Tense being obsolete on account of euphony; as ἔκτονα, ἀκήκοα, ἔσπορα, λέλοιπα, οἶδα, πέπονθα, τέτοκα, &c. In many Verbs, however, the Perfect Middle is found with an Intransitive meaning, clearly based upon, and deducible from, its Middle meaning. To understand the examples which follow, the student will bear in mind the peculiar force of the Perfect Tense of the Verb in all the Voices, viz. its reference to a continued action. Thus:

* Ἀγνυμι, I break. Perf. Middle, ἔαγα, I have caused myself to be broken, (by not offering, for example, sufficient resistance,) and I continue broken, i. e. I am broken.

Ἀνοίγω, I open. Perf. M. ἀνέωγα, I have caused myself to be opened, (speaking, for example, of a door which does not offer sufficient resistance in remaining shut,) and I continue open, i. e. I stand open.

* Εγείρω, I awaken. Perf. M. ἐγέτηγορα, I have awakened myself, and continue awake, i. e. I am awake.

* Ελπώ, I give hopes. Perf. M. ἐόλπα, I have given myself hopes, and I continue in hopes, i. e. I hope.

* Ὀλλυμι, I destroy. Perf. M. ὄλωλα, I have destroyed or ruined myself, and I continue ruined, i. e. I am undone.

Πήγνυμι, I fix. Perf. M. πέπηγα, I have fixed myself, and continue fixed, i. e. I am fixed.

Μένω, I remain. Perf. M. μέμονα, I have caused myself to remain, and I continue remaining, i. e. I persevere. The Perfect Active μεμένηκα, merely signifies, I have remained.

Προσσω, I do. Perf. M. πέπραγα, I have caused myself to do, I have acted in such a way as to do; hence πέπραγα καλῶς, I have caused myself to do well, I have acted in such a way as to do well, and I continue to do well, i. e. I do well, I am fortunate, or prosperous.

The list might be extended farther, but a sufficient number of examples have been cited to show that the Perfect Middle can only obtain its Intransitive meaning through its Middle one. It seems therefore incorrect to term it, as some Grammarians have done, the Second Perfect Active.

(d) The Perfect and Pluperfect Passive are often used in a Middle sense. This appears in general to be the case, when the corresponding Middle Tenses are either obsolete or rare.

The Doctrine of the Moods and Tenses will be given at the end of the Syntax.

Remarks on Εἰμί.

Obs. 1. The root of εἰμί is the old verb ἔω; hence εἶς and εἴ in the second person, of which, however, εἴ is more used than the other. It is remarkable that the form εἰμί is actually an Æolic one, received into the common dialect. From ἐω the form ἤμι properly arose. The Bœotians, however, a branch of the Æolians, used ελ for ῆ, and hence said εἰμι for ἤμι, which was copied into the Attic and common dialects.

Obs. 2. The original form of the imperfect, appears to have been, ἔα, ἔας, ἔε, &c. Il. δ', 321. ε, 887. Herod. 1. 187, &c. Instead of this, Homer has also ῆα, Il. ε, 808, &c. which was probably a purer Ionic form than the first. From this old imperfect, arose by contraction the Attic ῆ, ῆς, ῆ, &c.: thus, ἔα contracted ῆ; ἔας, contr. ῆς; ἔε contr. ῆ; and, with the ν ἐφελκυστικόν, ῆν; which form is more common than ῆ.

Obs. 3. Instead of ῆς, the Attics more commonly said ῆσθα; instead of ῆτον, ῆτην, they used more frequently ῆστον, ῆστην; and in the plural ῆστε for ῆτε. In the third person plural, ῆν occurs for ῆσαν, in an inscription in Æschines, in Ctes. p. 573, and also in Hesiod. Th. 321. Herod. 5. 12; but particularly in the Doric, as in Epicharmus, ap. Athen. 2. p. 250, &c.

Obs. 4. ἔσομαι, the future of εἰμι, is borrowed from the middle. In the second person singular, it has also ἔσει for ἔση, and in the third person, ἔσται by contraction for ἔσεται; this form ἔσται is the one most commonly used.

Obs. 5. A pluperfect form, as it is called, is generally added in grammars; as, ἤμην, ῆσο, ῆτο; ἤμεθον, ῆσθον, ῆσθην; ἤμεθα, ῆσθε, ῆντο. This, however, is properly an imperfect middle, and does not make its appearance in the best grammars: it is disapproved of by the Grammarians.

Obs. 6. Instead of ἔσθι in the imperative, there was also an old form ἔσο, or ἔσσο, Od. α. 303. γ', 200, from which the other persons are derived almost regularly. The student will be careful not to confound this ἔσθι with a form similar to it in every respect as regards appearance, viz. ἔσθι, the imperative of ἔσθμι, contracted from ἔσαθι, and borrowed by εἶδεω, I know. —The form ἔστων for ἔσιωσαν, occurs in Xenophon, Cyrop. 4. 6. and 8. 6.

Obs. 7. The form εἶεν is given in all grammars along with εἴησαν. It is, in fact, the most frequently used of the two. It occurs also adverbially in the sense of the Latin esto! well, be it so! and appears to have been retained in the language of common life from the old εἶε for εἴη, with ν ἐφελκυστικόν; for the sense requires the singular, not the plural. It is met with chiefly in Plato and Aristophanes.

Verbs in Ω.

There are four Conjugations of Verbs in ω, distinguished by the termination of the First Future.

The First Conjugation in ψω, as τύπτω, τύψω.

The Second in ξω, as λέγω, λέξω.

The Third in σω, as τίω, τίσω.

The Fourth in a liquid before ω, as ψάλλω, ψαλλῶ.

General Observations.

Obs. 1. When the First Person Plural ends in μεν, the Dual has no first person. The tenses to which this remark applies are, all those of the Active voice, together with the Aorists of the Passive.

Obs. 2. In the Present, Perfect, and Future of the Indicative, and all the Subjunctive, the third person plural ends in σι or ται; and the second and third persons Dual are the same.

Obs. 3. The Imperfect, Pluperfect, and the two Aorists of the Indicative, together with all the Optative, form the Dual in ον, ην. Elmsley, however, on Aristoph. Acharn. 773. says, that the 2d and 3d persons Dual were always alike.

General Observation.

Obs. In the English expression of the tenses, &c. much precision is not to be expected. Their use and signification depend on the conjunctions and participles to which they are joined. The optative, for example, which, in its genuine sense, i. e. expressive of a wish, is never joined with αν, is seldom used in the potential sense without it. Again, the first and second aorist participles are rendered by having, when, in fact, the English language has no aorist participle, and having is the form of its perfect participle. If we were required to give a strict translation to an aorist participle, and such an one as would conform nearest to the idiom of our language, we should be compelled to use a tense of a verb; thus, τοῦτο ποιήσας ἀπῆλθεν, is commonly rendered, having done this he departed, when in fact it should be, when he did this, he departed. So ταῦτα ἀκούσας εἶπεν, when he heard these things he said. Sometimes a conjunction may be inserted in English, as ἰδὼν δὲ, ἐξέδραμε καὶ καθυλάκεται, and he saw and ran and kept barking.

AUGMENT.

Of the Nine Tenses.

Three receive an Augment continued through all the Moods : viz. the Perfect, Pluperfect, and Paulo-post-Futurum.

Three receive an Augment in the Indicative only : viz. the Imperfect, and the two Aorists.

Three receive no Augment : viz. the Present and the two Futures.

There are Two Augments; the Syllabic, when the Verb begins with a Consonant; the Temporal, when the Verb begins with a Vowel. The Syllabic is so called, because it adds a Syllable to the word; the Temporal, because it increases the time or quantity of the initial vowel.

Obs. 1. In Homer, Hesiod, and other old Poets, the use of the Augment is very fluctuating. The same word occurs sometimes with the Augment, and sometimes without it, while other words again have it regularly. This diversity does not appear to have been caused by the revisers, the Grammarians, or transcribers, since the restoration of consistency in this respect would entirely destroy the measure and rhythm of the verses. In Herodotus and other prose writers, the Augment is almost regular, but it is also sometimes omitted. The Attics again observed it regularly, except in passages of the poets where the language was formed upon the model of the ancient language, as, for example, in the chorusses of the Dramatic writers.

Obs. 2. The Augment appears originally to have consisted, in all cases, of the prefix ε, as well in words beginning with a vowel as in those which began with a consonant. Thus we still find in the old Ionic Poets, ἐάφθη for ἡφθη; εἴετο for εἶετο, &c. This kind of Augment occurs more rarely in Herodotus, and only in certain words ; as, ἐάνδανε, ἐαδε, ἐάλωκα, ἐόργεε, &c. On the other hand, we find in him, οἶκα, οικώς, for the Homeric ῥοικα, ῥοικώς. The Attics retained this σ in some words ; as, for example, in ἔαξε, ἐάγη, ἐαγώς, from ἄγω, frango, to distinguish them from ἤξα, &c. from ἄγω, fero : in ἐάλωκα and ἐάλω : in ῥοικα, ῥολπα, ῥοργα, because in these three the characteristic of the perfect middle, οι and ο, could not be effaced : but particularly in verbs beginning with a vowel which is not capable of being lengthened, as ἐώθουν, ἔωσμαι, from ώθεω ; ἔωνούμην, ἔώνημαι, from ώνέρομαι ; ἐούρουν, from οὔρέω. Afterwards, however, the usage was thus far determined, that σ was only prefixed to verbs which began with a consonant ; while in others beginning with a vowel, it coalesced with a long vowel or a diphthong. The first is called, as has been already stated, the Syllabic Augment, the latter the Temporal.

Obs. 3. The Augment serves to prevent ambiguity ; else the Imperfect τύπτει would be confounded with the Imperative, and the First Aorist τύψας with the Participle.

1. Syllabic Augment.

RULES.

1. The Imperfect and the Two Aorists simply prefix an ε, as ἔτυπτον, ἔτυψα, ἔτυπον.

2. The Augment of the Perfect tense is formed by repeating the initial consonant of the verb, and by annexing an ε, as τέτυφα. This repetition of the initial consonant is called Reduplication. If the initial consonant be an aspirate, then, according to the rules of Euphony, instead of the aspirate, the corresponding smooth must be used, as φιλέω, I love, perfect, πεφίληκα, not φεφίληκα ; θύω, I sacrifice, perf. τέθυκα, not δέθυκα.

3. The Augment of the Pluperfect is formed by prefixing ε to the Reduplication of the Perfect, as ἔτετύφειν.

4. The Paulo-post-futurum, which is formed from the Perfect, has the reduplicative augment like that tense, as τετύψομαι.

Exceptions and Remarks.

1. In Verbs beginning with ϕ , after the augment ϕ is doubled, as $\phi\lambda\pi\tau\omega$, I cast, imperfect, $\epsilon\phi\phi\lambda\pi\tau\omicron\nu$; $\phi\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, I flow, imperfect, $\epsilon\phi\phi\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omicron\nu$.

2. In the three verbs $\beta\acute{o}\upsilon\lambda\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, I will, $\delta\acute{\upsilon}\nu\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$, I am able, $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\omega$, I am about, the Attics often prefix the temporal instead of the syllabic augment; as $\eta\beta\omicron\upsilon\lambda\acute{o}\mu\eta\nu$, $\eta\delta\upsilon\nu\acute{\alpha}\mu\eta\nu$, $\eta\mu\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omicron\nu$. There appears indeed, to be some analogy between these verbs in point of meaning.

3. The Ionians, and all the Poets except the Attics, often omit the augment in the imperfect, pluperfect, and the two aorists; as $\kappa\alpha\iota\omicron\nu\tau\omicron$ for $\epsilon\kappa\alpha\iota\omicron\nu\tau\omicron$; $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\phi\epsilon\iota\sigma\alpha\nu$ for $\epsilon\tau\epsilon\tau\acute{\upsilon}\phi\epsilon\iota\sigma\alpha\nu$, $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\xi\alpha\tau\omicron$ for $\epsilon\delta\acute{\epsilon}\xi\alpha\tau\omicron$; $\beta\eta$ for $\epsilon\beta\eta$. In the pluperfect this is done even in prose.

4. In Homer, Hæsioid, and other poets, the second aorist active and middle often receive the reduplication, and retain it throughout the moods; as $\kappa\epsilon\kappa\acute{\alpha}\mu\omicron\nu$, $\kappa\epsilon\kappa\acute{\alpha}\mu\omega$; for $\epsilon\kappa\acute{\alpha}\mu\omicron\nu$, $\kappa\acute{\alpha}\mu\omega$; from $\kappa\acute{\alpha}\mu\nu\omega$; $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\pi\iota\theta\omicron\nu$, $\pi\epsilon\pi\iota\theta\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$; for $\epsilon\pi\iota\theta\omicron\nu$, $\pi\iota\theta\epsilon\acute{\iota}\nu$; from $\pi\epsilon\iota\theta\omega$.

OBS. 2.

1. If the verb begin with ϕ , the perfect and pluperfect do not take the reduplication, but the ϕ is doubled, and ϵ prefixed, as $\phi\lambda\pi\tau\omega$, $\epsilon\phi\phi\acute{\iota}\phi\alpha$. vid. Obs. 1. Rule 1. Homer, however, has $\phi\epsilon\sigma\upsilon\pi\omega\mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu\alpha$, Od. ζ', 59.

2. When a verb begins with a double consonant, instead of the reduplication, ϵ alone is used, as $\zeta\eta\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\zeta\eta\tau\eta\kappa\alpha$; $\xi\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\xi\epsilon\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$; $\psi\acute{\alpha}\lambda\lambda\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\psi\alpha\lambda\kappa\alpha$.

3. In most cases also where the verb begins with two consonants, no reduplication takes place, but ϵ alone is used; as $\sigma\pi\epsilon\acute{\iota}\rho\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\pi\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\iota$; $\phi\theta\epsilon\acute{\iota}\rho\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\phi\theta\alpha\rho\kappa\alpha$; $\kappa\tau\acute{\iota}\zeta\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\tau\iota\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$.

To this last, however, there are exceptions. 1. When a verb begins with two consonants, the first of which is a mute and the second a liquid, the general rule operates; as $\gamma\acute{\rho}\alpha\phi\omega$, $\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\rho\alpha\phi\alpha$; $\pi\acute{\nu}\epsilon\omega$, $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\pi\nu\epsilon\upsilon\kappa\alpha$; $\kappa\acute{\lambda}\iota\nu\omega$, $\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\lambda\iota\kappa\alpha$. But $\gamma\nu$, and often $\gamma\lambda$, assume only a single ϵ , as $\gamma\nu\omega\rho\acute{\iota}\zeta\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\nu\acute{\omega}\rho\iota\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$; $\kappa\alpha\tau\alpha\gamma\lambda\omega\tau\acute{\iota}\zeta\omega$, $\kappa\alpha\tau\epsilon\gamma\lambda\omega\tau\iota\sigma\mu\acute{\epsilon}\nu\omicron\varsigma$. 2. The verbs $\kappa\acute{\iota}\alpha\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, and $\mu\acute{\nu}\alpha\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, are also exceptions, and form $\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\iota\tau\eta\mu\alpha\iota$, $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\mu\eta\eta\mu\alpha\iota$. 3. The irregular perfect $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\pi\tau\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$, must also be excepted.

4. In verbs beginning with λ and μ , the Ionians, Attics, and others, are accustomed to put $\epsilon\iota$ for $\lambda\epsilon$ and $\mu\epsilon$, as $\lambda\alpha\mu\beta\acute{\alpha}\nu\omega$, perf. $\epsilon\lambda\lambda\eta\phi\alpha$ for $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\eta\phi\alpha$; $\mu\epsilon\acute{\iota}\rho\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, perf. $\epsilon\mu\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\iota$ for $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\mu\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\iota$.

5. The Perfect of Latin verbs also sometimes takes a reduplication, as do, dedi; pungo, pupugi; tango, tetigi, &c. It is worthy of notice, that all the verbs which have this reduplication in the perfect, made it anciently in e, proving this therefore to be a manifest derivation from the Greek form. Thus, in the early state of the Latin language, they said, according to the authority of Aulus Gellius, memordi, peposci, pepugi, spespondi, &c. Some verbs, we perceive, still retain this e; in others it is changed. Gellius states that Cicero and Cæsar both used these old forms.

II. Temporal Augment.

The Temporal Augment in general changes

α into η , as ἄγω, ἤγον.

ϵ into η , as ἐλπίζω, ἤλπιζον.

ι into $\bar{\iota}$, as ἰκάνω, ἱκανον.

o into ω , as ὀπάζω, ὤπαζον.

υ into $\bar{\upsilon}$, as ὕερίζω, ὕεριζον.

$\alpha\iota$ into η , as αἰίζω, ἤρον.

$\alpha\upsilon$ into $\eta\upsilon$, as αὐξάνω, ἠύξανον.

$\epsilon\upsilon$ into $\eta\upsilon$, as εὐχομαι, ἠυχόμην.

ϵ is changed in some verbs into $\epsilon\iota$, as ἔχω, εἶχον.

$\epsilon\omicron$ is changed into $\epsilon\omega$, as ἐορτάζω, ἐώρταζον.

Of the other vowels already long, α usually becomes η ; while η , ω , $\bar{\iota}$, $\bar{\upsilon}$, admit no augment whatever; as, ἡττάομαι, ἡττώμην, ἡττημαι, &c.

Exceptions and Remarks.

1. All these changes from the long to the short vowel, had their origin in the coalescing or contracting of the syllabic augment ϵ with the initial vowel of the verb; as ἔαγον, ἤγον; ἐελπιζον, ἤλπιζον. Among these contractions, those of $\epsilon\epsilon$ into η , and $\epsilon\omicron$ into ω , are not so much in conformity with the common rule of contractions, as that of $\epsilon\epsilon$ into $\epsilon\iota$.

2. The verbs which change ϵ into $\epsilon\iota$, are the following:

| | | |
|---------|------------|---------|
| ἔάω, | ἐλκύω, | ἐρύω. |
| ἔθω, | ἔπω, | ἐστιάω. |
| ἐθίζω, | ἐπομαι, | ἔχω. |
| ἔλω, | ἐργάζομαι, | ἔω. |
| ἐλίσσω, | ἐρπω. | |
| ἔλκω, | ἐρπύζω. | |

Of these, the verb ἔπω has given rise to much discussion. While some consider it merely as another instance of the change of ε into ει, others maintain that εἶπα, εἶπον, &c. do not properly come from ἔπω, but from the form εἶπω, with the first syllable lengthened after the manner of the Ionians; for they assert, that, if it be viewed as coming from ἔπω, ει would be an augment, and would be retained throughout the moods contrary to all analogy.

3. In general where the augment would interfere with euphony, or produce confusion, we find it omitted, and the verb remaining unchanged. The following instances are particularly worthy of notice.

Verbs in α: No augment takes place in ἀηδίζομαι, ἀηθέσσω, αἶω, ἄω, only that in αἶω the short α is lengthened. The long α also remains unchanged in the old Attic, in ἀναλῶω, (commonly ἀναλίσκω), ἀνάλωκα, ἀνάλωσα, &c. In the modern Attic, however, and in the other dialects, we have alternately ἀνήλωσα and ἠνάλωσα, and in the perfect ἀνήλωκα and ἠνάλωκα.

Verbs in ε: The ε remains unchanged in ἐρμηνεύω.

Verbs in ει: These have no augment; with the single exception of εἰκάζω which takes one in the Attic writers, as, εἰκάζω, εἶκασα, εἶκασμαι; Att. ἦκασα, ἦκασμαι.

Verbs in ευ: The usage in these is far from being certain; ευ is often changed into ηυ in editions, although the readings, in this respect, are very fluctuating; frequently one or more MSS. have ηυ where the editions give ευ. The Grammarians for the most part condemn ηυ. The verb εὐρίσκω, with a very few exceptions, never has ηυ.

Verbs in ου: Some verbs in ου seldom or never receive the augment. Such are οἶνῶω, and words compounded of οἶνωδης, and οἶαξ, as οἶνωσκοπῶ, οἶακονομῶ. Others, as οἶῶω, οἰμέω, occur only in Ionic, and on that account have no augment.

4. The Attics in some words prefix ε instead of the temporal augment, particularly in verbs which begin with an immutable vowel, as, ἔαξα for ῥῆξα, ἐάλωκα for ῥῆλωκα. They also prefix the syllabic augment to the temporal, as ἐώρων, ἐώρακα, from ὀράω; instead of which, the Ionic ὠρων, ὠρακα, rarely occur in their works. In the same manner, the compound ἀνολίγω makes ἀνέφξα, ἀνέφγμαι, ἀνέφγα, not ἀνῶξα, ἀνῶγμαι.

Attic Reduplication.

In verbs which begin with a vowel, the Ionians, but still more the Attics, use a sort of reduplication, repeating the first letters of the perfect and pluperfect, but instead of the long vowel taking the corresponding short one ; as, ἀγήγερα for ἡγερα, from ἀγείρω ; ὀρώρυχα for ὠρυχα, from ὀρύσσω ; ὕδα for ὤδα, from ὕζω ; ἐμήμεκα for ἡμεκα, from ἐμέω ; ἐλήλυθα for ἤλυθα, from ἐρχομαι ; ἀκήκοα for ἡκοα, from ἀκούω ; ἐλήλαμαι for ἤλαμαι, from ἐλάω.

In ἐργήγορα a ρ is added, probably from the abbreviation of the present tense ἐργομαι for ἐγείρομαι : ἀραιρηκα, ἀραιρημαι, are merely Ionic forms for ἡρακα, ἡρημαι, from αἰρέω.

In the pluperfect the vowel is made long in the reduplication ; as ἡκηκόειν ; ὠρώρυκτο ; ἡληλάμην ; except only ἐλέλυθα, which makes ἐληλόθειν.

III. Augment in Compound Verbs.

1. Verbs compounded with a Preposition take the Augment between the Preposition and the Verb, as προσβαλλω, προσέβαλλον.

1. The prepositions (with the exception of περι,) throw away the final vowel when they stand in composition before a vowel ; as ἀπέχω, from ἀπό and ἔχω. In the case of the preposition πρό, the ο is usually contracted with ε ; as προῦβη for προέβη, from πρό and βαίνω.

2. If, after this elision, the Preposition comes before an aspirate, it changes its soft into an aspirate ; as ἀφαιρέω, from ἀπό and αἰρέω.

3. 'Εκ in composition becomes ἐξ before a vowel, as ἐκφέρω, ἐξέφερον. 'Εν and σύν, which change the ν before a consonant, resume it before a vowel, as ἐμμένω, ἐνέμενον. Σύν sometimes drops the ν, as συζητέω. P is double after a vowel, as διαβρέω.

2. Verbs compounded with εὖ and δὺς, if they are susceptible of the temporal augment, take it in the middle also between these particles and the verb ; as εὐορκέω, εὐώρκουν : δυσαρρεστέω ; δυσηρέστουν.

When, however, an immutable vowel or a consonant follows these particles, the verb either receives the augment at the beginning, as δυσωπέω, ἐδυσώπουν ; εὐφραίνομαι, ηὐφραίνομην ; δυστυχέω, δεδυστύχηκα ; or those beginning with εὖ more commonly take no augment, as εὐωχέομαι, εὐωχούμην.

General Remarks on the Augment of Compound Verbs.

Obs. 1. In the case of some compound verbs, whose simple verb is nearly or quite obsolete, the augment precedes the preposition. In this, however, the custom is not invariable, since many verbs of this kind in some writers receive the augment in the beginning, in others in the middle; thus, from καθεύδω we have both ἐκάθευδον and καθηῦδον, the latter sometimes in the best writers; from κάθημαι we have ἐκαθήμην and κάθημην.

Obs. 2. In general all such verbs as are not so much themselves compounded with another word, as derived immediately from a compound word of another part of speech, have the augment at the beginning; as οικοδομέω, ὠκοδόμουν, from οικοδόμος; στρατιοπέδεύω, ἐστρατιοπέδευσα, from στρατιόπεδον. It will be found hence, that many verbs, in which the preposition enters, prefix the augment, they coming immediately from a compound term; as ἐναντιοῦμαι, ἠναντιούμην, from ἐναντίος; ἀντιβόλῳ, ἠντιβόλουν, from αντιβολή. It is most usual, however, even in such verbs, that the augment follow the preposition, as ἐξεκλησίασαν, from ἐκκλησιάζω, though it come from ἐκκλησία; προφητεύω, προεφήτευσα, though it come from προφήτης; ἐπιτελέω, ἐπιτετέλευκα, though it come from ἐπίτελος; &c.

Obs. 3. Some verbs take an augment both before and after the preposition; as, ἀνορθόω, ἠνόρθοον; ἐνοχλέω, ἠνώχλουν; ἀνέχω, ἠνεύχομην, ἠνεσχομην; παροινέω, ἐπαρώνησα, πεπαρώνηκα, ἐπαρνήθην. A still greater irregularity, however, exists in the verbs διακονέω and δαιτάω; from the former we have, in the writings of the modern Attics and Atticists, δεδιηκόνηκα, and from the other ἐδιήτησα, though the verbs respectively come from διᾱκονος and δλαιτα, where the α forms the beginning of no new word.

FORMATION OF THE TENSES.

The Imperfect

is formed from the present, by prefixing the Augment, and changing ω into ον, as τύπτω, ἔτυπτον.

Obs. The Ionians and Dorians use a peculiar augment, which consists in the termination σκον, in which case the proper augment is omitted; as πέμπεσκον for ἔπεμπε; ἔασκον for ἔα; δάμνασκον for ἔδάμνα. So also in the passive, ποιέεσκειτο for ἔποιετο; βαλλέσκετο for ἐβάλλετο. This form is even used by an Attic writer, Sophocles Antig. 963. as παίσεκε.

The First Future

is formed from the Present, by changing the last syllable in the First Conjugation into ψω, as τύπτω, τύψω;

in the Second into ξω, as λέγω, λέξω;

in the Third into σω, as τίω, τίσω;

in the Fourth, by circumflexing the last syllable, and shortening the penultima, as ψάλλω, ψαλῶ.

These several changes, which are more or less dependant upon the general principle of euphony, will be found explained under Obs. 2. next, following.

Verbs in άω, έω, and όω, in general change α and ε into η, and ο into ω; as τιμάω, τιμήσω; φιλέω, φιλήσω; δηλόω, δηλώσω. (Obs. 4.)

Four verbs change the soft of the first syllable into an aspirate breathing; viz.

|----------------|----------------|--|----------------|----------------|
| ἔχω , | ἔξω . | | τρέφω , | θρέψω . |
| τρέχω , | θρέξω . | | τύφω , | θύψω . |

The reason of this change is given in Obs. 6. next following.

Obs. 1. The original termination of the future appears to have been the same in all verbs, namely, έσω, from ω. Thus we find yet, όλέσω from όλω, άρέσω from άρω. The primitive form έσω underwent a double change: partly on account of euphony, and partly to distinguish, by different forms, two senses of a word, in some verbs ε, in others σ, was rejected. The first form remained peculiar to the Æolians, and hence the Grammarians called άρσαι, κύρσαι, in Homer, Æolic forms; the second, which rejects σ, was chiefly peculiar to the Ionians and Attics, both of whom, the latter regularly, contract έω into ῶ. The Attics do this exclusively in verbs whose characteristic is λ, μ, ν, ρ; as άγγέλλω, fut. άγγελῶ; βρέμω, fut. βρεμῶ; μένω, fut. μενῶ; σπείρω, fut. σπερῶ; in the rest they have for the most part σ, but in the futures in έσω, άσω, όσω, ίσω, they very frequently reject σ , and contract what remains, as $\kappa\alpha\lambda\tilde{\omega}$ for $\kappa\alpha\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$, $\epsilon\lambda\tilde{\omega}$ for $\epsilon\lambda\acute{\alpha}\sigma\omega$, $\delta\mu\tilde{\omega}\nu\mu\alpha\iota$ for $\delta\mu\beta\acute{o}\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\omicron\iota\kappa\tilde{\iota}\omega$ for $\omicron\iota\kappa\tau\acute{\iota}\sigma\omega$.

Thus from the original form of the future $\epsilon\sigma\omega$, which remained only in some verbs, two new forms in $\sigma\omega$ and $\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ contracted $\tilde{\omega}$, arose; the latter of which was used chiefly in verbs whose characteristic was λ , μ , ν , ρ , the former in the rest. The former is generally denominated the First Future; the other also is called the First Future in verbs whose characteristic is λ , μ , ν , ρ ; in the rest it is termed the Second Future. This Second Future, however, is, after all, an imaginary tense, being a mere invention of the Grammarians, and ought in strictness to be banished from the common School-Grammars.

Obs. 2. All the changes mentioned above, as occurring in the several conjugations, are grounded upon the existence of the old form $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$, and the principle of euphony. According to the rules of euphony, the consonants δ , θ , τ , ζ , are omitted before σ , and the remaining consonants β , π , φ , γ , κ , χ , are united with the σ following, and form the double consonants, ψ and ξ ; while if ν precedes, δ , θ , τ , ζ , it is thrown out, but that the syllable may remain long, ι is inserted after σ ; hence we have the following changes:

1st. Conjugation. Oldest form of the future, $\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$, rejecting ϵ , by Syncope, we have $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\sigma\omega$, rejecting τ before σ , by the rule of euphony, we have $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\sigma\omega$, and lastly, by substituting the double consonant for $\pi\sigma$, there results $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\omega$.

2d. Conjugation. Oldest form of the future, $\lambda\epsilon\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$, rejecting the ϵ we have $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\sigma\omega$, and by a substitution of the double consonant, $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\xi\omega$. There are some classes of verbs, which fall under this conjugation, in which other and older forms of the present must be supposed in order to deduce the future in $\xi\omega$; these are,

1. Verbs in $\zeta\omega$, as $\kappa\rho\acute{\alpha}\zeta\omega$, $\omicron\iota\mu\acute{\omega}\zeta\omega$, $\delta\lambda\omicron\lambda\acute{\upsilon}\zeta\omega$, $\sigma\tau\acute{\alpha}\zeta\omega$. It is very probable that the original form of these verbs was in $\gamma\omega$, as $\kappa\rho\acute{\alpha}\gamma\omega$, $\omicron\iota\mu\acute{\omega}\gamma\omega$, &c. This may be inferred from the second aorist $\epsilon\kappa\rho\alpha\gamma\omicron\nu$, and from the derivative forms $\omicron\iota\mu\omega\gamma\acute{\eta}$, $\delta\lambda\omicron\lambda\upsilon\gamma\acute{\eta}$, $\sigma\tau\alpha\gamma\acute{\omega}\nu$. Hence it is easy to account for the future in $\xi\omega$; thus, oldest form $\kappa\rho\alpha\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omega$, by syncope $\kappa\rho\acute{\alpha}\gamma\sigma\omega$, by substituting the double consonant $\kappa\rho\acute{\alpha}\xi\omega$: and in a similar way of the rest.

But some verbs in $\zeta\omega$ have both $\xi\omega$ and $\sigma\omega$ in the future, as $\alpha\rho\pi\acute{\alpha}\zeta\omega$, $\pi\alpha\lambda\zeta\omega$, $\sigma\upsilon\rho\acute{\iota}\zeta\omega$, &c. In these $\xi\omega$ is the ancient form, which is retained in Doric; while $\sigma\omega$ is the later and softened form.

Other verbs in ζω take γ before ξ; as κλάζω, κλάγξω; πλάζω, πλάγξω. These come from old forms in γγω, as κλάγγω, πλάγγω; hence, oldest form κλαγγέσω, by syncope κλάγγω, by substitution κλάγξω: and so of others.

2. Verbs in σσω and τιω, as φρίσσω, τράσσω, σφάττω or σφάζω. The greater part, if not all of these, are derived from older forms in κω and χω: as φρίσσω, from φρίκω, whence φρίκη; τράσσω, from τράχω, hence ταραχέσω, by syncope τράχσω, by substitution τράξω; &c. There are also verbs in σσω and τιω of the third conjugation; these are mentioned in the next article.

3d. Conjugation. Oldest form of the future τίεσω; rejecting ε by syncope we have τίσω. There are some verbs in σσω and τιω, which are of this conjugation; as ἀρμότιω or ἀρμόζω, future ἀρμόσω; πλάσσω, πλάσω; ἰμάσσω, ἰμάσω; &c. These are considered merely as lengthened forms of verbs pure, and hence have σω in the future.

4th. Conjugation. In verbs whose characteristic is λ, μ, ν, ρ, the Ionians generally, and the Attics exclusively, use the form έω, contracted ω̄, for the future, as has been already remarked. In this case, however, the penultima, which was long in the present, is always made short, probably because the tone then rested chiefly on the last syllable; thus η was changed into α; αι, ει, ου, into α, ε, ο, and ευ into υ. Thus, αἶρω, ἀρῶ; σπείρω, σπερῶ, &c. If the penultima be long by position, the latter of the two consonants is rejected; as ψαλέσω, by rejecting one of the λ's, and by syncope, ψαλέω, and lastly, by contraction ψαλῶ. So also σιέλλω, σιελῶ; τέμνω, τεμῶ; κτείνω, κτενῶ; &c. In the same manner, the doubtful vowels, which were long in the present, become short in the future; as κρῖνω, κρῖνω: ἄμυνω, ἄμυνῶ.

In some verbs the ε which thus arises from the abbreviation, is often changed into α in dissyllables, because ε, in the rapidity of pronunciation, becomes more indistinct, and approaches nearer in sound to α or ο; thus τέμνω makes τεμῶ and ταμῶ; &c. This is commonly, though incorrectly, styled the 2d. Future.

Obs. 3. The analogy of formation extends in some measure to the Latin. The Perfect of the third conjugation is formed from the present, by changing o into si; as scribo, scribsi or scripsi; dico, dicsi or dixi; figo, figsi or fixi; demo, demsi or dempsi; carpo, carpsi; &c. To avoid harshness, a letter is frequently left out, as parco, parsi; ludo, lusi; &c. The s too is frequently omitted; and sometimes in that case it is resumed in the supine, as scando, scandi, scansum; verto, verti, versum, &c.

Obs. 4. Verbs Pure. The following exceptions occur to the rule given for the formation of the future of verbs in άω, ίω, and ώω:

- 1 Verbs in άω, whose final syllable is preceded by the vowels ε and ι, or by the consonants λ and ρ, make the future in άσω; as έάω, έάσω; μειδιάω, μειδιάσω, γελάω, γελάσω; δράω, δράσω; to which add κρεμάω, κρεμάσω. The following are exceptions; χράω, χρήσω; ταλάω, contracted τλάω, τλήσω; and most verbs which have ε, ο, before the final αω, as βοάω, βοήσω; άλοάω, άλοήσω; άκροάομαι, however, makes άκροάσομαι.

The Ionians, however, often put an η, e. g. περήσω, as the Dorians universally do an α, e. g. βοάσω, τιμάσω.

The verb κᾱω, an Attic contracted form for καίω, and the verb κλαῶ, a similar one for κλαίω, both make αύσω in the future; as, καύσω, κλαύσω, like the verbs from which they are contracted. Both these verbs, κᾱω and κλαῶ, have no contractions, and the student must be careful not to confound this κᾱω with the long α, with κᾱῶ, frango, a contract verb, whose penult is short.

- 2 Verbs in έω sometimes make έσω in the future; these are τελέω, αρχέω, ξέω, άκέομαι, άλέω, έμέω, νεικέω, &c. Some verbs which are comprehended under this head, come from verbs in ω, as όλέσω, άρέσω, αιδέσομαι, from όλω, άρω, αἰδομαι; and, probably, in τελέω, αρχέω, and the rest which have been mentioned, the future in έσω is from the primitive forms τέλω, άρκω, άκομαι, έλω, έμω, νείκω; instead of which the forms in έω came subsequently into use.

Some verbs in έω have έσω and ήσω in the future, because there were two forms in the present tense, each of which had its future; one of these forms, however, is always more in use than the other; thus, καλέω and αινέω, in Attic, have commonly καλέσω, αἰνέσω; and δέω, ποθέω, and πονέω, have more commonly δήσω, ποθήσω, πονήσω. Other verbs which have έσω and ήσω, are βδέω, κηδέω, κοπέω, κορέω, κοιτέω, στεγρέω, φορέω.

Some verbs in έω have, in the future, εύσω, as θέω, I run: which makes also θεύσομαι: νέω, I swim: πλέω, I sail: πνέω, I blow: ρέω, I flow: χέω, I pour. These futures are probably from the Æolo-Doric Dialect, in which the Digamma was often expressed by υ; and they are thus formed to distinguish them from θήσω, the future of πλήθωμι; ῥήσω, the future of ῥέω, ῥήθω, I spin: πλήσω, the future of πλήθω, I fill: ῥήσω, the future of ῥέω, I speak: and χέσω, the future of χέζω.

3. Verbs in ὦω, which are not derivative, make ὄσω, not ὠσω, in the future, as ὁμόω (whence ὁμνυμι borrows) ὁμόσω; ἀρόω, ἀρόσω; ὀνόω, ὀνόσω.

Obs. 5. Many Barytone verbs are frequently formed by the Attics and Ionians like contracted verbs, by changing ω into ησω: as βάλλω, βάλλήσω; διδάσκω, διδασκήσω; καθεύδω, καθευδήσω; κλαίω, κλαιήσω; νέμω, νεμήσω; which is the only future in use in this verb; τύπτω, τυπτήσω; hence also, βούλομαι, βουλήσομαι; οἶμαι, οἰήσομαι; οἶχομαι, οἰχήσομαι. Probably this form was occasioned by a custom, on the part of the Ionians, of lengthening many verbs in ω, by substituting the termination έω. The Ionians said, for instance, μαχέομαι, συμβαλλέομαι, &c. What might regularly take place in some verbs, was afterwards transferred by custom to other verbs also, without implying the necessity or utility of considering every future in ήσω, as having for its basis a present in έω.

Obs. 6. The verbs έχω, τρέχω, τρέφω, τύφω, were originally έχω, θρέχω, θρέφω, θύφω, and were changed with their initial letter into a soft, for euphony sake, inasmuch as two successive syllables can seldom commence each with an aspirate: in the future, however, the second aspirate disappears, and therefore the first is restored, as έξω, θρέξω, &c. this is clearly evinced by the perfect, which in the active is τέτρεφα, and not τέθρεφα, but in the Passive τέθραμμαι.

The First Aorist

is formed from the First Future by prefixing the Augment, and changing ω into α, as τύψω, έτυψα.

A doubtful vowel in the penultima of the First Aorist of the Fourth Conjugation, is made long; α is changed into η, and ε into ει, as κρῖνῶ, έκρῖνα; ψάλλῶ, έψηλα; ἀμῦνῶ, ήμῦνα.

Obs. If the penult of the Present has αι, that of the First Aorist, in the common Dialect has α, in the Attic η; as σημαίνω, σημανῶ, έσήμανα, Attic έσήμηνα. The Ionians also adopt η instead of α in such verbs, as καθάιρω, καθαρθῶ, εκάθαρα, Ionic, εκάθηρα.

The following drop the σ of the Future;

| | | | |
|---------------|---------------|--------------|---------------|
| ἀκέω, | ἤκεια. | κέω, | ἔκεια. |
| ἀλεύω, | ἤλεσα. | σεύω, | ἔσενα. |
| καίω, | ἔκηα. | χέω, | ἔχσα. |

The Perfect

is formed from the First Future by prefixing the Continued Augment, and changing in the 1st. Conjugation, ψῶ into φα, as τύψω, τέτυφα;

in the 2d. Conjugation, ξω into χα, as λέξω, λέλεχα;

in the 3d. Conjugation, σω into κα, as τίσω, τέτικα;

in the 4th. Conjugation, ῶ into κα, as ψαλῶ, ἔψαλκα.

Dissyllables in λω and ρω, change ῶ into κα, and the ε of the First Future into α, as στελῶ, ἔσταλκα, from στέλλω; σπερῶ, ἔσπαρκα, from σπείρω; Polysyllables, on the contrary, retain the ε; as ἀγγεῶ, ἤγγεκα, from ἀγγέλλω.

Verbs in ινω, υνω, and εινω, throw away ν before κ, and retain the short vowel of the future: which, however, in verbs in είνω, is changed into α; as κρινῶ, κέκρικα, from κρίνω; κτενῶ, ἔκτακα, from κτείνω; πλυνῶ, πέπλυκα, from πλύνω.

Verbs in αίνω change ν before κ into γ; as φα-νῶ, πέφαγκα, from φαίνω; μιανῶ, μεμίαγκα, from μαίνω.

Obs. 1. As the Perfect in some verbs pre-supposes a future in έσω, so verbs in μω and νω particularly pre-suppose a future in ήσω, and change ῶ into ηκα; as, νεμῶ, νενέμηκα; μενῶ, με-μένηκα; δραμῶ, δεδράμηκα; to which the Grammarians also add, βρεμῶ, βεβρέμηκα; τρεμῶ, τετρέμηκα. So from δαίω, or δάω, comes the perfect δεδάηκα, as if from a future δαήσω:

from $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\omega$ comes $\epsilon\acute{\rho}\acute{\rho}\acute{\upsilon}\eta\kappa\alpha$; from $\chiα\acute{\iota}\rho\omega$, $\kappa\epsilon\chi\acute{\alpha}\rho\eta\kappa\alpha$. Some suffer syncope, as $\beta\acute{\epsilon}\beta\lambda\eta\kappa\alpha$ for $\beta\epsilon\beta\acute{\alpha}\lambda\eta\kappa\alpha$; $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\delta\mu\eta\kappa\alpha$ for $\delta\epsilon\delta\acute{\epsilon}\mu\eta\kappa\alpha$, from $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\mu\omega$; $\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\kappa\mu\eta\kappa\alpha$ for $\kappa\epsilon\kappa\acute{\alpha}\mu\eta\kappa\alpha$, from $\kappa\alpha\mu\omega$; $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\tau\mu\eta\kappa\alpha$ for $\tau\epsilon\tau\acute{\epsilon}\mu\eta\kappa\alpha$, from $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\mu\omega$. In these perfects, the futures in $\eta\acute{\varsigma}\omega$, as $\beta\alpha\lambda\eta\acute{\varsigma}\omega$, $\delta\rho\alpha\mu\acute{\eta}\acute{\varsigma}\omega$, $\mu\epsilon\nu\eta\acute{\varsigma}\omega$, &c. are pre-supposed; which, however, were hardly in use any more than the forms of the present $\mu\epsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\delta\rho\alpha\mu\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, which some assume.

Obs. 2. In some verbs pure, and also in $\varphi\acute{\upsilon}\omega$, the Ionians and Æolians reject κ in the perfect, in which case η either remains unchanged, or becomes α or ϵ , according as it was derived from α or ϵ in the present. Thus $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\acute{\omega}\varsigma$ for $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\eta\kappa\acute{\omega}\varsigma$; $\tau\epsilon\theta\nu\eta\acute{\omega}\varsigma$ for $\tau\epsilon\theta\nu\eta\kappa\acute{\omega}\varsigma$; $\beta\epsilon\delta\alpha\acute{\omega}\varsigma$ for $\beta\epsilon\beta\eta\kappa\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, from $\beta\acute{\alpha}\omega$. Often, after this, $\eta\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, $\eta\acute{\acute{\omega}}\varsigma$, are contracted into $\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, in which case the Ionians and Attics often insert ϵ , as $\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\tau\iota\text{-}\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, $\text{-}\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\omega}\tau\omicron\varsigma$; $\tau\epsilon\theta\nu\text{-}\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\omega}\tau\omicron\varsigma$.

The Pluperfect

is formed from the Perfect, by prefixing ϵ to the Continued Augment, if there is a Reduplication, and changing α into $\epsilon\iota\nu$; as $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\tau\nu\varphi\alpha$, $\acute{\epsilon}\tau\epsilon\tau\acute{\upsilon}\varphi\epsilon\iota\nu$.

Obs. The original termination of this tense appears to have been $\epsilon\alpha$, which occurs in Homer and Herodotus, e. g. in the perfect middle, $\pi\epsilon\pi\omicron\iota\lambda\theta\epsilon\alpha$, Od. i, 44; $\acute{\epsilon}\iota\sigma\theta\acute{\eta}\pi\epsilon\alpha$, Od. ζ', 167. This $\epsilon\alpha$ was changed, as in the Augment, sometimes into η , (whence the Attic and Doric forms $\chi\acute{\eta}\delta\eta$, $\kappa\epsilon\chi\acute{\eta}\eta\eta$.) and sometimes into $\epsilon\iota$ with the addition of ν .

The Second Aorist

is formed from the Present by prefixing the Augment, changing ω into $\omicron\nu$, and shortening the penultima, as $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\tau\nu\omicron\nu$.

The Penultima is shortened,

1. In vowels, by the change of

|-----------------|------------------------|--|
| η | } into α , as | { $\lambda\acute{\eta}\beta\omega$, $\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\acute{\alpha}\beta\omicron\nu$, (vid. Obs. 3.) |
| ω | | |
| $\alpha\iota$ | | |
| $\alpha\nu$ | | |

In Dissyllables of the Fourth Conjugation, ε and ει are changed into α, as δέρω, ἔδᾳρον; σπείρω, ἔσπαρον. In Polysyllables ει is changed into ε, as ἀγείρω, ἡγερον. (vid. Obs. 2.)

2. In consonants, by the omission of τ, and of the last of two liquids; as τύπτω, ἔτυπον; ψάλλω, ἑψάλον.

Some Mutes are changed into others of the same order; thus,

| | | | | |
|--------------|---|--------------------|---|-----------------|
| π into β, as | { | βλάπτω, ἔβλαβον. | { | (vid. Obs. 5.) |
| | | καλέπτω, ἐκάλυβον. | | |
| | | κρύπτω, ἔκρυβον. | | |
| π into φ, as | { | ἄπτω, ἤφον. | { | (seldom found.) |
| | | βάπτω, ἐβάφον. | | (seldom found.) |
| | | θάπτω, ἔταφον. | | |
| | | φάπτω, ἑφάφον. | | |
| | | σκάπτω, ἔσκαφον. | | (seldom found.) |
| | | φίπτω, ἑφίφον. | | |
| | | δρύπτω, ἔδρδφον. | | (seldom found.) |
| χ into γ, as | { | σμίχω, ἑσμύγον. | { | |
| | | ψύχω, ἑψύγον. | | |

Verbs in ζω and σσω of the Second Conjugation, form the Second Aorist in γον; of the Third Conjugation, in δον; as, πράσσω, πράξω, ἔπραγον; φράζω, φράσω, ἔφραδον. (vid. Obs. 6.)

Verbs pure want the Second Aorist, and the forms which do occur come from barytone verbs that are sometimes met with in the present; thus ἔδουπον from δουπέω; ἔλακον from λήκω; ἔμυκον from μύκω.

The Second Aorist is wanting also in all derivative verbs formed from other verbs with a regular termination, like άζω, ἰζω, αῖνω, ὕνω, εὕω. All verbs, moreover, which cannot undergo any of the changes mentioned above, as ἐρύω, γράφω, &c. and all verbs in which there would be no difference between the Second Aorist and Imperfect, except in the quantity of the vowel, want the former tense. They may have, however, a Second Aorist Passive, as ἐγρόαφην.

Of other verbs, the greater part have the First Aorist, and much the smaller portion the Second, although it is assumed in the grammar even in verbs which do not possess it, in order to teach the formation of other tenses, particularly the Second Aorist Passive.

Observations on the Second Aorist.

Obs. 1. The true mode of forming this tense is undoubtedly from the second future, as it is called. (vid. Obs. 6. below, and the observations on the second future.)

Obs. 2. From the necessity of a short penultima in the second aorist, it frequently happens that when two consonants come together they are transposed, as δέρκω, ἐδρακον; πέρθω, ἐπραθον. These forms, however, occur only in the Ionic and other old poets.

Obs. 3. Πλήσσω, to strike the body, makes ἐπληγον; to strike the mind, ἐπλαγον.

Obs. 4. The change of ε into α in the second aorist of Dissyllables of the Fourth Conjugation, takes place in some verbs beginning with a Mute and Liquid, as πλέκω, ἐπλακον; κλέπτω, ἐκλαπον; σιρέφω, ἐστραφον.

Obs. 5. The aorists ἐβλαβον, ἐκαλυβον, ἐκρυβον, are supposed to come from the old radical forms, βλάβω, καλύβω, κρύβω. With regard, however, to the verbs which change π of the present into φ in the second aorist, as θάπτω, ῥάπτω, ῥίπτω, θρύπτω, it must be observed, that many are led to consider these second aorists as coming from old radical forms τάφω, ῥάφω, ῥίφω, θρύφω; whereas, on the contrary, these last appear to have been originally themselves derivative forms instead of τάπω, ῥάπω, ῥίπω, τρύπω.

Obs. 6. Verbs, which in the present have ζ or σσ, receive in the future either ξω or σω, according as they are of the second or fourth Conjugation. When they form the future in ξω, then ζ and σσ are considered as equivalent to γ, κ, or χ. Hence ξω is from γέσω, and by rejecting the σ we have γέω, which by contraction becomes γῶ, whence the second aorist γον; thus, πράσσω, πράξω, (πραγέσω, πραγέω, πραγῶ,) ἐπραγον. If again the future of these verbs is in σω, where σ has rejected the lingual δ, this δ necessarily enters again into the second aorist, as φράζω, φράσω, (φραδέσω, φραδέω, φραδῶ,) ἔφραδον. This all proceeds on the supposition, however, that the second aorist is formed from the future, which is undoubtedly the true mode of deriving it. vid. Obs. 2, on Second Future.

Obs. 6. The χ seems to have been considered by the Greeks as inconsistent with the short penultima; hence it is changed into γ , as in ψύχω, ψύξω, (ψυγῶ) ἔψυγον.

The Second Future

is formed from the Second Aorist, by dropping the Augment, and changing ον into ω circumflexed; as ἔτυπον, τυπῶ.

Obs. 1. The Second Future is originally the same as the first. Thus, τύπτω made τυπέσω, rejecting the ϵ , τύπσω, i. e. τύπω. The old form τυπέσω, became, in the Ionic dialect, τυπέω, and in the Attic, τυπῶ. So also λεγέσω, λέγσω, λέξω; Ionic λεγέω; Attic λεγῶ. Verbs in λω, μω, νω, ρω, have only one form of a future, which ought not to be termed their second future, but simply their future; thus, ψαλέσω, ψαλέω, ψαλῶ. Hence in reality a second Future does not exist.

Obs. 2. From the preceding observation of Dr. Valpey, which is supported by the authority of the best Grammarians, it will be seen at once, that the mode of forming the second future from the second aorist, is decidedly erroneous. The latter, in truth, is derived from the former; and, as the second future is, in fact, only an Attic form of the original future, so the second aorist is nothing more than an aorist derived from this Attic form, and in its meaning differing in no respect from the first aorist. vid. Observations on the Tenses.

Attic Future.

What is called the Attic Future may here be noticed. The form is, indeed, used by the Ionians sometimes, but the Attics are especially remarkable for its use, and hence the name it has received. This consists in throwing out σ , in ἄσω, ἔσω, ἴσω, ὄσω, of the future, and in making the vowels, which thereby meet together, coalesce; thus, ἐξελῶ for ἐξελάσω, ἐλῶ for ἐλάσω, διασκεδῶ for διασκεδάσω, καλῶ for καλέσω, μαχεῖσθαι for μαχέσεσθαι; κομιῶ for κομίσω; κομιδόμεθα for κομισόμεθα, ἀνοικτιῶ for ἀνοικτίσω; ὁμῶμαι for ὁμόσομαι; ἐλευθεροῦσι for ἐλευθερώσουσι, &c. It extends to the moods and participles of the future, and to the middle voice.

FORMATION OF THE TENSES.

The Present

is formed from the Present Active, by changing ω into $\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\text{-}\omega$, $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\text{-}\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$.

The Imperfect

is formed from the Imperfect Active, by changing ν into $\mu\eta\gamma$, as $\epsilon\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\omicron\text{-}\nu$, $\epsilon\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\omicron\text{-}\mu\eta\gamma$.

The Perfect

is formed from the Perfect Active, by changing, in the

1st. Cong. $\phi\alpha$ pure into $\mu\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\tau\upsilon\text{-}\phi\alpha$, $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\tau\upsilon\text{-}\mu\mu\alpha\iota$;

In the 2nd. $\chi\alpha$ into $\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\text{-}\chi\alpha$, $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\text{-}\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$;

In the 3d. $\kappa\alpha$ into $\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\phi\rho\alpha\text{-}\kappa\alpha$, $\pi\epsilon\phi\rho\alpha\text{-}\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$;

In the 4th. $\kappa\alpha$ into $\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\epsilon\psi\alpha\lambda\text{-}\kappa\alpha$, $\epsilon\psi\alpha\lambda\text{-}\mu\alpha\iota$.

Verbs of the Third Conjugation in ω pure, if the penultima of the Perfect be long, change κα into μαι, as πεφίλη-κα, πεφίλη-μαι.

Obs. 1. The following, however, are excepted from this rule and retain σ, ἀκούω, ἤκουσμαι; θράω, τέθραυσμαι; κελεύω, κεκέλευσμαι; κλείω, κέκλεισμαι; κρούω, κέκρουσμαι; παίω, πέπαισμαι; πταίω, ἔπταισμαι; σείω, σέσεισμαι.

Obs. 2. Some have a peculiar usage, and change κα into μαι, as ἀρώ, ἤρομαι; ἐλάω, ἤλαμαι, and by reduplication ἐλήλαμαι; δέω, δέδεμαι; θύω, τέθυμαι; λύω, λέλυμαι.

Obs. 3. The perfect of most verbs in αιω, αινω, αυω, ειω, ευω, ωω, ουω, υω, originally ended in μαι, which was afterwards changed to σμαι; hence we find γνωτός and γνωστός, &c.

Some Verbs shorten the long syllable of the Perfect Active, as έδωκα, δέδομαι.

Obs. On the same principle, ευ is changed into υ; thus, πέχευκα, πέχυσμαι and πέχυμαι; πέφευχα, πέφυγμαι; σέσευκα, σέσσυμαι; τέτευχα, τέτυγμαι.

Dissyllables, whose first syllable has τρε, change ε into α: as τρεπω, τετρεφα, τετραμμαι: but they resume it in the First Aorist, ετρεφθήν.

The third person plural is formed from the third person singular by inserting ν before ται, as κέρχεται, κέρχονται, probably from the old form, κέρχονκονται. But when a consonant comes before ται, the insertion of ν would produce an inharmonious sound. Hence a periphrasis is formed by the addition of the verb εἰμι to the Perfect Participle: thus τετυμμένοι εἰσι for τέτυπνται.

The 2d. Person Imperative is formed by changing αι of the 2d. Person Indic. into ο; as τέτυψ-αι, τέτυψ-ο; the 3d. Person is formed by changing ς of the 2d. Pers. Pl. Indic. into ω; as πέτυφθ-ς, τέτυφθ-ω.

The Infinitive is formed by changing ς of the 2d. Person Plural Indicative into αι, as τετυφθ-ς, τετυφθ-αι.

When the Perfect Indicative ends in μαι pure, the periphrasis of the Participle with εἰμι does not take place in the Optative, and sometimes not in the Subjunctive; but μαι in the Optative is changed into μην, αμαι into αιμην; and, in the Subjunctive, μαι with the preceding vowel into ωμαι; as Indic. τετιμῃμαι, Opt. τετιμῇμην, Subj. τετιμῶμαι.

The Pluperfect

is formed from the Perfect by changing μαι into μην, and prefixing ε to the Continued Augment, if there is a Reduplication, as τέτυμ-μαι, έτετύμ-μην.

is formed from the second person singular of the Perfect, by changing αι into ομαι, as τέτυψ-αι, τέτυψ-ομαι.

Obs. 1. By some, this tense is formed from the First Future Middle by prefixing the continued Augment, as τύψομαι, τέτυψομαι. Its true formation, however, is from the perfect, as will be shown in the explanation of the force of the several tenses.

Obs. 2. No verbs of the Fourth Conjugation, or with the Temporal Augment, have this tense.

Obs. 3. By the Grammarians of the present day, this tense is generally styled the Third Future Passive.

The First Aorist

is formed from the Third Person Singular of the Perfect, by dropping the Reduplication, changing ται into θην, and the preceding soft into an aspirate mute, as τέτυπ-ται, ἐτύφ-θην.

Four verbs assume σ; ἔρρωται, ἔρρώσθην; μέμνηται, ἐμνήσθην; κέχρηται, ἐχρήσθην; πέπληται, ἐπλήσθην. But σέσωσται drops it, as ἑσώθην.

In some verbs the Penultima is shortened: thus, ἀφήρηται makes ἀφηρέθην; εὔρηται, εὔρέθην; ἐπήνηται, ἐπηνέθην; τέθειται, έτέθην

Obs. In the third person plural of the Aorists, a syncope often takes place; thus, ἤγεσθην for ἤγερσθην; ἐκόσμηθεν for ἐκοσμήθην.

The First Future

is formed from the First Aorist, by dropping the Augment and changing ν into σομαι, as ἐτύφθη-ν, τυφθή-σομαι.

The Second Aorist

is formed from the Second Aorist Active, by changing ον into ην, as ἔτυπ-ον, ἐτύπ-ην.

Obs. 1. No second Aorist passive occurs in δην, θην, την, or from verbs in ω pure, except ἐκάην, ἐδάην, ἐβόρην, ἐφύην.

Obs. 2. The Tragic Poets preferred the Passive forms of the first aorist; the writers of the new comedy were more attached to the smoother forms of the second aorist.

The Second Future

is formed from the Second Aorist, by dropping the Augment, and changing ν into σομαι, as ἐτύπ-ην, τυπή-σομαι.

Numbers and Persons.

The only Tenses differing from the Active and Passive forms of verbs in ω, are the First Aorists Indicative, Imperative, and Optative, and Second Future Indicative.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

First Aorist, I struck myself.

| | | |
|----------------|------------|------------|
| S. ἐτυπάμην, | ἐτυψω, | ἐτυπατο, |
| D. ἐτυπάμεθον, | ἐτυψασθον, | ἐτυπάσθην, |
| P. ἐτυπάμεθα, | ἐτυψασθε, | ἐτυπαντο. |

Second Future, I shall strike myself.

| | | |
|----------------|------------|------------|
| S. τυποῦμαι, | τυπή, | τυπείται, |
| D. τυπούμεθον, | τυπείσθον, | τυπείσθην, |
| P. τυπούμεθα, | τυπείσθε, | τυποῦνται. |

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

First Aorist, strike thyself.

| | | |
|----|-----------|-------------|
| S. | τυψαι, | τυπάσθω, |
| D. | τυψασθον, | τυπάσθων, |
| P. | τυψασθε, | τυπάσθωσαν. |

OPTATIVE MOOD.

First Aorist, I might have been struck.

| | | |
|---------------|------------|------------|
| S. τυπαίμην, | τυψαιο, | τυψαιτο, |
| D. τυπαίμεθον | τυψαισθῶν, | τυψαισθῶν, |
| P. τυπαίμεθα, | τυψαισθε, | τυψαιντο |

The Present and Imperfect are the same as those of the Passive Voice.

The Perfect

is formed from the Second Aorist, by prefixing the Reduplication and changing ον into α, as ἔτυπ-ον, τέτυπ-α.

Obs. Hence Verbs which want the Second Aorist Active, strictly speaking, have no Perfect Middle.

In Dissyllables, if the Second Aorist has α in the penultima, from a Present in ε or ει, the Perfect Middle changes it into ο; as πλέκω, ἔπλακον, πέπλοκα; σπείρω, ἔσπαρον, ἔσπορα. But if the present be in η or αι, or have its penult long by position, then the Perfect Middle changes α, in the penultima of the Second Aorist, into η; as λήθω, ἔλαθον, λέληθα; φαίνω, ἔφανον, πέφηνα; θαλλω, ἔθαλον, τέθηλα; κλάζω, ἔκλαγον, κέκληγα.

Except κράζω, ἔκραγον, κέκραγα; πράσσω, ἔπραγον, πεπράγα; φράζω, ἔφραδον, πεφράδα.

If the Second Aorist has ε in the penultima, the Perfect Middle changes it into ο; as ἔλεγον, λέλογα.

If the Second Aorist has ι in the penultima, from a Present in ει, the Perfect Middle changes it into οι; as εἶδω, ἴδον, οἶδα; πείθω, ἐπιθον, πέποιθα.

Obs. 1. The verb σῖκω, makes ἔοικα; instead of which a more Attic form was εἶκα.

Obs. 2. Δεῖδω makes δέδοικα, to avoid the frequent repetition of δ in the regular δέδωδα. For the form δέδια, see irregular verbs. A similar change occurs in πέπομφα, where the regular form is πέπομπα. Some Grammarians, however, consider δέδοικα to be for δέδεικα.

If ι be already in the Present, it is merely made long; as τριζω, ετρίζον, τετρίγα; φρισσω, εφρίκον, πεφρίκα.

Observations on the Perfect Middle.

Obs. 1. Some verbs retain the diphthong of the Present, thus κεύθω makes κέκευθα and κέκυθα; φεύγω, πέφευγα and πέφυγα. It is more correct, however, to consider πέφευγα as the perfect active, changed, on account of the number of aspirates, from πέφευχα, and to regard πέφυγα as the true perfect middle.

Obs. 2. After the Attic Reduplication the vowel is shortened, as ἀκούω, ἀκήκοα; ελεύθω, ἐλήλυθα.

Obs. 3. The Poets frequently make the penultima short, particularly in the feminine of the participle, because the proper form would be inadmissible in verse; as μεμακνῖαι, Il. δ', 435. from μεμηκώς; τεθαλῖα. Il. ι, 208, &c. from τεθληώς; λελακνῖα, Od. μ', 85. from λεληκώς, &c.

Obs. 4. The verb ῥήσσω makes ῥήρωγα; ἔλπω, ἔολπα; ἔργω, ἔοργα; ἔθω, εἴωθα. In εἴωθα, the characteristic ο in the perfect middle is changed into ω, perhaps for the sake of euphony, or in order to give a tense which has the signification of the present, the sense of duration by means of the form itself, namely, ἔωθα, as the Ionians and Dorians wrote it, lengthened into εἴωθα.

Obs. 5. We call the Perfect Middle in this work by its old name, and have not adopted the new appellation, of 2d Perfect active, which the Grammarians of late have seen fit to bestow upon it. The reasons for retaining the former name, will be found at the beginning of the verb, in the Observations on the Middle Voice.

The Pluperfect

is formed from the Perfect, by prefixing ε and changing α into ειν, as τέτυπ-α, ἐτετέπ-ειν.

The First Aorist

is formed from the First Aorist Active, by adding μην, as ἔτυπα, ἐτυπάμην.

The First Future

is formed from the First Future Active, by changing ω into $\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\psi\text{-}\omega$, $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\psi\text{-}\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$.

Obs. In the Fourth Conjugation $\tilde{\omega}$ is changed into $\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\psi\alpha\lambda\tilde{\omega}$, $\psi\alpha\lambda\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, having the circumflex accent. This form comes from the old $\psi\alpha\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, Ionic $\psi\alpha\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, Attic $\psi\alpha\lambda\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$.

The Second Aorist

is formed from the Second Aorist Active, by changing ν into $\mu\eta\nu$, as $\acute{\epsilon}\tau\upsilon\pi\omicron\text{-}\nu$, $\acute{\epsilon}\tau\upsilon\pi\acute{\omicron}\text{-}\mu\eta\nu$.

The Second Future

is formed from the Second Future Active, by changing $\tilde{\omega}$ into $\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, as $\tau\upsilon\pi\text{-}\tilde{\omega}$, $\tau\upsilon\pi\text{-}\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$.

Obs. The Attics said $\acute{\epsilon}\delta\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, $\pi\iota\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$; instead of $\acute{\epsilon}\delta\omicron\upsilon\mu\alpha\iota$ from $\acute{\epsilon}\delta\omega$, I eat, and $\pi\iota\omicron\upsilon\mu\alpha\iota$ from $\pi\acute{\iota}\nu\omega$, I drink. But these are more probably present tenses which were used in a future sense, like $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\iota}\mu\iota$, I go, (am going), since the first syllable of $\pi\iota\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$ is usually long. Under this head may also be reckoned $\phi\acute{\alpha}\gamma\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, used by later writers.

General Observations on the Three Voices.

ACTIVE VOICE.

INDICATIVE.

Obs. 1. The third person plural of the Present, Future, and Perfect, of the Indicative Active, instead of $\sigma\iota\nu$ or $\sigma\iota$, has in the Doric dialect $\nu\iota$. This appears also to have been the primitive form, and the τ afterwards to have been changed into σ . Hence we have, by the rules of euphony, the long vowel or diphthong before $\sigma\iota$ in the common form; thus,

| | | | |
|--------|--|--|--|
| Prest. | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$, | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$, | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omicron\upsilon\sigma\iota$. |
| Fut. | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\psi\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$, | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\psi\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$, | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\psi\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$. |
| Perf. | $\tau\epsilon\tau\acute{\upsilon}\phi\alpha\nu\sigma\iota$, | $\tau\epsilon\tau\acute{\upsilon}\phi\alpha\nu\sigma\iota$, | $\tau\epsilon\tau\acute{\upsilon}\phi\alpha\sigma\iota$. |

The same remark will apply to the future form in $\tilde{\omega}$, and the tenses of the Subjunctive; thus,

|-------|---|
| Fut. | $\mu\epsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\mu\epsilon\nu\tilde{\omega}$, $\mu\epsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\nu\tau\iota$, $\mu\epsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$, $\mu\epsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\nu\sigma\iota$, $\mu\epsilon\nu\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\upsilon\sigma\epsilon$. |
| Subj. | $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omega\nu\tau\iota$, $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omega\nu\sigma\iota$, $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\omega\sigma\iota$. |

Obs. 2. From Obs. 1. the student will perceive the analogy between the third person plural in ον of the imperfect and second aorist, and that in οντι of the present and future, and also between the termination in αν of the third person plural of the first aorist and that in αντι of the perfect.

Obs. 3. The first person plural in μεν is converted in the Doric dialect into μες, as τύπτομες, λέγομες, εὔδομες, ἐτυψάμες.

Obs. 4. The second person in ς was often lengthened in the old language by the addition of the syllable θα, which has remained in the Æolic, Doric, Ionic, and, in some words, in the Attic dialect; thus, ἐθέλησθα, ἐπῆσθα, κλαίσισθα. In Attic there particularly occur ῆσθα for ῆς, from εἰμι; ἔφησθα for ἔφης, from φημι; and especially οἶσθα; instead of which the proper form οἶδας is very rarely found in the Attic writers.

Obs. 5. The termination ον of the third person plural imperfect and second aorist, was in some of the common dialects οσαν, and remained also in the Alexandrian dialect, (as ἐσχάζοσαν, Lycophr. 21.) particularly in the Greek Old Testament, or Septuagint, and in the New Testament. Thus we have, in these last, such forms as ἐφάγοσαν, ἀπήλθοσαν, παρήλθοσαν, ἐλάβοσαν, ῖδοσαν; for ἔφαγον, ἀπῆλθον, παρῆλθον, ἔλαβον, ῖδον, &c.

Obs. 6. Instead of the termination εισαν in the third person plural of the pluperfect, the form εσαν is more common in Ionic and Attic; as ἀκηκόεσαν, ἔεγγόνεσαν, ἐπεπλεύκεσαν.

IMPERATIVE.

Obs. In the third person plural of the Imperative, in Ionic and Attic, the termination όντων is more usual than έτωσαν, as πασχόντων for πασχέτωσαν, λεγόντων for λεγέτωσαν. The same form was also used by the Dorians. Some Doric writers omit the ν in this form, as ποιούντω, ἀποστείλάντω: hence the Imperatives in Latin, in the third person, amanto, docento, audiunto, &c.

OPTATIVE.

Obs. 1. Instead of the Optative in οιμι, there was also a form οιην, οιης, οιη, plural οιημεν, οιητε, οιησαν, contracted, in verbs in αω, into ώην, ώης, ώη, &c. which bears the name of Attic. It is found chiefly, however, in the contract verbs; as φιλοίην, ποιούην, ἐπερωτώην, νικώην, and hence also in the second future of barytons; as φανούην from φαίλω, fut. φανῶ.

Obs. 2. Instead of the form αιμι in the first Aorist of the Optative, the Attics chiefly use the primitive Æolic form, εια, ειας, ειε, after the example of the Ionians and Dorians, but only in the second and third persons singular, and third person plural. The Æolians use it also in the first.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Obs. 1. The third person singular of the Subjunctive, in Ionic, received the addition of the syllable σι, as ἔλθῃσι, λάβῃσι φέρῃσι, for ἔλθῃ, λάβῃ, φέρῃ.

Obs. 2. In the old poets, the subjunctive active, if the penultima be long, has, for the most part, in the first and second persons plural the short vowel instead of the long one, as θωρήξομεν, Il. β', 72. ἐρύξομεν, Od. δ, 297. ἀπολύσομεν, Il. κ', 443, &c. The student must not mistake any of these forms for futures.

INFINITIVE.

Obs. The infinitives in ειν and ναι, in the ancient language and in the dialects, had a form in μεν and μεναι. Assuming the form μεναι as the primitive one, we should, according to analogy, proceed thus ; τυπitéμεναι, by apocope, τυπitéμεν, by syncope, τυπitéν, by contraction, τύπτιεν. From τυπitéν comes also by contraction the Doric τύπτεν.

PASSIVE VOICE.

Obs. 1. The original termination of the second person singular of the Passive Voice was σαι in the Present, Futures, and Perfect of the Indicative ; σο in the Imperfect and Pluperfect of the Indicative and Present of the Imperative ; and ησαι in the Present of the Subjunctive. The Ionians dropped the σ, and accordingly converted σαι into σαι, σω into σο, and ησαι into ηαι ; and the common dialect again contracted these forms into η and ου, as follows :

| | Ion. | Com |
|--------------------------------|------------------|-----------------|
| Present Ind. τύπτεσαι , | τύπται , | τύπιη . |
| Subj. τύπησαι , | τύπιηαι , | τύπιη . |
| Imperf. Ind. ἐτυπτέσο , | ἐτυπτέο , | ἐτύπτου |
| Imp. τυπτέσω , | τυπτέο , | τύπτου . |

To these may be added the corresponding parts of the Middle Voice ; and also the first aorist, as ἐτυψάσο, ἐτυψάο, ἐτύψω. In the Optative, likewise, the same old form prevailed ; thus from οισι was formed οιο, which, as it does not admit of con traction, remained the common form.

Obs. 2. The primitive terminations in εσαι, εσο, &c. very probably continued in use in the less polished dialects as familiar colloquial forms. In the written language, however, they were retained only in the following cases: 1. In such irregular futures as ἔδομαι, πτομαι, φάγομαι, &c. thus ἔδέσαι, πτεσαι, φάγῃσαι. 2. In some of the contracted verbs; as ἀκροάομαι, ἀκροάεσαι, contracted ἀκροᾷσαι; ὀδυνάομαι, ὀδυναέσαι, contracted ὀδυνᾷσαι; καυχάομαι, καυχαέσαι, contracted καυχᾷσαι, &c. Many of these forms occur in the New Testament. 3. In the passive and middle voices of verbs in μι; as, ἵσταμαι, ἵστασαι; ἵσταμην, ἵτάσο, &c. though these verbs sometimes follow the forms in η. 4. In the perfect and pluperfect passive of all verbs, with the loss, however, of ε; as τέτυπαι for τετυπέσαι; ἔτετυπο for ἔτετυπέσο.

Obs. 3. The Attic form ει for the second person is retained, in modern editions of ancient authors, only in the verbs βούλομαι, οἶομαι, and the future of ἔπτομαι, as, βούλει, οἶει, ὕψει. This renders it easy to distinguish these from the Subjunctive forms, βούλη, οἶη. An examination, however, of ancient manuscripts, renders it very certain, that, by Thucydides, Plato, and the Dramatic writers, the form ει was constantly used in all verbs.

INDICATIVE.

Obs. 1. In the first person dual and plural, the Dorians and the poets interpose a σ; as τυπτόμεσθον, τυπτόμεσθα.

Obs. 2. In the third person plural of the perfect and pluperfect, the Ionians and Dorians change the ν before ται and το into ᾱ. This is likewise done in the third person plural of the Optative. The following rules, in general, regulate this change.

1. If the third person singular of the perfect and pluperfect end in ται or το pure, then, in the third person plural, the syllable preceding the inserted α is made short, as ἔαται for ἦνται; πεφιλᾶται for πεφίληνται; ἔατο for ἦντο; πεφιλᾶτο for πεφίληντο.

2. If ται be impure, then the preceding lenis becomes an aspirate, and if there be a σ, it is changed into δ or θ; as τέτυφαται for τετυμμένοι εισί; λέλεχαται for λελεγμένοι εισί; πέπληθαται for πεπλησμένοι εισί; ἔτειάχατο for τεταγμένοι ἦσαν.

3. But the Optative retains its diphthong before α, as γενοιᾶτο for γένοιντο; τύπτοιᾶτο for τύπτοιντο.

Obs. 3. In like manner ν is sometimes omitted in the third person plural of the present and imperfect indicative passive and middle, and also in that of the present and aorists of the Optative.

IMPERATIVE.

Obs. Instead of the termination ωσαν in the third person plural of the imperative, the form ων is very much used in Ionic, Doric, and particularly Attic; as ἐπέσθων for ἐπέσθωσαν; κτεινέσθων for κτεινέσθωσαν, &c.

SUBJUNCTIVE.

Obs. The perfect of the Subjunctive, when the perfect Indicative ends in μαι pure, as μεμνῶμαι, πεφιλῶμαι, is said seldom to occur, and the circumlocution to be more common, as πεφιλημένος ὤ, &c.

OPTATIVE.

Obs. In the Optative aorists, the Attics commonly have in the plural the form εἴμεν, εἴτε, εἴεν. The prose writers in the same dialect always have εἶεν in the third person plural. This form is used also by Homer, as περιηθείμεν, Od. π', 305. διακρινθεῖτε, Il. γ', 192, &c.

INFINITIVE.

Obs. The infinitive of the aorist has, in Doric, the termination ῆμεν for ῆναι, as λασθήμεν for λασθῆναι; διακριθήμεν for διακριθῆναι; ἀποτραπήμεν for ἀποτραπῆναι; and sometimes also ῆμεναι, as φανῆμεναι for φανῆναι; ἀριθμηθήμεναι for ἀριθμηθῆναι; ἀναβῆμεναι for ἀναβῆναι.

DEPONENT VERBS.

The Deponent Verbs are to be distinguished from the Middle, since they have the form of Passives, but the sense of Actives, as, αἰσθάνομαι, δέχομαι, γίνομαι, δέομαι, δύναμαι, &c.

Some of these, in the Perfect and Aorist, have the form of the Passive, others of the Middle; in others, one of the tenses has the Passive, the other the Middle form, as αἰσθάνομαι, ἥσθημαι, ἥσθόμην; δέχομαι, δέδεγμαι, έδεξάμην; γίνομαι, γεγέννημαι and γένονα, έγενόμην; εργάζομαι, εργασμαι, εργασάμην; ερχομαι ἦλθον, έληλυθα; ἡγέομαι, ἡγηναι, ἡγησάμην; μαίνομαι, μέμνηνα, έμάνην; μάχομαι, μεμάχημαι, έμαχεσάμην. A deponent of this kind seldom has a perfect of the active form, as οἶχομαι, οἶχωκα.

The following is a Synopsis of their form :

| | Indic. | Imper. | Opt. | Subj. | Infin. | Part. |
|------------|------------|---------|---------|---------|--------|---------|
| Present. | δέχομαι | δέχ-ου | -οιμην | -ωμαι | -εσθαι | -ομενος |
| Imperf. | έδεχόμην | | -οιμην | -ωμαι | -εσθαι | -ομενος |
| Perfect. | δέδεγμαι | δέδε-ξο | -γμένος | -γμένος | -χθαι | -γμενος |
| Pluperf. | έδεδέγμην | | -ετην | -ω | -χθαι | -γμενος |
| P. p. Fut. | δεδεξ-ομαι | | -οιμην | | -εσθαι | -ομενος |
| 1 Aor. M. | έδεξάμην | δέξ-αι | -αίμην | -ωμαι | -ασθαι | -αμενος |
| 1 Fut. M. | δέξ-ομαι | | -οιμην | | -εσθαι | -ομενος |

A few of these Verbs have a Second Aorist Middle ; as πυνθίνομαι, έπυθόμην.

Perhaps it would be more analogical to consider them as Defective Verbs, whose Active is Obsolete, and which want some of the Passive and Middle Tenses.

Contracted Verbs.

Verbs in αω, εω, and οω, are contracted in the Present and Imperfect Tenses.

Verbs in αω contract αω, αο, and αου into ω, as τιμάω, τιμῶ, to honour ; τιμάομεν, τιμῶμεν ; τιμάουσι, τιμῶσι :—else into α, as τίμαε, τίμα :—ι is subscribed, as τιμάοιμι, τιμῶμι ; τιμάεις, τιμᾷς ; &c.

Verbs in εω contract εε into εῖ, and εο into οῦ, as φίλεε, φίλει ; φιλέομεν, φιλοῦμεν ;—else they drop ε, as φιλέω, φιλῶ, to love ; φιλείεις, φιλεῖς.

Verbs in οω contract ο before a long vowel into ῶ, as χρυσόω, χρυσῶ, to gild ;—before a short vowel or ου, into οῦ, as χρυσόετε, χρυσοῦτε ; χρυσόουσι, χρυσοῦσι :—otherwise into οῖ, as χρυσόης, χρυσοῖς. In the Infin. οειν is contracted into οῦν.

Remarks on the Contract Verbs.

Obs. 1. The uncontracted or original form of these verbs is, as far as relates to verbs in έω, peculiar to the Ionic dialect. In the other verbs it is wholly disused, with the exception of a few poetical forms in άω.

Obs. 2. In verbs in άω, the Æolians pronounced separately the ι subscribed in the second and third persons singular of the Present Indicative, as τιμάις for τιμᾶς; γελάις for γελᾶς; τιμάι for τιμᾶ; γελάι for γελᾶ.

Obs. 3. Verbs in άω often change α into ε in the Ionic dialect, as όρέω, όρέομεν, for όράω, όράομεν; χρέεται for χρᾶται, &c.

Obs. 4. The Doric dialect, which elsewhere invariably adopts ᾱ for η, departs from this usage in the case of Contract Verbs, and makes use of η without the ι subscribed in the place of all contractions in αι and ει, as όρῆν for όρᾶν; τολμῆτε for τολμᾶτε; κοσμῆν for κοσμῆν. This species of contraction finds its way also into the Attic dialect, but in general only in the following verbs, ζάω, πεινάω, διψάω, χρησθαι. Thus, for example, ζάω, ζῆς, ζῆ, ζῆτε, &c. imperf. ἔζων, ἔξης, ἔζη, &c. infin. ζῆν.

Obs. 5. The Doric and Ionic dialects use for εον in the first person singular, and third person plural, of the imperfect, the form ευν. The Dorians use this kind of contraction also in verbs in άω, which, however, were formed in έω, as ἀνηρώ-τευν from ἀνερωτέω, just as they said ἀγαπέω for ἀγαπάω.

ACTIVE VOICE.

IMPERATIVE.

Obs. The remark made respecting the form οντων for ετωσαν, in the third person plural of the Imperative of barytone verbs will apply also to contract verbs; as κοινωνούντων for κοινωνεῖτωσαν.

OPTATIVE.

Obs. 1. The Optative in οιμι, particularly in the contract verbs, has also in Attic the termination οιην or ῶην; as φιλοιην, τιμῶην; the third person plural is, as in the common form φιλοίσιν, τιμῶσιν. The Attics, however, often use the common form οιμι, ῶμι, for οιην, ῶην.

Obs. 2. This form οιην is found also in Ionic and Doric writers. And, as verbs in άω were, by the Ionians, conjugated in έω, we find in their writers διαπηδοιη, ἐρωτοιη, for διαπηδῶη, ἐρωτῶη.

INFINITIVE.

Obs. 1. The Doric form $\tilde{\eta}\nu$ for $\alpha\epsilon\iota\nu$, $\epsilon\epsilon\iota\nu$, has been already noticed. The Æolians had a peculiar form for the Infinitive of contract verbs, in which form the final ν was changed into ς , and the improper diphthongs η , α , into the proper $\alpha\iota$, and also $\omicron\epsilon\iota$ into $\omicron\iota$; thus $\gamma\epsilon\lambda\alpha\tilde{\iota}\varsigma$, $\pi\epsilon\iota\nu\alpha\tilde{\iota}\varsigma$, $\psi\psi\omicron\tilde{\iota}\varsigma$, $\delta\rho\theta\omicron\tilde{\iota}\varsigma$, for $\gamma\epsilon\lambda\tilde{\alpha}\nu$, $\pi\epsilon\iota\nu\tilde{\eta}\nu$, $\psi\psi\omicron\tilde{\nu}$, $\delta\rho\theta\omicron\tilde{\nu}$.

Obs. 2. The Dorians changed the contracted Infinitive $\omicron\tilde{\nu}$ into $\tilde{\omega}\nu$, in verbs in $\tilde{\omega}$; as $\delta\iota\delta\tilde{\omega}\nu$ for $\delta\iota\delta\omicron\tilde{\nu}$, (i. e. $\delta\iota\delta\omicron\nu\alpha\iota$), $\phi\acute{\iota}\gamma\tilde{\omega}\nu$ for $\phi\acute{\iota}\gamma\omicron\tilde{\nu}$, &c.

PARTICIPLES.

Obs. In the Participle, the Dorians said $\epsilon\tilde{\upsilon}\sigma\alpha$ for $\epsilon\omicron\nu\sigma\alpha$ and $\acute{\alpha}\nu\sigma\alpha$. The Ionians used this form in verbs in $\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, as $\tilde{\upsilon}\mu\nu\epsilon\tilde{\upsilon}\sigma\alpha\iota$ for $\tilde{\upsilon}\mu\nu\omicron\tilde{\upsilon}\sigma\alpha\iota$. The form $\alpha\omicron$ was contracted by the Dorians into $\tilde{\alpha}$, as $\pi\epsilon\iota\nu\tilde{\alpha}\nu\tau\iota$ for $\pi\epsilon\iota\nu\alpha\omicron\nu\tau\iota$. The Æolians formed the terminations of the Participles ending in $\tilde{\omega}\nu$, in $\epsilon\iota\varsigma$, because they formed the verbs in $\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\acute{\alpha}\omega$, in $\eta\mu\iota$; thus, $\delta\rho\epsilon\iota\varsigma$, $\sigma\tau\omicron\iota\chi\epsilon\iota\varsigma$, from $\delta\rho\eta\mu\iota$, $\sigma\tau\omicron\iota\chi\eta\mu\iota$.

PASSIVE VOICE.

Obs. 1. The Ionians and Dorians lengthen all circumflex terminations by the insertion of another vowel, whether the termination be contracted or not; thus, 1. In contracted terminations, the long vowel which arises from the contraction is extended by the repetition of itself, or of the short vowel; as $\delta\rho\acute{\alpha}\alpha\varsigma$ for $\delta\rho\acute{\alpha}\tilde{\alpha}\varsigma$; $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\alpha}\alpha$ for $\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\alpha}\tilde{\alpha}$; $\delta\rho\acute{\omega}$ for $\delta\rho\acute{\omega}\tilde{\omega}$; $\beta\omicron\acute{\omega}\omega\sigma\iota$ for $\beta\omicron\acute{\omega}\tilde{\omega}\sigma\iota$. 2. Without the contraction, as $\acute{\epsilon}\mu\beta\acute{\eta}\eta$ for $\acute{\epsilon}\mu\beta\acute{\eta}\tilde{\eta}$; $\phi\acute{\eta}\eta$ for $\phi\acute{\eta}\tilde{\eta}$. The Ionic prose writers only prefix an ϵ to the circumflexed termination, as $\delta\iota\alpha\phi\upsilon\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\iota\nu$ for $\delta\iota\alpha\phi\upsilon\gamma\acute{\epsilon}\tilde{\iota}\nu$.

Obs. 2. As the Ionians form the second person of the common conjugation in $\epsilon\alpha\iota$ and $\epsilon\omicron$, the verbs in $\epsilon\omega$ are subject to a multiplication of vowels, as $\pi\omicron\iota\acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\alpha\iota$, $\acute{\epsilon}\pi\alpha\iota\nu\acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\alpha\iota$, &c. which, however, in the case of $\acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\omicron$ is remedied by an elision of the ϵ , as $\acute{\epsilon}\pi\omicron\iota\acute{\epsilon}\omicron$.

VERBS IN MI.

1. The number of Verbs in $\mu\iota$ in the Attic and in the common dialect is very small, and in these few there are only some which have in the greater part of their tenses a form peculiar to themselves, and different from the conjugation in ω , and which accord with each other in the formation and termination of their tenses ; as τιθημι, ἵημι, ἵστημι, δίδωμι, Others again have a peculiar inflexion, in many points differing from the conjugation of the verbs in the examples ; as εἰμι, I am ; εἶμι, I go ; and others again, as well as all verbs in νμι, occur only in the present and imperfect, deriving the rest of their tenses from the radical form in ύω.

2. These verbs were chiefly used in the Æolo-Doric dialect, and, in the writers of that dialect, verbs very frequently occur in the form μι, which are otherwise in έω and άω ; as νικημι for νικάω ; δρημι for δράω ; χρήμι for χράω ; δνημι for δνέω ; φιλημι for φιλέω, &c.

3. Verbs in μι, therefore, are properly of Æolic origin, or rather, they existed already in the old Greek language which was used by Homer and Hesiod, and in which the dialects were as yet mingled together. The Ionic and Attic dialects, which first assumed a determinate form, retained some of these verbs in μι. The Æolians, however, who retained the most of the ancient language, made the greatest use of them.

4. Notwithstanding this antiquity, however, these verbs appear to have come from older forms in άω, έω, όω ; partly because their futures, and sometimes also their perfects and aorists, are regularly derived from such verbs, and partly because they always have a determined relation to such verbs.

Formation of Verbs in MI.

Verbs in μι are formed from Verbs of the Third Conjugation in άω, έω, όω, and ύω.

1. By prefixing the Reduplication with ι.

2. By changing ω into μι.

3. By lengthening the Penultima.

Exception 1st. In prefixing the Reduplication, if the verb begin with an aspirated consonant, the corresponding smooth mute must be employed in its place.

Exception 2nd. If the verb begins with a vowel, or with πι, or σι, then ι alone is prefixed with the rough breathing : this is called the Improper Reduplication.

Exception 3d. Verbs in νμι have no Reduplication ; nor have those verbs in μι any, which are formed from trisyllables, as πρεμνάω, πρέμνημι ; the following verb also wants the Reduplication, viz. φήμι from φάω ;

Thus, from στάω is formed ἵστημι, to stand, from θέω τίθημι, to place, from δύω δίδωμι, to give,
 from δεικνύω δείκνυμι, to shew, from ἔω ἵημι, to send,
 from πτάω ἵπτημι, to fly.

Obs. 1. In the formation of ἵστημι, ἵημι, and ἵπτημι, the second Exception operates : in forming τίθημι, the first Exception takes effect, since τίθημι is for θίθημι : in forming δίδωμι, the regular Rule No. 1. is applied ; and lastly, in forming δείκνυμι, we are governed by the third Exception.

Obs. 2. The most striking difference between verbs in μι and verbs in ω, is in the 1st. and 3d. persons singular, present Indicative, and the 2d. person singular of the Imperative.

Verbs in μι have only three Tenses of that form : the Present, Imperfect, and Second Aorist. They take the other Tenses generally from verbs in ω ; thus δίδωμι makes δώσω, δέδωκα, from δύω.

Verbs in μι have no 2d. Future, 2d. Aorist Passive, nor Perfect Middle.

Verbs in νυμι, besides having no Reduplication, want the Second Aorist, and the Optative and Subjunctive Moods. They borrow the two last from Verbs in νω.

FORMATION OF THE TENSES.

The Imperfect

is formed from the Present by prefixing the Augment and changing μι into ν, as τίθηναι, ἐτίθην.

The Second Aorist

is formed from the Imperfect by dropping the Reduplication and receiving, in place of the remaining initial vowel, the Syllabic Augment, as ἐτίθην, ἔθην; ἐδίδων, ἔδων.

If the Verb has no Reduplication, the Second Aorist is the same in form with the Imperfect.

The Second Aorist Middle

is formed from the Imperfect, by dropping the Reduplication, as in the Second Aorist Active; as ἐτιθέμην, ἐθέμην; ἰστάμην, ἐστάμην.

Special Remark respecting the Verb Ἰστημι.

The Perfect, Pluperfect, and Second Aorist, Active, of ἰστημι, have an intransitive, the rest of the tenses a transitive, signification. The Perfect has also the signification of a present, arising from its continued meaning, and the Pluperfect the signification of an Imperfect: Thus, ἰσ-τημι, I place; ἰστην, I was placing; ἐσθηκα, I have placed myself, and continue placed, i. e. I stand; εἰσθήκειν, I had placed myself, and continued placed, i. e. I was standing; ἔστην, I stood.—The 1st. Aorist, ἔσθησα, denotes merely I placed.

General Remarks on Verbs in ιι.

ACTIVE VOICE.

INDICATIVE.

Obs. 1. The Ionic and Doric dialects often use the forms in ἔω, ἄω, ὥω, in the Present and Imperfect Singular, with the Reduplication, as τιθεῖς, διδοῖς, ἰδίδους; whether the contracted form in the present was used by the Attics also is a matter of dispute.

Obs. 2. In the third person plural Present Indicative, σι appears to have come from τι, in conformity with what was stated under the Barytone Verbs. The old termination in τι, underwent in each case one of two changes: 1. either the short vowel was lengthened after rejecting ν before τι, so that ε became σι, ο became ου, and ᾱ and υ were changed into ᾱ and υ; as τιθέντι, τιθένσι, τιθεῖσι; διδόντι, διδόνσι, διδοῦσι; ἰσταντι, ἰστανσι, ἰστιάσι; zeugnunti, zeugnonsi, zeugnousi; or else, 2. the ν before the termination was changed, in the Ionic manner, into α, as τιθέασι, δίδεασι, zeugnᾱσι. The form in ασι is called the Ionic, though often used by the Attics.

Obs. 3. In ἰστημι, the Perfect ἕστηκα is most approved; the form ἕστακα, which is given in the common grammars, is chiefly found in later writers only, and in a transitive sense. The Doric form ἕσιᾱκα with α long, is distinct, however, from this.

Obs. 4. Instead of ἕστηκα the form ἕστα, contracted by syncope, is more used; as ἕσταμεν for ἕστήκαμεν; ἕστατε for ἕστήκατε, &c. Hence the Participle ἑστώς for ἑστήκως. In striking out the κ from ἑστήκα, the form ἑστήα remains; the η is then changed into α, as ἑστάα, which is farther contracted into the form ἕστα. In the Participle ἑστήκως, the η remains unchanged into α, and a contraction into ως immediately takes place.

Obs. 5. Some irregularities occur in the formation of the Perfect of these Verbs. Thus, Verbs in μι, derived from έω, change η in the penultima of the Perfect into σι, as θήσω, τέθεικα. This change of η into σι, was originally peculiar to the Bœotians, a branch of the Æolians, but was afterwards retained in the other dialects. vid. remarks on the verb εἰμι, to be.

Obs. 6. The First Aorist, in most of these verbs, differs essentially from the formation of that tense in Verbs in ω. For, instead of retaining the σ of the future, the Verbs in μι generally change it into κ, as θήσω, ἔθηκα; ῥίω, ῥήκα; δῶσω, ἔδωκα. Perhaps these forms in α were originally Perfects, but were afterwards used as Aorists, when a peculiar form was introduced for the Perfect. The forms also of the Aorists in κα, have not the rest of the Moods, nor the Participles.

Obs. 7. The First Aorist in κα, occurs in good authors only in the singular number, and third person plural. In the rest of the persons the Second Aorist is more used, which again hardly ever occurs in the singular.

Obs. 8. The Second Aorist retains the long vowel in the penultima of the Dual and Plural, except in τιθῆμι, δίδωμι, and ἵημι. The third person plural is often syncopated, as ἔβαν for ἔβησαν; ἔθεν for ἔθεσαν.

IMPERATIVE.

Obs. 1. In the second person of the Present Imperative, the contracted form is very frequent in τιθῆμι, ἵημι, and δίδωμι, as τιθεῖ, ἵεῖ, δίδου. For ἵσταθι we find more commonly ἵστη.

Obs. 2. In the Second Aorist, the second person is always θές, δός, not θέτι, δόθι. In Compound Verbs, the termination στα is frequently found for σιῆθι, as ἄναστα for ἀναστήθι; παράστα for παραστήθι.

Obs. 3. The third person plural of the Present and Second Aorist ends, as in Verbs in ω, frequently in εντων for τωσαν; as παραθέντων for παραθέτωσαν.

OPTATIVE.

Obs. The Optative Present and Second Aorist have in the plural, in the Poets as well as prose writers, more commonly εἰμεν, εἴτε, εἶεν; αἰμεν, αἴτε, αἶεν; οἰμεν, οἴτε, οἶεν.

PASSIVE AND MIDDLE VOICES.

Obs. In the second person singular of the Present in the Passive and Middle, the Ionic dialect drops the σ, and the Attic contracts that resolution, as ἵστασαι, Ionic ἵστααι, Attic ἵστη; ἔθεσο, Ion. ἔθεο, Att. ἔθου

INDICATIVE.

Obs. The First Aorist Middle of τιθῆμι and δίδωμαι, want the rest of the Moods and Participles.

IMPERATIVE.

Obs. The Imperative θοῦ, for θέσο θέο, occurs only in the compounds, as περίθου, ὑπόθου, παράθου. In ἵσταμαι, ἵτω is more common than ἵτασο. The Second Aorist Imperative and Optative Middle of ἵστημι, namely, στάσο and σταίμην, are given in the conjugation of that Verb merely to show the analogy. They are seldom used.

OPTATIVE.

Obs. The Present Passive, and Second Aorist Middle of this Mood, have frequently the form of the Optative of a Barytone Verb in ω, as τιθοιτο, ἐπιθολιμεθα, πρόσθοιτο, &c.

IRREGULAR OR DEFECTIVE VERBS IN μ may be divided into Three Classes, each containing three Verbs.

I. From $\xi\omega$ are derived $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\mu\acute{\iota}$, to be ; $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\mu$ and $\dot{\iota}\eta\mu$, to go.

Remarks on Εἶμι, to go.

Obs. 1. The Verb εἶμι in the Present has regularly the signification of the Future, both in the Ionic and Attic writers, especially in the latter, as εἶμι καὶ ἀγγελῶ, Eurip. I will go and announce; ἔμμεν καὶ ἐπιχειρήσομεν, Dem. we will go and endeavour. We have in English an usage precisely analogous, in the verb “to go.” Thus we say, “I am going to run,” “I am going to do it.” A colloquial and vulgar barbarism renders this still more apparent, viz. “I am going to go.” In Homer also we have forms of expression precisely analogous, as βῆ δ’ ἵεναι, literally “he went to go,” βῆ δὲ θέειν, “he went to run.” In these, however, the future force is obscured by the use of the imperfect, since the true force of the phrase is that, he was going to go while some other action was at the same time pending.

Obs. 2. In the second person singular Present Indicative, εἶ is more used in Attic than εἶς.

Obs. 3. The Imperfect and Second Aorist belong to Epic poetry; but ἴς and ἴεν, ἴτην and ἴσαν are all that can be found except in composition. Matthiæ makes ἴον an old poetic Imperfect; and εἶν, εἶς, εἶ, in the Imperfect, to be a mere invention of the Grammarians which do not occur.

Obs. 4. The mode of conjugating εἶμι, as far as regards εἶα, ἴια, ῖα, and ῖεν, has been retained. It is the opinion of Buttmann, however, in which he is joined by Matthiæ, that ῖεν is merely a form of the Imperfect εἶν, analogous to ῖειδεν, ῖιον, ῖεταν, which in time, on account of its resemblance to the Pluperfect, was conjugated as such; but that ῖα is originally the Ionic form, as ἔα, ῖα, for ῖν, from εἶμι. This ῖα has the ι subscribed on account of the radical form ἴω. In ῖεν, however, it appears to have been retained improperly, merely from its common derivation as a Pluperfect from ῖα. In confirmation of this opinion it is added, that these forms never have the sense of the Perfect or Pluperfect, but only that of the Imperfect and Aorist: ῖα is written in Ionic ἴια. Blomfield, however, in his remarks on Matthiæ's grammar, considers ῖα to be actually the First Aorist from εἶω, or εἶμι, εο; thus ἴισα contracted into ῖα, as ἔχυσα into ἔχυσυα, and ἔκησα (from κῆω) into ἔκησυα. He farther observes, that in his opinion it may always be construed as an Aorist.

Obs. 5. The Imperative ἴθι is more used than εἶ.

Obs. 2. The Attics in the Second Aorist have εἰμεν, εἴτε, εἶσαν; thus, ἀνείμεν, ἀνείτε, ἀνείσαν; ἀφείμεν, ἀφείτε, ἀφείσαν.

Obs. 3. ῥΙημι, in the Active Voice, signifies I send another; ῥΙεμαι, in the Middle Voice, I send myself. Hence it is generally used in the latter Voice in the sense of wishing; thus, ἱεται αἰνῶς, Hom. Od. β', 327. He earnestly wishes. In this sense it is the root of ἡμερος, a desire, and of ἡμεῖω, to desire.

Obs. 2. The compound κάθημαι is more common than the simple ἤμαι. This has also an Optative, καθολιμην, and a Subjunctive, κάθωμαι. In the Imperfect it has ἐκαθήμην and καθήμην, ἐκαθήτο and καθήστο. The Grammarians consider καθήμην and καθήστο the better forms.

Participle ἴσας, in the dative ἴσαιτι, Pind. Pyth. 3, 52. In common use, the dual and plural are only used, as ἴστον, ἴστον (for ἴσαστον), ἴσμεν, ἴστε, (for ἴσασμεν, ἴσαστε,) ἴσασι. These are attached to οἶδα; thus οἶδα, οἶσθα, οἶδε, Dual. ἴστον, ἴστον, Pl. ἴσμεν, ἴστε, ἴσασι.

Obs. 2. For ἴσμεν, the Ionians have ἰδμεν, which arose either from changing σ into δ, or was more probably abbreviated from οἶδαμεν.

Obs. 3. Ἐπισταμαι is not, as some have imagined, formed from ἴσημι, but appears properly to be the middle voice of ἐφίστημι, the same as ἐφίστημι τὸν ροῦν, retaining the Ionic form for ἐφίσταμαι.

Remarks on Φημι.

Obs. 1. In place of ἐφην, ἐφης, ἐφη, in the Imperfect Indicative Active, the form ἦν, ἦς, ἦ, is frequently used; as ἦ δ' ὅς, said he; ἦν, δ' ἐγώ, said I. A form for the Present is ἦμι, which occurs in Aristophanes, Nub. 1145; Ran. 37.

Obs. 2. The imperfect ἐφην, &c. is generally placed after one or more words of the speaker, like the Latin inquit, even when another word of the same signification precedes: as, Ὁ δὲ Κύρος εἶπε, οὗτοι εἰς καιρὸν ἦκεῖς, ἐφη. Xen. Cyrop. 3, 1, 8.

Obs. The infinitive φάναι is always used in the sense of past time, e. g. φάναι τὸν Σωκράτη, "that Socrates has said."

A General List of Irregular and Defective Verbs.

THERE are few Verbs in the Greek language, which can be regularly conjugated in all their Moods and Tenses. Some of these deficiencies may be traced to harmony: of others, it is difficult to assign the causes. Defective Tenses are supplied either from obsolete forms of the same Verbs, from kindred forms in other dialects, or from some other Verbs in use. To assist the learner in tracing these tenses to their respective Themes or Roots, the following list has been compiled. It consists of analogies, as far as they can be applied to any species of Verbs; but in general it contains the particular formation of each tense in common use.

Of the following Verbs, those which are used only in the Present and Imperfect, will be found in the first column; the next column will contain the obsolete Roots, followed by the Tenses, which are formed from them.

Verbs in αθω, derivatives,⁵ as διωκάθω, from διώκω, to pursue.

Verbs in αιω, derivatives,⁶ as κεραίω, from κεράω, to mix.

1. "Αγω, to break, conjugated with the Digamma, ῥάγω, forms ἔφαξα, ἔφαχα, ἔφαγον. But as the Digamma is seldom expressed in writing, the words will be ἔαξα, ἔαχα, ἔαγον.

2. The aorist ἡξα is not used by good writers. We have likewise in the passive voice, perf. ἡγμαι; 1. aor. ἡχθην; fut. ἀχθήσομαι; and an old form which remained in Doric, ἀγήγοχα or ἀγάγοχα and ἀγήοχα.

3. This seems to be put for ἔφαδα. That ἄδω had the Digamma appears from εὔαδε, Odyss. π', 28.

4. Verbs of these three classes, and others in this list of the same form have generally the Pres. and Imperf. only.

5. In this list, Derivatives are those which are derived from other Verbs.

6. From Substantives and Adjectives, verbs in αω, εω, υω, ενω, αζω, ιζω, αινω, υνω, are generally derived; as τιμάω from τιμή, φιλέω, from φίλος,

1. εἰλάμην is a later Alexandrian form.

2. ἤλωκα and ἤλων, are used in a passive sense, as is also ἄλωσομαι, the future middle.

3. In the Attic poets this verb always occurs in the perfect without an augment, but with it in the pluperfect.

4. ἄρω has, according to its two significations, two different futures. In the sense of "to annex," "to adapt," it has fut. ἄρωσιν, aor. ἤρσα, &c. In the sense of "to render favourable," "to conciliate," it agrees in flexion with the former only in ἄρσαντες κατὰ θυμόν, Il. d. 136, ἤραρε θυμόν ἰδωδῶ, Od. ε. 95. Otherwise it makes fut. ἄρέσω, &c.

1. This verb has with the Ionians the causative signification, "to bring." This signification is exclusive in the fut. act. βήσω, and 1st. aor. ἔβησα.

2. Βέομαι occurs in Homer in the sense of ζήσομαι, "I shall live;" properly, "I shall walk upon the earth." Here the subjunctive receives the sense of the future, as is probably the case in πίομαι for πίωμαι, although elsewhere it is never used thus.

1. To the old root γενέω, which corresponds with the Latin gigno, belong two significations; the causative beget, and the immediate or intransitive am born, become. The voices are anomalously intermingled. The whole, as found in actual use, may be reduced to a two-fold present; as follows:

1. γείνομαι, has only the signification of birth, (poetically in the present tense) am born. In the aorist, ἐγενάμην is used transitively, beget, bear.

2. γίνομαι (Ancient and Attic; more recently γίνομαι) fut. γενήσομαι, &c. The future, 2d. aorist and perfects passive and middle signify intransitively born, or simply become. To these unites itself the signification of simply to be, and ἐγενόμην and γέγονα are also used as perfects to εἶναι.

2. γίγνωσκω Ancient and Attic; more recently γινώσκω.

3. The perfect δέδια is either formed from δέδοικα, by omitting κ, as in δέδαα, γέγαα, and changing the diphthong into the short vowel, as ἐτέπιθμεν, ἐέκτην, from πέποιθα, ἔοικα; or else it is immediately derived from the present δίω; as in δέδουπα, ἄνωγα. This form in the plural suffers syncope; as, δέδιμεν δέδιτε, pluperf. ἐδέδισαν, for δεδίαμεν, δεδίατε, ἐδεδίσαν. In Attic δέδια is only used by the poets.

4. The student must be careful not to confound this with the regular contracted verb δράω, to do.

| οἶδα. | | | |

Verbs in εινω, poetical, as ἐρεείνω, to ask.

1. The regular forms of this verb, viz. δοκήσω, ἰδόκησα, &c. occur only in the Poets and old prose writers.

2. This verb originally connects the immediate signification enter, with the causative enclose. In the common usage it has only the latter (to enclose, to sink, &c.) and retains this meaning in the future and 1st aorist, δύσω, ἔδωσα, passive ἰδύσθην. The middle voice δόσμαι, I enclose myself, passes into the intransitive meaning enter, descend, &c. which, however, again reverts to a transitive meaning, as, enter a garment, that is, to dress. These significations of the immediate kind are retained in the active voice, in the perfect δέδωκα, and the 2d Aorist, ἔδων, ἔδυναι, δύς, δῦθι, δῦτε. The form δύνω is more recent, and is equivalent in signification to the middle δόσμαι.

3. The middle voice has the signification "I arouse myself," i. e. I am wakeful, I watch.

4. Εἶδω has two senses, see and know. In the first signification it occurs only in the 2d aorist, εἶδον, in Homer ἴδον, imperative ἰδέ, opt. ἴδοιμι, subj. ἴδω, infin. ἰδεῖν, part. ἰδών. These forms are used to supply the defective tense of ὁράω, which has no 2d. aorist. In the sense of to know, it does not occur in the present; instead of the present, and in the same sense, the perfect οἶδα is used. The manner of inflecting οἶδα (some parts of which are not found in good writers, viz. οἶδαμεν, οἶδατε, οἶδασι) may be seen in the remarks upon ἴσθμι, among the verbs in μι.—Besides these two meanings, εἶδω has also in the old poets a passive form in the sense of to appear, to resemble, to be seen.

Verbs in ειω, signifying desire, formed from Futures, as ὄψείω, to desire to see, from ὄπτω, F. ὄψω.

To drive, Ἐλαύνω,³ ἐλάω, ἐλάσω, ἤλασα, ἤλασάμην, ἤλακα and ἐλήλακα, ἤλαμαι, ἐλήλαμαι and ἤλασμαι, ἤλασθην and ἤλάσθην.

| make red, | ἔρυθαινω, | | ἔρῶ, ἔρῶ, ἔρῶ, ἔρῶ, ἔρῶ, ἔρῶ. |

1. The second aorist εἶπον, &c. is more common than the 1st. aorist, εἶπα, &c. With this aorist use has associated the fut. ἐρῶ (Ionic ἐρέω) from εἶρω—As the present of this verb, φημί is used; sometimes also ἀγορεύειν. In some compounds λέγω furnishes the present, as ἀντιλέγω, ἀντεῖπον. As regards the form of the perfect εἶρηκα, we must suppose either that ἐρῶ, ἐρήμαι were also used, or that the ει was arbitrarily considered as an augment, which might be again taken from the verb, as if the present tense had been ρέω. For otherwise the derivatives ῥῆμα, ῥῆσις, ῥῆτωρ from εἰ-ρημαι, εἰ-ρησαι, εἰ-ρηται, cannot be explained. To this arbitrary root may be referred also ἐρέβην or ἐρήβην, ῥηθῆναι, ῥηθείς. Εἰρέθη in Herodotus is analogous to εἶρηκα, εἶρηται, as εὔρηται, εὔρεθην. Others derive ἐρήβην from a peculiar form ρέω, which, however, if it ever did exist, was first derived from εἶρηκα in the same arbitrary manner.

2. See preceding note.

3. The root of ἐλαύνω, is ἐλω, which, besides ἐλάω, and ἐλαύνω, admits the forms ἐλλω, εἴλω, εἰλέω, ἔλλω, to bring together, compel, drive into a corner. From εἴλω, ἔλλω, comes the Homeric ἔλσας, ἔλσαι, to crowd together, to drive together: from εἰλέω, ἀπειλέω, comes ἀπειληθείς in Herodotus; from ἔλλω comes, perhaps, also the Homeric ἔλῃην, ἔλεις, ἔλῃναι, (as ἐστῆλῃην from στελλῶ), at least it agrees entirely in its signification with ἔλλω, εἰλέω, and hence points to a similar origin. From ἔλλω appear likewise to come ἄελλα, a storm; ἀόλης, collective, assembled. From ἐλα the perf. mid. the form οὔλος, as οὔλαι τρίχες.—The Æolians said ἐλαῖω for ἐλαύνω, the Bœotians used ἐλάω.

4. Of this ancient verb compounds for the most part only are in use; it has ει for an augment, as διδείπον. The 2d. aorist forms are rather poetical. The verb ἔπομαι, I follow, has an aorist which corresponds with the active ἔπω, except that in the indicative it is aspirated; ἔσπομην, σπον, σπίσθαι, which forms occur chiefly in composition.

5. This verb occurs in the common language only as an aorist, ἡρόμην, ἤρετο, whence also the other moods are found. The defective parts are supplied from ἐρωτάω.

1. This verb is used only in the present and imperfect; yet ἔειν is very frequently met with for ἔρχομαι. The Attics do not use the future ἐλεύσομαι from ἐλεύθω, but take in its stead εἶμι in the sense of the future. Some later Attic writers, however, use the form ἐλεύσομαι.

2. As ἔχω has a 2d. aorist, formed by inserting σ; so from ἔχω is formed a 2d. aorist, ἔσχον, in the middle ἐσχομην; and, in the same manner as in ἔσπον, σπεῖν, σπών, this ε is omitted in the rest of the moods, as if it had been an augment. From this ἔσχον, ἔχω is made into ἰσχω, (as ἐνίσπω from ἐνέπω) which, in Attic more particularly, often occurs in the same sense as ἔχω. The forms of the aorist without ε are again made the basis of other forms (as σπεῖν of σπεύδειν,) and from the present σχέω, which is only imaginary, comes, on the one hand, the fut. σχήσω, middle, σχήσομαι) which the Grammarians without reason call more Attic than ἔχομαι) perf. έσχηκα, &c. which are chiefly used in composition.

3. The old classic writers use the tenses from βιδω, βιώσομαι, ἐβίωσα, βεβίωται, in preference to those from ζάω. And yet ζήσουσι occurs in Plato, Rep. 5. p. 36. ζάω, is one of the few verbs which instead of the vowel of contraction α, have a Doric η; as ζάω, ζῆς, ζῆ; ἔζων, ἔζης, ἔζη, &c.

1. In attic κλάω is used, having the long a and being without contractions, like κάω: fut. κλαύσω, &c.

2. Not to be confounded with the regular κορέω, ἦσω, to sweep.

3. The aorist passive ἐκρεμάσθην is common to the middle and intransitive signification: but the future passive κρεμασθήσομαι belongs solely to κρεμάννυμι. In consequence of this the intransitive has a peculiar future, κρεμήσομαι, I will hang.

4. Between λήχω and λαγχάνω there seems to have been an intermediate form λάγγω. Hence the old perfect λέλογχα, which occurs in Doric and Ionic, rarely in Attic. From the 2d. aorist, ἔλαχον, Homer uses a new verb λελάχω, in a transitive sense, "to depart." Il. η', 80. 4, 350. χ', 343. ψ', 76. We have also λελαχῆσθωμεν in Hesychius.

1. For εἴλημαι, Euripides (Ion. 1113.) uses λέλημαι, whence the Doric λέλαπται in Hesychius. The form λελάβηκα is Ionic, and analogous to ἀπεκτόνηκα from ἀπέκτονα. Another old form is λάζομαι.

2. From ἔλαθον Homer has a new verb λελάθω, in a transitive sense, "to make to forget." Il. β', 600.

3. Both μαχήσομαι and μαχοῦμαι are used in the derivative tenses. The first, however, is common: Ἐμαχεσάμην occurs in Attic, ἐμαχησάμην in Homer.

4. This verb is chiefly used as an impersonal.

1. Ὀδάδα, has the sense of the present.

2. In the Imperfect we have ὤμην and ὤμην. In the rest of the persons and moods οἶομαι only is the basis. The active forms οἶω and οἶω, are retained in some dialects, in Homer both are frequent. The Spartan woman, in Aristophanes Lysistr. 156. uses οἶω. Thomas Magister, p. 645. states that the Grammarians made a distinction between οἶμαι, and οἶομαι, applying the one to certain, determinate things, the other to indeterminate things. This distinction is so nice that hardly any language, except one of books, could ever have observed it.

1. Περάω, to pass into another country; περνάω, to pass for the purpose of selling; πρίαμαι, in the Middle Voice, to buy a person, or thing, brought from another country.

2. The old verb πέτομαι is the root, by which was expressed the spreading of the wings in flying, and afterwards merely the general idea of spreading.

3. The forms πίσω, ἔπισα, have the meaning "give to drink." The present passive πίομαι, with ι long, is used in a future sense "I am about to drink;" instead of this, the later writers used the form πιούμαι, which is censured by the Grammarians. The future πίομαι is adduced from Antiphanes by Eustathius, and the verbal πιστός seems to refer to an old perfect passive πέτισμαι.

1. According to Hermann (De Em. G. G. p. 293.) there are two radical forms, ἔρδω, and ἔργω. From the first came ἔρδσω, and by transposition ῥέζω, (ῥέδσω); from the second ἔοργα, ἔρξω, ἔρξα, and by transposition ῥέξω, ῥερεξα.

2. Verbs in σκω, which have a great affinity to Verbs in μι, are derived from Primitives in άω, έω, όω, and ύω, and are formed by the insertion of κ after the σ of the 1st. Future: thus from γηράω, γηράσω, is formed γηράσκω, to grow old; from ἀρέω, ἀρέσω, ἀρέσκω, to please; from βιάω, βιάσω, βιάσκω, to live; and from μεθύω, μεθύσω, μεθύσκω, to be drunk.

Some of these, like Verbs in μι, prefix the Reduplication, as γιγνώσκω, to know, from γνώσω; τιτρώσκω, to wound, from τρώσω. Some change the vowel of the penultima, as ἡβῶ, ἡβήσω, ἡβάσκω, to grow up.

The verb τυγχάνω has the meaning to happen, to find one's self, only in the present, imperfect, and 2d aorist, viz. τυγχάνω, ἐτύγγανον, and ἔτυχον: the rest of the tenses (and also ἔτυχον likewise) have the signification to attain.

VERBAL NOUNS

are formed from Tenses of the Indicative, by dropping the augment and changing the termination.

1. Φρέω is used only in composition, as ἐκφρεῖν, to bring out, εἰσφρεῖν, to bring in, διαφρεῖν, to bring through. The old Grammarians derive it from προ-ᾠ; as προίμιον, προῖδος, from προίμιον, προόδος.

2. Φύω signifies to produce; Φῦμι, in the middle sense, to suffer one's self to be produced, or to be born. The Perf. πέφυκα, as well as the 2. Aor. ἔφυν, φῦναι, and φῆς, have a Passive signification.

Some are formed from the Present, as δύναμις, strength, from δύναμαι, to be able; κλέπτῃς, a thief, from κλέπτω, to steal.

Some few from the Aorists, as δόξα from ἔδοξα; θήκη from ἔθηκα; φύγη from ἔφυγον; πάθος from ἔπαθον.

The larger proportion, however, are formed from the Perfect.

1. From the Perfect Active, distinguished by κ, χ, or φ, in the last syllable, as φρίκη from πέφρικα; διδάχη from δεδίδαχα; γραφή from γέγραφα.

2. From the Perfect Passive, as follows:

From the 1st pers. sing. are derived Nouns ending in μος, μη, μων, μα, μιος. The letter μ being the characteristic.

—ΜΟΣ

Those ending in μος, signify either a performance of the action of the Verb; as κολασμός, an infliction of punishment, or something used in inflicting such action; as δεσμός, a chain or bond.

—ΜΗ

Those in μη, which are few in number, seem generally to signify some effect produced by the action of the Verb; as γραμμή, a line, μνήμη, a mention.

—ΜΩΝ

Those in μων, generally signify a person or thing, endowed with the power, or faculty, or disposition, to perform the action of the Verb; as μνήμων, one who remembers, ἐπιλήσιμων, one who is forgetful, ἐπιστήμων, one who is skilled, ῥήμων, one skilled in throwing, ἐλεήμων, compassionate.

—ΜΑ

Those in μα, signify the very thing produced by the action of the Verb, or upon which that act is performed, or about which it is employed; as ἔρυμα, a fortification, (the thing strengthened), πύγμα, a fold, δόμα, a gift, (the thing given.)

—ΜΙΟΣ

Those in μιος, have a sort of passive signification, and denote some fitness or suitability to the action of the Verb, as σεβάσιμος, venerable, ἑράσιμος, amiable, ἀκέσιμος, curable.

From the 2d. Pers. Sing. of the same Tense, are derived Nouns Substantive in δης, ξίς, and ψίς, which signify the action of the Verb abstractedly considered, as νήσις, spinning, λέξις, reading, βλέψις, seeing. The letter σ is the characteristic.

—ΙΣ

—ΙΑ—ΙΑΣ

From these verbals in ίς are derived Nouns Substantive in ια and ιας, and Nouns Adjective in σιμος; as, from σύνθεσις and θείσις, are formed συνθεσία, an agreement, and Θυσίας, Baccha, and from πόσις comes πόσιμος, potable. These last in σιμος commonly have a passive signification, like those in μιος above mentioned, and like them may generally be translated by the Latin Verbals in bilis and dus, or the corresponding English term able, as ἀράσιμος, execrandus, detestable, γελάσιμος, ridendus, laughable, οικήσιμος, inhabitable, βρώσιμος, eatable.

From the third Pers. Sing. of the same Tenses, are formed a great variety of Nouns, having ι as the characteristic, of which,

—ΤΗΣ—ΤΗΡ—ΤΩΡ Those in της, τηρ, τωρ, signify the agent who performed the act indicated by the Verb, as ποιητής, θηρευτήρ, ῥήτωρ.

—ΤΙΣ—ΤΡΙΑ
—ΤΕΙΡΑ Those in τις, τρις, τρια and τειρα, are of the feminine gender, and have a like signification with the last mentioned, as οικέτις, οικήστρις, μαθήτρια, κοσμήτρια.

—ΤΥΣ Those in τυς, derived from this 3d. Pers. Perf. Ind. Pass. signify commonly the art of performing the act of the Verb, as κιθαριστής, the art of playing on the harp, ὀρχηστής, the art of dancing, ἁγορατής, eloquence, ἀκοντιστής, the art of throwing the javelin.

—ΤΟΣ Those in τος commonly have a Passive signification, and are Adjectives applied to the object of the Verb's action, as αἰρετός, eligible, αἰνετός, laudable, εὑρετός, discoverable.

There is a great resemblance between these and the above mentioned Adjectives in σιμος, so that the same word is sometimes found in both forms, as ποιτός, and πόσιμος, potable, οικήτός and οικήσιμος, habitable.

—ΚΟΣ

Those in κος have an Active signification, denoting ability to perform the action of the Verb or some relation to such action, as εὑρετικός, inventive, πολεμικός, warlike, οικήτικος, disposed to seek an habitation, κτητικός, skilled in acquiring.

ΤΗΡΙΟΣ—ΤΗΡΙΑ Those in τήριος, τήρια, τήριον, denote some aptitude or efficacy in the subject, as ἀλεξήτιος, repulsive, remedial. The feminine and neuter terminations are used as Substantives as ἱεσυτήρια (τέχνη being understood,) the art of taking birds with ἱεός, bird lime, κολαστήριον (χωρὸν, understood,) a place of punishment. The termination τήριον has almost always a particular reference to place, as δεσμοτήριον, a prison, a place of confinement; δικαστήριον, a court, a place for dispensing justice; &c. Occasionally, however, nouns with this termination depart from analogy; thus ἀναπαυτήριον, besides denoting a resting-place, signifies also a time for enjoying rest.

-ΤΡΟΣ-ΤΡΑ-
-ΤΡΟΝ

Those in τρος, τρα, and τρον, may be considered as derived by syncope from the last mentioned Nouns, and the feminine and neuter terminations are in like manner used Substantively, to denote some instrument or thing, by assistance of which, or in consideration of which, the action of the Verb is performed, as ἀκέστρα, a needle, ὀρχήστρα, the orchestra, or that part of the stage in which the chorus danced, διδάκτρον, the reward of the teacher, ιατρὸν, the physician's fee. With words of this class, ἀργύριον may be understood, as χρῆμα or πρᾶγμα may with φόβητρον, θήρατρον, &c.

-ΤΡΙΑΣ

To these derivatives from the third person are to be added a few Nouns in τριας, which signify one who acts from habit, as ἀλήτριάς, a sinner, ἀντικιάς, one who lives in, or frequents, caves.

-ΕΟΣ-ΕΟΝ

And lastly, those in εος, of which the neuter gender εον answers to the Latin Gerund in dum, as ποιητέον, faciendum, γραπτέον, scribendum.

By way of exercise, the above analogical rules may be applied to the following derivatives; as from κοσμεω, ορνο.

κόσμημα, κόμησις, κοσμητής, κοσμήτωρ, κοσμήτειρα, κοσμητός, κοσμητικός, κόσμητρον.

καθαρός, κάθαρμα, κάθαρις, καθαρίτης, καθαρίτηρ, καθαρτικός, καθαρίτριος, καθαρίτεον.

κολασμός, κόλασμα, κόλασις, κολαστής, κολαστήριος, κολαστήριον, κολαστικός.

μάθημα, μάθησις, μαθητής, μαθήτρια, μαθητρίς, μαθητός, μαθητέον.

3. From the Perfect Middle come Nouns terminating in α, ας, εως, η, ης, ις, ος ; as φθορά from ἔφθορα, νομάς from νένομα, τοκεὺς from τέτοκα, τροφή from τέτροφα, τύπης from τέτυπα, βολίς from βέβολα, τομὸς from τέτομα, &c.

ADVERBS.

Those which require particular notice, as distinguished from the Latin, are the following :

Adverbs ending in θα, ει, οι, σι, χη, and χου, signify motion in a place ; as ἐνταῦθα, here ; οὐρανόθι, in heaven ; οἴκοι, at home ; Ἀθήνησι, at Athens ; πανταχῇ and πανταχοῦ, every where.

Adverbs ending in θε andθεν, denote motion from a place ; as οὐρανόθε and οὐρανόθεν, from Heaven.

Adverbs ending in δε, ζε, and σε, denote motion to a place ; as οὐρανόνδε and οὐρανόσε, to Heaven ; χαμᾶζε, to the ground.

Obs. 1. Adverbs in θι were originally, no doubt, genitive cases ; for, nouns with this termination sometimes stand as genitives ; (thus, Ἰλιόθι πρὸ, Il. θ', 557. ἡῶθι πρὸ, Il. λ', 50, &c.) and in others the common termination also of the genitive occurs in the same sense ; as ὀθι, poetic form, and οῦθι and ποῦθι.

Obs. 2. Adverbs in οἱ appear to have been old Datives, and to have the ι adscribed according to the old mode of writing, instead of having it subscribed ; thus, οἴκοι, πεδοῖ, Ἰσθμοῖ, for οἴκω, πεδῶ, Ἰσθμῶ, with the preposition ἐν understood.

Obs. 3. Adverbs in σι were originally datives plural from the Ionic dialect. After, however, that this σι was once considered merely as an adverbial termination, and no longer as a termination of the dative plural, it was annexed also to other names in α ; as Ὀλυμπιασι, at Olympia ; Πλαταιᾶσι, at Platææ.

Obs. 4. The Adverbs ποῦ, πῇ, ποῖ, ὅπου, &c. are all oblique cases from the obsolete pronouns πός and ὅπος. Hence also πόθεν, πόσε, πόθι, as Ἰλιόθεν, Ἰλιόθι, Ἰλιόσε.

Obs. 5. Adverbs in θεν appear to have been also old genitives, or rather the termination θεν was added to nouns as a badge of the genitive, just as we find φι paragogicum added to the oblique cases of some nouns in the Poets; and afterwards, these forms in θεν were used as Adverbs. In the Ionic dialect θεν becomes in the Poets θε on account of the metre.

Obs. 6. The termination δε (according to another pronunciation, σε) is generally annexed to the accusative case without alteration, as οἰκονδε, πεδιονδε, ἄλαδε, Μαραθῶναδε. If σ precede the δ, instead of σδ the letter ζ is put, as Ἀθήναζε for Ἀθήνασδε, Θήβαζε for Θήβασδε, θύραζε for θύρασδε. When this had once obtained as the termination of words of place, it was annexed also to other words without respect to the form of the accusative, as Ὀλυμπίαζε, Μουνυχίαζε, from Ὀλυμπία, Μουνυχία; thus also φύγαδε for εἰς φυγὴν, in Homer; οἴκαδε and οἰκονδε, in Homer and the Attics.

Obs. 7. The Dorians, in place of the termination δε, used δες or δεις, as οἴκαδες. Homer also has χαμάδεις in place of χαμάζε. Homer sometimes puts the termination δε twice, as δῶνδε δῶμονδε, Il. π', 445, &c.

Obs. 8. The terminations θα, θι, οι, σι, χη and χου, supply the place of the preposition ἐν; those in θεν and θε, of the preposition ἐκ; and those in δε, ζε, σε, of the preposition εἰς or πρὸς.

Obs. 9. Some Adverbs have such an affinity, that beginning with a Vowel, they are Indefinites, with π Interrogatives, with τ Redditives.

| Indefinite. | Interrogative. | Redditive. |

are exhibited with the Moods, to which they are joined, in the SYNTAX.

G R E E K S Y N T A X .

The following remarks on the general principles of construction are given previous to the common rules of Syntax, for the benefit of the more advanced student. They will be found to contain a much more liberal view of the language, than that which is given by resorting to the doctrine of Ellipses.

I. GENITIVE.

THE Greek language takes a much wider range in its use of the genitive case than the Latin. In Greek, words of all kinds may be followed by other words in the genitive, when the latter class limit and show in what respect the meaning of the former is to be taken.

In the case of Verbs: as Ἀθηναῖοι δὲ, ὡς ποδῶν εἶχον, ἐβοή-θεον, “the Athenians brought relief, as they had themselves with respect to their feet,” i. e. “as fast as they could run;”— καλῶς ἔχειν μέθης, “to have one’s self well with respect to intoxication,” i. e. “to be pretty drunk;”—ὡς ἐκάτερος τις εὐνοίας ἢ μνήμης ἔχει, “as each one had himself with respect to favour or remembrance,” i. e. “as each one wished well to a party or remembered the past;”—εὖ ἔχειν τοῦ βίου, “to have come on well with respect to the means of subsistence,” i. e. “to be in prosperous circumstances;”—ἐπειγέσθαι ἄρῃος, “to urge one’s self on with respect to the fight,” i. e. “to be eager for the fight;”—ἀνιέναι τῆς ἐφόδου, “to slacken with respect to one’s approach,” i. e. “to slacken in one’s approach;”— σφάλλεσθαι ἐλπίδος, “to be deceived with respect to hope,” i. e.
 “to be deceived in one’s hope;”—κατέαγα τῆς κεφαλῆς, “I am broken with respect to my head,” i. e. “I have broken my head.”

In the case of Adjectives: as συγγνώμων τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἀμ-αρτημάτων, “forgiving with respect to human errors;”—ἄπαις ἔρσενος γόνου, “childless with respect to male offspring;”— τιμῆς ἀτιμος πάσης ἔστω, “let him be unhonoured with respect to all honour,” i. e. “let all respect be denied him;”—ἐγγύς τῆς πόλεως, “near with respect to the city,” i. e. “near the city;”—ἐνέπεσον ἐς τοῦτο ἀνάγκης, “they fell into this with respect to necessity,” i. e. “they fell into this necessity;”— ἐς τοσοῦτο μίσους ἦλθον, “they came to so much with respect to hatred," i. e. "they fell into so much hatred;"—ἐν τούτῳ παρασκευῆς ἦσαν, "they were in this state with respect to preparation," i. e. "they were in this state of preparation;"—γῆ πλεῖα κακῶν, "a land full with respect to evils," i. e. "full of evils;"—ἄρμα κενὸν ἡνιόχου, "a chariot empty with respect to a driver," i. e. "without a driver;"—μειζων πατρὸς, "greater with respect to his father," i. e. "greater than his father."

The principles to be deduced from all this are easy and natural.

1. That all words which represent a situation or operation of the mind which is directed to an object, but without affecting it, are followed by a genitive; such are the verbs "to remember," "to forget," "to concern one's self about any thing," "to neglect," "to consider," "to reflect," "to understand," "to be desirous of," &c.; and the adjectives "experienced," "ignorant," "remembering," "desirous," &c.

2. All words which indicate fulness, to be full, defect, emptiness, &c. are followed by a genitive; because the word which expresses of what any thing is full or empty, indicates the respect in which the signification of the governing word is taken. Under this head fall the adjectives "full," "rich," "abounding in," "empty," "deprived of," "destitute of;" the verbs "to fill," "to want," "to bereave," "to deliver," "to desist from," "to cease from;" adverbs denoting abundance, want, sufficiency, deprivation, &c.

3. The same original signification of the genitive appears to be the basis of the construction of the comparative with the genitive: thus μειζων πατρὸς signified, "greater with respect to his father." From this construction, all words which involved a comparison, took the object of this comparison in the genitive: such are verbs which signify "to surpass," or the contrary, "to be surpassed," "to be inferior to another;" as περιγίνομαι, ἡττάομαι, &c.; those also which signify "to rule," or the opposite, together with many verbs which are derived from substantives, and are equivalent to the primitive with the substantive verb, as κυριεύειν, (κύριος εἶναι); κοίρανεῖν, (κόραρος εἶναι); ἄρχειν, (ἄρχων εἶναι):—such again are adjectives and substantives in which the same idea of government is implied; as ἐγκράτης ἡδονῆς, "master over pleasure;" ἡττῶν ἡδονῆς, "a slave to pleasure;" ἡττα τοῦ πόματος, "defeat by means of drinking," i. e. "intemperance in drinking;" ἐγκράτεια πόνου, "mastery over labour."

To this same head must be referred all words which imply a comparison with respect to value, or require a definition of value; as, for example, ἄξιος, which properly signifies "equivalent," "equal in value;" so that ἀξιον τούτου, which we commonly render "worthy of this," strictly rendered would be, "equal in value with respect to this." Hence too the adjective ἀνάξιος, and the adverbial forms ἀξίως and ἀναξίως take the genitive; and hence, moreover, this case is joined with all words in which a determination of value is contained; as, for example, verbs signifying "to buy," "to sell," "to exchange," &c. On this is founded the general rule—"The price of a thing is put in the genitive."

And lastly, to this head belong all words which express a difference, and in which, of course, a comparison is implied, as διάφορος, ἕτερος, ἄλλος, ἄλλοις, ἄλλοτριος: thus, διάφορον τούτου, "different with respect to this," i. e. "different from this;" ἕτερον τούτου, "other with respect to this," i. e. "other than this."

4. From the meaning of the genitive "with respect to," we deduce also the general meaning of the cause of any thing's being done, in which case the genitive is to be rendered by "on account of." Thus, with Verbs: Δαναῶν πεχολωμένοι, "enraged on account of the Greeks," i. e. "with the Greeks;" πενθικῶς ἔχουσα τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ τεθνηκότος, "melancholy on account of the death of her brother;" φθονεῖν τινὶ σοφίας, "to envy any one on account of wisdom;" ὀνειδίσαι τῷ θεῷ, τούτων, "to upbraid the god on account of these things." Hence the genitive is found with verbs signifying "to accuse," "to criminate," with verbs of praying, with verbs of beginning; the genitive being that of the person or thing, on account of which the accusation is made, the prayer offered up, or the affair begun. So too the genitive stands alone in exclamations, with and without an interjection, or a word that expresses admiration, indignation, compassion, &c.; as Ἀπολλόν, τοῦ χασμήματος, "Apollo! what a swallow!" ὦ Ζεῦ βασιλεῦ, τῆς λεπτότητος τῶν φρενῶν, "O king Jupiter! the acuteness of his mind!" Τῆς τύχης, "the misfortune!" In all the instances above enumerated under this head, and in others of a similar nature, the Grammarians very unnecessarily supply ἐνεκα, or some equivalent term.

II. The second principal relation which is expressed by the genitive, is that of the proportion of a whole to its parts; in other words, the genitive is put partitively. This use is common to the Greek, the Latin, and other languages, except that in Greek it has a much more extensive range. Thus, in the latter language the genitive is put with Verbs of all kinds, even with those which govern the accusative, when the action does not refer to the whole object, but only to a part. This is expressed in English by the omission of the article in the singular, or by the word "some;" as, πάσσε δ' ἄλδς, "he sprinkled salt over it;"—ὑπιτῆσαι κρεῶν, "to roast some of the flesh;" ἐγὼ οἶδα τῶν ἐμῶν ἡλικιωτῶν, "I know some of those of the same age with myself;"—ἀναδεῖν τῶν ταινιῶν τὸν Σωκράτην, "to bind Socrates with some of the fillets;"—τῆς γῆς ἔτεμον, "they laid waste a part of the land." On the like principle the genitive is put with many other verbs which signify participation, or in which at least this idea is implied: such are the verbs μετέχειν, κοινωνεῖν, συλλαμβάνειν, μέτεστι, προσθήκειν, μεταδιδόναι, ἀπολαύειν, &c.

Upon this principle of the reference to a part, is founded the construction by which, with the verbs "to take," "to seize," "to touch," "to carry," &c. the part by which any thing is taken is put in the genitive, while the whole is put in the accusative; as ἐλάβοντο τῆς ζώνης τὸν Ορόντην, "they took Orontes by the girdle."—The same construction is retained also with the verbs which signify the opposite of "to take," or "to seize," viz. "to let go," "to loose," "not to obtain any thing," "to miss," &c.; as ἀφίεται τοῦ δόρατος, "he lets go the spear;" whereas ἀφιέναι τὸ δόρυ in the accusative, would signify, "he hurls the spear;" in the first, reference being made to a part, in the latter, to the whole.

Upon this principle also arises the construction of the superlative with the genitive, the substantive being put in that case which marks the class from which the superlative takes the chief one as a part.

III. The genitive is used also to mark the person or thing to which any thing belongs, whether it be a property, or quality, habit, duty, &c.; and those also from which any thing arises. Probably here also an obscure idea of the relation of this quality, duty, &c. to that which possesses it, as of a part to the whole, is the basis of the construction. Hence the common rules, that "verbs denoting possession, property, duty, &c. govern the genitive," and that the "material of which any thing is made is put in the genitive."

IV. The genitive is also put with verbs compounded with prepositions which govern the genitive, that is to say, when these prepositions may be separated from the verb, and placed immediately before the case, without altering the signification of the verb; as ἀντιπαρέχειν τί τινος, for παρέχειν τι ἀντί τινος; ἀποπηδᾶν ἄρματος, for πηδᾶν ἀφ' ἄρματος; ἐξέρχεσθαι οἰκίας, for ἐρχεσθαι ἐξ οἰκίας: not, however, ἀντιλέγειν τινός, "to contradict any one," for τινί; because λέγειν ἀντί τινος, would give an entirely different sense, viz. "to speak in the place of any one."

V. The genitive serves also to determine place and time, in answer to the questions, "where?" "when?" &c. Hence the adverbs οὔ, ποῦ, ὅπου, where? which are, in fact, old genitives, and refer to part of general place and of general time.

2. DATIVE.

THE Dative in Greek expresses two senses, one that of the Dative in other languages, answering to the question, "to whom?" and another that of the Latin ablative.

I. The Dative expresses the distant object of a transitive or intransitive action, with reference to which this action takes place. It answers thus, in most cases, as in Latin and English, to the question, "to whom?" as διδόναι τι τινι, "to give any thing to any one;" πειθεσθαι τινι, "to obey any one." Thus also with adjectives: φίλος τινι, ἐχθρός τινι, εὖνους τινι, &c. A larger proportion of verbs, however, are joined with the Dative in Greek than in Latin.

II. The Greek Dative also supplies the place of the Latin Ablative, and in this case expresses the relation of connexion or companionship, in answer to the questions, "with whom?" "with what?" of an instrument or mean in answer to the question "whereby?" of an impulse or excitement, "from what?" of an external cause, "by what means?" "on what account?" "for what?" &c.

III. The Dative expresses the relation of the measure, degree, &c. with the comparative. Hence the Datives πολλῷ, ὀλιγῷ, βραχέϊ, with the comparative.

IV. It is put in definitions of time and place, in answer to the question "when? and where?"

3. ACCUSATIVE.

THE Accusative, as in other languages, marks the person or thing which is affected by the action of the accompanying Verb, i. e. which suffers a change of any kind. The Verbs which govern an accusative are hence called Verbs active or transitive, i. e. which show an action passing on to an object, and affecting and determining it in any actual manner. There are, however, other verbs not properly transitive, which yet govern an accusative in Greek; this is particularly the case in those verbs which do not mark the passive object of the action, but the object to which the action has only generally an immediate reference; as προσκυνεῖν, δορυφορεῖν, σεβεῖν, φθαίνειν, ἐπιτροπεύειν, ἐπιλείπειν, &c. In these and others of a similar nature, the construction with the Dative would appear to be the most natural one.

II. Many verbs which signify an emotion, or feeling, with regard to an object, as, "to be ashamed," "afraid," "to compassionate any one," are accompanied by an accusative, which expresses the object, and at the same time the effective cause of this emotion; as, αἰσχύνομαι τὸν Θεόν, "I revere the Deity," αἰδεῖσθαι τοὺς ἄρχοντας, "to respect rulers;" ἐποικτεῖν αὐτῷ, "I compassionate him;" ὁμᾶς ἐλεῶ, "I pity you." The same takes place with some neuter verbs which express an emotion, although, even without indicating the object, they convey a perfect idea; such are ἀλγεῖν, θαρόρειν, ἐπικαιρεῖν, &c.

Many verbs have the accusative not only of the nearer and more immediate object of the action, but also of the more remote object of it, i. e. the person or thing to which the action with its immediate object passes, which in English is generally expressed by a dative; as εὖ or κακῶς ποιεῖν τινά, "to do good or harm to any one;" εὖ or κακῶς λέγειν τινά, "to speak well or ill of any one." Hence these verbs often take two accusatives at the same time: such are ποιεῖν, πράττειν, δοῦναι, ἐρθεῖν, "to do;" λέγειν, εἰπεῖν, ἀγορεύειν, "to speak of, or, against;" ῥωτᾶν, "to ask," αἰτεῖν, ἀπαιτεῖν, "to ask," "to require," "to desire;" ἀφαιρεῖσθαι, ἀποστερεῖν, &c. "to take away," "to deprive of a thing;" διδάσκειν, "to teach;" ἐκδύσαι, ἐνδύσαι, "to put off" or "on," &c.

Other uses of the accusative are enumerated under the rules of Syntax.

SYNTAX.

THE NOMINATIVE AND THE VERB.

The Nominative Case is the subject of the Verb; as,

*Ἐγὼ δίδωμι, I give.*¹

1. With regard to the Personal Pronouns as Nominatives, they are seldom expressed unless some emphasis is required. In other cases also the Nominative to the Verb is omitted, where the verb expresses an action usually performed by the agent denoted by the nominative; as σαλπίζει, the trumpeter gives a signal; the noun σαλπικτής being implied

A Verb agrees with its nominative in Number and Person ; as,

Σωκράτης ἔφη, Socrates said.

Ὁφθαλμῷ λάμπειον, His two eyes shine.

Κατάδουσιν ὄρνιθες, Birds sing.

from the verb. So also ἐκήρυξε (scil. ὁ κήρυξ), the herald made proclamation. This usage also prevails where in English we supply it, and an operation of nature or of circumstances is indicated, as ἔει, it rains ; (vid. Syntax of Impersonal Verbs.) Instances, on the other hand, frequently occur, where the nominative stands without a verb ; in these, some part of εἶναι is generally understood ; as Ἑλλήν ἐγώ, I am a Greek, supply εἰμί. This is most frequently the case with ἔτομος, and with verbals in τήν. The most remarkable construction, however, is that in which the nominative is converted into an accusative, and made to depend upon another verb ; as οἶδα σε τίς εἶ, I know thee who thou art, for οἶδα τίς σὺ εἶ, I know who thou art. So also ἦδε γὰρ κατὰ θυμὸν ἀδελφεόν, ὡς ἐπονείτο, for ὡς ἐπονείτο ἀδελφός. Hom.

1. As a Noun of multitude Singular may be followed by a Verb Plural, so a Neuter Plural is often taken in a collective sense, and followed by a Verb Singular. Thus when Homer says δοῦρα σίσσηπτε, he means the collection of planks and timber, with which the ships were constructed.

The Plural Noun is sometimes Masculine or Feminine, but it is used in a collective sense ; as ἀχέεται ὀμφαὶ μελέων, Pindar ; δίδοκται τλήμονες φύγαι, Euripides. Heyne has altered the passages in Pindar where this construction occurs ; but see Herm. de Metris, p. 246. seqq. and also Boeckh's edition of Pindar, where the common readings are defended and retained. The Grammarians call this schema Pindari-cum, and, Bæotium.

This idiom is more observed by the Attics than by the older writers in the Ionic and Doric dialects. The latter often join the neuter plural with a plural verb ; as, οὐρέ τι νῶϊν ὄρκια ἔσσονται. Il. χ', 266.—ἀμύχανα ἔργα γίνονται, Il. λ', 310. The scholiasts, in commenting on these passages, observe, that they are constructed ἀρχαϊκῶς. The Attics also sometimes join the neuter plural with the plural verb, especially in two cases ; 1. when the neuter plural signifies living persons ; 2. when the abstract is put for the concrete, and animate creatures, not things, are referred to.—Perhaps the constructions of neuters plural with singular verbs may be accounted for on the principle of the association of ideas : neuter and inanimate objects being considered generally, but animate agents individually.

This construction is not confined to the Greek language. It is frequent in the Hebrew : see Exodus xxi. 4. Job. xii. 7. Isaiah ii. 11. Psalm lxxxiii. 7, &c. In French this mode is common in every Gender in an Impersonal form. Il est des hommes, il est des femmes. But the Verb in that case precedes the Nominative, il vient de sonner dix heures ; if the Nominative precedes, it has a Verb Plural, dix heures viennent de sonner.

A Dual Nominative is sometimes joined with a verb Plural; as.

*Ἄμφω λέγουσι Both say.*¹

SUBSTANTIVE AND SUBSTANTIVE.

Substantives signifying the same thing agree in Case; as,

*Κυαζάρης, ὁ παῖς τοῦ Ἀστυάγου, Cyazares, the son of Astyages.*²

1. In prose this construction is general.

In the same manner a Dual Substantive, as it signifies more than one, may have an adjective Plural; but the Verb or Adjective can seldom be of the Dual number, when the Noun implies more than two. Buttmann (Ausf. Gr. Gr. vol. 1. p. 135.) makes the Dual to have been an old form of the plural, which became gradually restricted to the denoting of two. Hence in the earlier state of the language we do actually find the Dual used when more than two are meant. This is strongly corroborated by the imitations of later writers, as Aratus, 968; Oppian, 1, 72. According to Quintilian (1, 5, 42.) some persons in his time wished to consider the Latin forms in ere, of the third person plural of the perfect, as dual forms in contradistinction to those in erunt. The attempt did not succeed; but it serves to show, however, that the separate use of a dual form in Greek owed its origin, no doubt, to a similar though more successful effort on the part of the early Greek Grammarians.

2. One of the Substantives is frequently understood, when some intimate and usual relation is expressed, as Ἀλέξανδρος ὁ Φιλίππου, Alexander the son of Philip, supply νῆς or παῖς; Ὀλυμπιάς ἡ Ἀλεξάνδρου, Olympias the mother of Alexander, supply μήτηρ. So also ὁ Σωφρονίσκου, the son of Sophroniscus; ἡ τοῦ Γλαύκος (sc. θυγάτηρ), the daughter of Glaucus; εἰς τὴν Φιλίππου (sc. χώραν), into the land of Philip; τὰ τῆς πόλεως (sc. πράγματα), the affairs of the city. The ellipsis of some case of νῆς or παῖς is very common in tracing genealogies, while, on the other hand, the omissions of θυγάτηρ is much less frequent. Thus, Θυγατέρα δὲ αὐτὴν λέγουσι εἶναι Αὐτεσίωνος, τοῦ Τισαμενοῦ, τοῦ Θερανόδρου, τοῦ Πολυνείκεος. They say that she was a daughter of Autesion, who was the son of Tisamenes, who was the son of Thersander, who was the son of Polynices. Herod. Moreover, as ὁ in the singular refers to νῆς or παῖς understood, so οἱ in the plural indicates an ellipsis of νῆς or παῖδες. Thus, οἱ γονέων διασμήων, (sc. παῖδες,) the sons of distinguished families. Plut. The presence or absence of the article, in these forms of construction, makes an important difference in the sense; for example, Σωκράτης ὁ Σωφρονίσκου, implies that Socrates was either the only son of Sophroniscus, or else that he was that Socrates who had Sophroniscus for his father, in order to be distinguished from others of the same name, and who were the sons of other parents; whereas Σωκράτης Σωφρονίσκου, means that he had Sophroniscus for his father and not some one else. Hence this latter form is used in pleadings, decrees, &c. wherever a strict and legal designation of an individual is required.

THE SUBSTANTIVE AND THE ADJECTIVE.

An Adjective agrees with its Substantive in Gender, Number, and Case ; as, Ἄνδρες ἀγαθοί. Good men.

 Ἔθνεα πολλὰ. *Many nations.*¹

To this rule belong Articles, Pronominal Adjectives, and Participles.

An Adjective of the Masculine Gender is sometimes found with a Feminine Substantive ; as,

Τὼ γυναῖκε, Xenophon, *The two women.*²

1. The Adjective is often found without any substantive with which it agrees, the latter having been omitted, or being easy to be supplied by the mind. In this case the Adjective is said to be used substantively, as ὁ σοφός, the wise man, suppl. ἄνθρωπος ; ἡ ἀνέστος, the desert, suppl. γῆ ; οἱ πολλοί, the multitude, suppl. ἄνθρωποι ; τὰ ἐμὰ, my property, suppl. χρήματα. So also the Pronouns οὗτος, εκείνος, τίς, &c.

2. The Attic construction is used in order to generalize the sense, as Θεός and Deus are applied to both sexes for a divine, ἄνθρωπος and homo, for a human, person. Thus ducente Deo in Virgil refers to Venus, and αὐτὴν τὴν Θεόν, in Herodotus, to Minerva. Perhaps also this form is adopted to dignify the female sex. On this principle, when a woman speaks of herself in the Plural Number, a mode of speech adopted by the great, she uses the Masculine Gender: as οἱ προθυήσκοντες, Eurip. spoken by Alcestis of herself ; κτενοῦμεν, οἶπερ ἐξεφύσαμεν, by Medea ; παθόντες, ἡμαρτηκότες, Sophocles, by Antigone. Thus, also, when a chorus of women speak of themselves. This mode is confined to the Dual and Plural. But if a woman speaks of herself in the Singular, she uses the Feminine Gender ; and also when she speaks of the Female race in general: as Κράτιστα, τὴν εὐθείαν (ὁδόν) ἢ πεφύκαμεν σοφαὶ μάλιστα. Eurip. Med. The direct road is the best in which we women are naturally most skilled. The Coryphæa, as the representative of the chorus, appears sometimes to have used the masculine gender with the singular number, as in Euripides, Hippol. 1107. The Masculine Article is joined with a Feminine Noun in the Dual only.

Compound and Derivative Adjectives in ος are considered by the Attic writers as of two terminations, consequently used as Feminine as well as Masculine.

Comparatives and Superlatives of three terminations sometimes express the Feminine by the Masculine termination : as, ἀπορώτερος ἡ ἀλήθεια, Thucydides. So also, in the same writer, δυσσεμβολώτερος ἡ Λοκρίς. These comparatives are thus used by Thucydides, because the radical adjective of the positive is common or of two terminations. It is, after all, however, a very rare construction, since comparatives and superlatives of adjectives which are common, or of those which are used as common, have usually three terminations.

A Substantive is sometimes used as an Adjective ; as,

Γλώσσαν Ἑλλάδα ἐδίδαξε, Her. *He taught the Greek language.*¹

The Substantive is often changed into a Genitive Plural, preceded by a Pronoun or Article ; as,

Οἱ ἀγαθοὶ τῶν ἀνδρῶν, Isocrates, *Honourable men.*²

THE ARTICLE.

The Article is used to mark a distinction or emphasis. With the Infinitive it supplies the place of Nouns, Gerunds, and Supines. With a Participle, it is translated by the Relative and Indicative. With μὲν and δὲ it signifies partly, and is often used for ornament ; as,

When the Adjective is put in the Neuter after a different Gender, χρῆμα is understood ; as ὀρθὸν ἢ ἀληθεία, Soph. Thus triste lupus stabulis, Virg. The ellipsis is sometimes supplied, as τί χρῆμα δράσεις ; Soph. We must not, however, suppose that χρῆμα, or some equivalent term, is always understood : since it frequently happens, that the neuter gender is used by the writer simply because the thing mentioned has no proper predicate, or because one does not immediately suggest itself to the mind. vid. Herm. ad Viger. p. 575.

1. So figus anus, Pliny, An old fig-tree. This combination is common in English ; thus, sea-water, house-dog. Ἑλλας may be considered as an Adjective used as a Substantive.

2. So nigræ lanarum nullum colorem bibunt, Plin.

This construction is also found, in Attic writers, in the Singular, as τὴν πλείστην τῆς στρατιᾶς, Thuc.

In the Greek idiom the Genitive of the Personal is used instead of the Possessive Pronouns, as τὴν μητέρα μου τιμᾶς, Xen. You honour my mother. But the latter are sometimes found with the article, particularly in the orators, as τὴν ὁμόνοιαν τὴν ὑμετέραν οἱ πολλοὶ μισοῦσι, Isoc. But wherever any emphasis is required, the Possessive and not the Personal Pronoun must be used. Hence, in the Lord's prayer, the phrase Πάτερ ἡμῶν denotes that God is the father of the whole human race ; and is equivalent to Father of us (all). Whereas Πάτερ ἡμέτερε would be emphatic, and consequently improper, denoting, our Father, and implying that God is the Father of only a part of his creatures. Most commonly, however, the Possessive is altogether omitted in ideas that always stand in necessary connexion, as those of natural relations, father, son, friend ; hand, foot, &c. ; and its place is supplied by the Article alone.

Αἰσχύλος ὁ τραγῳδός, Æschylus, the tragedian.

Τὰ ἔξω, The things without.

Ἐν τῷ φρονεῖν, In wisdom.

Ὁ ἐρχόμενος, He that cometh.

Τ' ἀνθρώπειον γένος, τῇ μὲν ἀγαθόν, τῇ δὲ φαύλον, Mankind are partly good and partly bad.

Ἡ νίκη ἢ νικήσασα τὸν κόσμον ἢ πίστις, Faith, the victory which overcomes the world.

THE RELATIVE AND THE ARTICLE

The Relative often agrees with its Antecedent in case, by attraction; as,

Ἐν ταῖς ἑορταῖς, αἷς ἡγομεν, Aristophanes, In the festivals, which we celebrated.²

The Article is poetically used for the Relative; as, Πατήρ, ὃ σ' ἔτρεφε, Hom. Your father who educated you.

The Article in the Neuter Gender, before a Genitive, signifies elliptically possession or relation; as,

Ὁ Θεὸς τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων διοικεῖ, Isoc. God directs the affairs of men.³

THE GENITIVE.⁴

One Substantive governs another, signifying a different thing, in the Genitive; as,

1. As the Relative and the Article have the same origin, as they are frequently used the one for the other, and the Feminine in both is distinguished only by the accent, they are joined under one head.

2. This is called attraction, as the Antecedent attracts the Relative into its case. This Attic form has been imitated in Latin; Si quid agas eorum, quorum consuēsti, Cicero.

The Relative, in this construction, sometimes precedes the Substantive; as, σὺν ἧ ἔχεις δύναμι, Xen. The principle of attraction pervades the whole Greek language, and is based upon the association of ideas in the mind of the writer.

3. Sometimes the ellipsis is supplied, as τὰ τῶν Θεβαίων πράγματα κακῶς ἔχει, Isoc.

In some cases the relation between the Article and the Noun following is so close, that the distinction of the property and the thing itself is scarcely perceptible, as τὰ τῆς τύχης ὀξείας ἔχει τὰς μεταβολὰς, Fortune has sudden revolutions. Thus τὸ ἐμὸν, τὰ ἐμὰ, are sometimes equivalent to ἐγώ, &c.

4. The primary signification of the Genitive is the origin, or cause, from which a thing proceeds, or possession. To these may be traced Σέλας, ἡλίου, Light of the sun.

An Adjective in the Neuter Gender, without a Substantive, governs the Genitive ; as, Τὸ λοιπὸν (μέρος) τῆς ἡμέρας, The rest of the day.

Adjectives signifying plenty, worth, condemnation, power, and their contraries ; and those which signify an emotion of the mind ; require the Genitive ;¹ as,

* Ἔργα πλείστου ἄξια, Works worthy of the highest value.

Τῶν χαλεπῶν ἀπειρος διαβίωσις, You shall live without trouble. *

Γυμνάσια μεστὰ ἀνδρῶν, Places of exercise full of men.

* Ἀναίτιος ἀφροσύνης, Not blameable for imprudence.

The matter of which a thing is made, and also the measure of a thing, are put in the Genitive ; as,

Τὸν δίφρον ἐποίησεν ἰσχυρῶν ξύλων, Xen. *He built the chariot of strong wood.*²

Cost or value, crime or punishment, difference or eminence, are put in the Genitive ; as, most of the uses to which that case is applied. But in construction, it must depend either on a Substantive, or a Preposition, expressed or understood. (vid. Preliminary remarks on the Greek Syntax.)

1. To this rule a clause is commonly added which states, that verbals compounded with the privative α, also govern the genitive. The truth is, however, that in such constructions the genitive is merely the more exact definition of the idea contained in the adjective, and is to be explained by the general principles of the language ; for the privative α, cannot well designate either the genitive or any other case.

2. The genitive of the material is considered by some Grammarians as depending on ἐκ or ἀπὸ understood, and an argument in favour of this ellipsis is drawn from the circumstance of ἐκ and ἀπὸ being sometimes found expressed. In all such passages as these, however, the presence of a preposition seems to be required in order to express a stronger and more direct reference to the material than could be done by the common construction, especially if a passive participle be likewise used ; thus, πλοῖα ἐκ τῆς ἀκάνθης ποινημένα. Herod. θύρη ἐκ μυρίκης ποινημένη. Herod. ἰδρα ἐξ ἀδάμαντος τετυγμένα. Theocr. εἰματα ἀπὸ ξύλων ποινημένα. Herod. The true principle on which the genitive of the material depends will be found explained in the Preliminary Remarks. Sometimes the dative is used for the genitive, when the material of which any thing is made may be considered also as the means by which it is made ; as, αἱ μὲν γὰρ κέρασσι τετεύχεται, αἱ δ' ἐλέφαντι. Od. τ', 563.

Γράφομαι σε μοιχείας, Lysias, *I accuse you of adultery.*²

Διαφέρων τῶν ἄλλων, Plato, Different from the others.

Χάρμα πάντων ἐπ' ἄξιον, Pindar, A joy surpassing all.

Εἰμὶ and γίνομαι, signifying possession, property, or duty, govern the Genitive; as,

Ὁ πιπρασκομένος ἑτέρου γίνεσθαι, He, who is sold, becomes the property of another.

Part of time is put in the Genitive; as,

Θέρους τε καὶ χειμῶνος, Xen. *In summer and winter.*³

+ Exclamations of grief and surprise are put in the Genitive; as,

Τῆς μωρίας, Aristoph. *What folly!*⁴

1. The principle on which this construction depends has been explained in the Preliminary Remarks. The prepositions ἀντί, with the genitive, sometimes accompanies the verbs signifying "to exchange," whenever a stronger or more direct reference to the thing or things exchanged is required than can be given by the common construction; thus, κάλλιον ἐστὶν ἀντὶ θνητοῦ σώματος ἀθάνατον δόξαν ἀντικαταλλάσασθαι καὶ ψυχῇν. Isocr. On the same principle, of a stronger reference, the same verbs are used occasionally with πρὸς and an accusative; as, ἡδονὰς πρὸς ἡδονὰς, καὶ λύπας πρὸς λύπας καὶ φόβον καταλλάττεσθαι. Plato. Instead of the genitive the dative also is put; as, ἐναλλάξασα φόνον φανάτω. Eurip.

2. This genitive is besides often accompanied by others substantives, or prepositions, on which it depends; thus, φεύγειν ἐπ' αἰτία φόνου. Demosth. ἐγράψατο (με) τούτων αὐτῶν ἕνεκα. Plut. γράφεσθαι τινα γραφὴν φόνου τραύματος. Æschin. ἀπογράφεσθαι φόνον δίκην. Antiph. Other verbs of accusing, &c. are, on account of the nature of their composition, differently constructed. Those compounded with κατὰ take the person in the genitive, and the crime, or the punishment, in the accusative; as κατηγορεῖν τι τινός; the verb ἐγκαλεῖν has the person in the dative, and the crime in the accusative; as ἐγκαλῶν δ' ἐμοὶ φόνους. Soph. The punishment is also sometimes in the genitive, yet seldom any word except θάνατον; as, καὶ θανάτου δὲ οὗτοι κρίνουσι. Xen. ἀνθρώπων καταψηφισθέντων θανάτου ἢ φυγῆς. Plato. The adjective ἐνοχός, which properly is constructed with the dative, sometimes takes the genitive; as, οὐδεὶς ἐνοχός ἐστι λειποταξίου οὐδὲ δειλίας. Lys. It takes also the genitive of the punishment; as, ἐνοχοὶ δεσμοῦ γεγῆνασι. Demosth.

3. This is governed by ἐπὶ, sometimes expressed, as ἐφ' ἡμέρης. Her. When the Dative is used, it is governed by ἐν understood, and sometimes expressed; as, ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ θίρεσι, Thuc. The ellipsis of ἐπὶ is a convenient one for the young student; the philosophical principle, however, on which this use of the genitive is founded, seems to be in reality the reference to a part of time. vid. Preliminary Remarks. See also the notes to the rule for the genitive absolute.

4. Οἶμοι is often prefixed, as οἶμοι τῶν κακῶν, Aristoph. i. e. ἕνεκα. (vid. Preliminary Remarks.)

Comparatives are followed by a Genitive; as,

Ἀναρχίας μετ' ἑὸν οὐκ ἔστι κακόν, Sophocles, *There is no greater evil than anarchy.*¹

Partitives, Comparatives, Superlatives, Interrogatives, and Numerals, govern the Genitive Plural; as,

Οἱ νεωτέροι ἀνθρώπων, The younger of men.

Κάλλιστος ποταμῶν, The most beautiful of rivers.

Verbs signifying the senses, are followed by a Genitive, excepting verbs of sight, which require the Accusative; as,

Τῶν μαρτύρων ἀκηκόατε, Isoc. *You have heard the witnesses.*²

1. Most Grammarians make the genitive of comparison depend on ἀντὶ or πρὸ understood. Sometimes these prepositions are expressed; as, μεῖζονα ἀντὶ τῆς αὐτοῦ πάτρας, Soph. ἀντὶ τοῦ τάχους κρείσσων, Eurip. οἷσιν ἡ τυραννὶς πρὸ ἐλευθερίας ἦν ἀσπαστότερον, Herod. In these and other similar constructions, however, the preposition will be found to impart a force to the comparison which it would not otherwise possess; and hence the reason of its being added. The true principle on which the genitive of comparison depends will be found stated in the Preliminary Remarks.

2. Verbs of seeing always govern an Accusative. Many of the others likewise govern an Accusative with the Attic writers. The Verb ἀκούω most commonly governs the Accusative of the sound, and the Genitive of that which produces it; but neither without exception. The use of the Accusative after verbs of seeing, seems to have arisen from the circumstance, of the Greeks considering the eye as deriving its images from its own operations on the objects presented to it; whereas the other senses were supposed to be acted upon by external objects, not to act upon them. When the Attics therefore made other verbs than those of sight govern an accusative, they ascribed to themselves, from a feeling of national vanity, a greater refinement in all the organs of sense than was supposed to be possessed by their neighbours, for they placed hearing, &c. on a level with sight, and made the former senses as active in their operations on external objects as the faculty of vision.

Ἀκούω, signifying to hear one's self called, or simply to be called, has the construction of Verbs of existence; as οὐτ' ἀκουσόμεαι κάκος, Soph. It is often used with the Adverbs εὖ, κακῶς, and καλῶς, and followed by ὑπο or παρὰ with a Genitive; as κακῶς ἀκούειν ὑπο τῶν πολιτῶν, Isoc. Thus Cicero, Est hominis ingenui velle bene audire ab omnibus. So Milton, Or hearst thou rather pure etherial stream. Perhaps the construction of ἀκούω as a Verb of existence, may be explained on the principle of the Nominative with the Infinitive; as ἀκούει Σαμαρείτης καὶ δαι-

Οἷός οὖν καὶ γυναῖκας ἔξω τοῦ περιβόλου ἱστηκυίας ; Cebes.
Do you see then also females standing without the enclosure ?

Verbs of beginning, admiring, wanting, remembering, and the like, with their contraries, govern the Genitive ;¹ as, + Ἀρχεῖτε βοκολικᾶς ἀοιδᾶς, Theocr. Begin the pastoral strain.

 Τίς οὐκ ἂν ἀγάσαιο τοῦς ἀρετῆς ; Dem. Who would not admire virtue ?

Τὸ ἐρᾶν τῶν σωφρόνων, Æsch. To love the discreet.

Ἀμέλεις τῶν φίλων, Xen. You neglect your friends.

Verbs derived from Comparatives, or in which the idea of Comparison is involved, together with many verbs coming from nouns, and equivalent in meaning to the primitive with a verb, require the Genitive ; as,

Ἡτῶσθαι τινος, Xen. To be inferior to any one.

Ἦστερησε τοῦς μάχης, Xen. He arrived after the battle.

Ἐτυράννευε Κορίνθου, Herod. He was king of Corinth.

Ἐλέγετο τοῦτων ἀρχεῖν, Xen. He was said to command these

The Genitive is put with verbs of all kinds, even with those which govern an Accusative, when the action does not refer to the whole object, but to a part ; as,

Πάσσε δ' ἄλδς, Hom. He sprinkled some salt.

Ὀπιῆσαι κρεῶν, Hom. To roast some flesh.

Ἐγὼ οἶδα τῶν ἑμῶν ἡλικιωτῶν, Plato. I know some of those of the same age as myself.

A Noun and Participle are put absolute in the Genitive ;² as, μονῶν, He is called a Samaritan and a demoniac ; for ἀκούει αὐτοῦ ὀνομαζέσθαι, ὅς κληθῆναι, Σαμαρείτης καὶ δαιμονῶν, he hears himself named, or called, &c.

1. For an explanation of this and the two next rules, vid. Preliminary Remarks.

2. The original force of the Genitive absolute was an expression of time. Now, as νυκτός means by night time, so also, ἐμοῦ καθεύδοντος ταῦτα ἐγένετο, means at the time that I slept this happened. If this duration

Adjectives signifying profit, obedience, fitness, trust, clearness, facility, and their contraries ; and of time is ascertained by an historical person, the preposition ἐν is often used with these Genitives. Thus ἐν Κύρου βασιλείῳ, in the reign of Cyrus. This construction of the Genitive absolute is adopted not only to denote time, but every idea expressed in English by if, since, because, in that, &c. as θεοῦ δίδωτος, if God give ; τούτων οὕτως ἔχόντων, since these things are thus circumstanced ; ἱπικειμένων τῶν πολεμίων τῇ πόλει, while the enemy besieged the city.

In certain cases nominatives and accusatives absolute are used. With such impersonals as ἔξεστιν, it is permitted, πρέπει, it is becoming, &c. the absolute case is always the nominative or accusative of the neuter participle ; as διὰ τί μένεις, ἔδν ἀπικεῖναι ; why dost thou remain, when it is lawful to depart ? Datives absolute are also used, particularly in statements of time ; as περίονται τῷ ἔνιαυτῷ παλιν φαίνουσι φρονοῦν ἐπὶ τὴν Ἑλιν, as the year elapsed they make another demonstration against Elis. The nominative absolute is of rare occurrence.

By absolute, with the exception of the nominative, nothing more is meant than that the governing word is understood ; thus, with the genitive ἐν may be understood ; with the dative, σὺν, ἐπὶ, or μετὰ ; with the accusative, μετὰ. The nominative absolute, however, which, as in English, is the only true absolute case, always supposes its proper verb ; thus, ἀνοίξαντες τοῦ σώματος πόρους, παλιν γίνεται τὸ πῦρ. When they have opened the pores of the body, fire is kindled anew. Here ἀνοίξαντες is equivalent to ὅταν ἀνοίξαντες ὥσι, the same with ἀνοιξῶσι.

In the use of the Genitive absolute the Greek differs from the Latin. For, where the Latin, in the use of the ablative absolute, is obliged, on account of the want of a participle in the perfect active, to turn the sentence, and to use the perfect participle passive ; the Greek, on the other hand, whose principal tenses all have their own participles, can retain the active construction, and then the participle is referred to the subject of the principal proposition ; thus, ῥισο λύπο diffugerunt oves (for quum lupum vidissent) is in Greek ἰδοῦσαι τὸν λύκον αἱ οἰες ἀπεφυγον, not ἀφθέντος τοῦ λύκου. Thus, too, ταῦτα ἀκούσας ἡσθη, his auditis, &c. and in all similar cases. And this construction is universally admissible, when the accompanying action, which is expressed by the participle, belongs definitely to the subject of the principal proposition ; whereas the passive construction obtains where the action expressed by the participle does not refer, or does not refer entirely, to the subject of the principal proposition ; thus, τῶν πολεμίων δφθέντων, ἔφυγον οἱ πολῖται, when they (not merely the citizens) saw the enemy, the citizens fled. The construction with the genitive absolute is used properly, only when the action which is expressed by the participle has its peculiar subject, distinct from that of the principal verb.

1. This case is generally used as the Dative in Latin. It expresses the object to which the action is directed, or for which it is intended. It implies acquisition and loss. It is placed after εἰπὶ, &c. in the sense of habeo, and after Verbs signifying likeness, agreement, trust, resistance, relation, &c. It follows Verbs compounded with ἀντι, ἐν, ἐπὶ, παρὰ, πρὸς, σὺν, ἐπὶ. It is frequently governed by ἐν, ἐπὶ, σὺν, or some other Preposition, understood. (vid. Preliminary Remarks.) those compounded with σὺν and ὅμου, govern the Dative ; as,

Ἡμῖν ἔσται χρήσιμον, It will be useful to us.

Συντροφος τῇ ἀπλότητι, Accustomed to simplicity

Ἐλευθέρω ἀνδρὶ εὐκτὸν, to be wished for by a liberal man.

The instrument and manner of an action are put in the Dative ;¹ as, Ἀργυρεῖαις λόγχαισι μάχου, καὶ πάντα κρατήσεις, Oracle to Philip, Fight with silver weapons, and you will conquer the world.

Ἥλασε ξίφει καὶ ἐπεφνε δόλῳ, Hom. *He struck him with a sword, and killed him by stratagem.*²

Verbs of serving, giving, rejoicing, obeying, trusting, fighting, and the like, with their contraries, govern the Dative ; as Βοηθεῖν τῇ πατρίδι, To help his country.

Εἶκαιν κάκοις, To yield to misfortunes.

Μάχεσθαι τοῖς πολεμοῖς, To fight against enemies.

Πᾶς ἀνὴρ αὐτῷ πόνει, Every man labours for himself.

Verbs signifying to accompany or follow, to blame, to converse, to pray, to use, are followed by a Dative ; as,

Τῷ νῆες ἐποντο, Hom. Him ships followed.

Πιστοὺς ἡγοῦ τοὺς τοῖς ἀμαρτανομένοις ἐπιτιμῶντας, Plutarch. Think those faithful, who reprove your faults.

Σοφοῖς ὁμιλῶν, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκθήσει σοφός, Menander. Associating with the wise, you yourself will also become wise.

Εὔχεσθαι Διὶ, To pray to God.

Προβάτοις χρῆσθαι, Xen. *To use sheep.*³

1. This case in these instances may be called the Ablative, and the analogy with the Latin will be preserved.

2. Instead of the Dative, the Prepositions διὰ, ἐν, ἐπὶ, κατὰ, are sometimes used with their proper cases ; as ἐπαίρεσθαι ἐπὶ πλούτῳ, Xen. ἐν βέλαι πληγῇς, Eurip.

To this rule may be referred the excess or deficiency of measure, as ἀνθρώπων μακροῦ ἄρστος, Her. The measure of excess is sometimes found in the Accusative, especially in the old Poets ; as πατὴρ πολλὸν ἀμείνων, much braver than his father.

3. Many Verbs have a Dative of the person, and a Genitive of the thing ; as ἀμφισβητῶ, κοινωνῶ, μεταδίδωμι, πετέχω, συγγινώσκω, φθονῶ ; and Eĩmì, put for ἔχω, to have, governs the Dative ; as, ^o Ὅσοις οὐκ ἦν ἄλφειτα, As many as had not bread.

An Impersonal Verb governs the Dative ; as,

*Ἐξεσσι μοι ἀπιέναι. *It is lawful for me to go away.*¹

Some Passive Verbs have the Dative of the agent after them ; as,

Τὸ μέγεθος ἐκείνῳ τῶν πεπραγμένων, the greatness of his actions.

Poetical writers, for the Genitive, frequently use the Dative ; as, Οὐκ Ἀγαμέμνονι ἦνδανε θυμῷ, It did not please the mind of Agamemnon.

Neuter Adjectives in τέον, govern the Person in the Dative, and the Thing in the case of the Verb, from which they are derived ; as,

Τι ἂν αὐτῷ ποιητέον εἶεν, Xen. What must he do ?

Ῑμῖν ταῦτα πρακτέον, Dem. *You must do these things.*²

the Impersonals δεῖ, μέλει, μεταμέλει, μέτεστι, προσήκει ; as ὧν ἐγὼ σοι οὐ φθονήσω, Xen. σοι παιδῶν τί δεῖ, Eurip. Χρῆ, πρέπει, and δεῖ, it behoveth, govern the Accusative with the Infinitive, according to the language of the Grammarians ; and δεῖ and χρῆ, signifying necessity or want, ἔλλειπει, μέλει, &c. govern the Dative of the person and the Genitive of the thing.

1. Perhaps the only true Impersonals are those where we supply it, and some operation of nature or of circumstances is denoted ; as δεῖ, it rains. The Verbs commonly called Impersonal, are so only in name, for they have an actual subject, which is expressed either by an Infinitive or other dependent clause. Thus, in the example under the rule, the Nominative to ἔξεσσι is the infinitive ἀπιέναι, and the passage is equivalent to το ἀπιέναι ἔξεσσι μοι, the going away is lawful to me. So also, δεῖ ὑμᾶς τούτο ποιεῖν, it behoves you to do this, is the same as, the doing this is incumbent upon you.

2. These Adjectives imply necessity, and have in the neuter the force of the Latin Gerund. The whole construction has been imitated in Latin : Quam viam nobis quoque ingrediendum sit, Cic. Æternas quoniam pœnas in morte timendum, Lucretius.

Verbals in τέος correspond to the Future Participle Passive in Latin ; as, ποιητέος, faciendus, ποτέος, bibendus. These also have the Person in the Dative, like those in τέον, but agree with the Noun, expressing the thing, in Gender, Number, and Case ; as ταῦτα ὑμῖν ποιητέα ἐστί, hæc vobis facienda sunt. This form in τέα is more common in Attic Substantives sometimes have a Dative after them; as,

Ἀπὸ τῆς ἐκάστω διανέμεσσεως, From the distribution to each.

Nouns signifying the time or place in which a person or thing exists, are put in the Dative; as,

Τῇ γῇ, In the earth.

Μαραθῶνι, At Marathon.

Ἀθήναις, At Athens.

Αὐτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, On the same day.

Ὁ αὐτὸς, the same, is followed by a Dative; as,

Τῆς αὐτῆς εἰσι ζήμιαις ἄξιοι οἱ συγκρούποντες τοῖς ἐξαμαρτάνουσιν, *Isoc. Those who conceal, are deserving of the same punishment as those who commit a fault.*¹

ACCUSATIVE.²

Verbs signifying actively govern the Accusative; as,

Κυλινδεῖ τὴν σφαῖραν, *He rolls the ball.*³

The Accusative is of universal use, with κατὰ understood; ⁴ as, than τέον. Sometimes, however, the person is put in the accusative, when the verbal loses a portion of its strong reference to what must be done, and approximates in meaning to the impersonal δεῖ with the infinitive, denoting what ought to be done; as, Οὐδενὶ τρόπῳ φαιμέν ἐκόντας ἀδικητέον εἶναι; Plato: the same as οὐδενὶ τρόπῳ φαιμέν (ἡμᾶς) δεῖν ἐκόντας ἀδικεῖν; Do we assert that we ought in no way voluntarily to commit injustice? The two constructions are united in Plat. Rep. 5, p. 12. Ed. Bip. οὐκοῦν καὶ ἡμῖν νεοστέον—ἐλπίζούτας.

1. Σὺν is here understood. Thus in Latin, Idem facit occidenti, Hor. Et nunc ille eadem nobis juratus in arma, Ovid.

2. The Accusative expresses the object of the action. It is, therefore, as in Latin, governed either by a Verb Active, or by a Preposition expressed or understood.

As in Latin, Verbs of entreating, concealing, and teaching, govern two Acc. Verbs Neuter also often assume an Active signification; and both are followed by an Acc. of their own signification.

The Accusative seems to be the favourite Case of the Attics, who frequently use it for the Genitive and the Dative.

3. A peculiar idiom frequently occurs in Greek, in which, what should regularly be the Nominative is found in the Accusative, governed by the Verb; as οἶδα σὺ τίς εἶ, I know thee who thou art, for οἶδα τίς σὺ εἶ, I know who thou art. This is sometimes imitated in Latin.

4. Or διὰ, εἰς, περὶ, πρὸς. Κατὰ is the most general, as it embraces the Δεινὸς μάχην, Æschylus. Terrible in fight.

*Πειρῶ τὸ μὲν σῶμα εἶναι φιλόπονος, τὴν δὲ ψυχὴν φιλοσόφος, [Isoc. Endeavour to be in body fond of labour, and in mind a lover of wisdom.]*¹

Verbs of sense, with the Attics, generally govern an Accusative; as,

Ἀκούω ταῦτα, I hear these things.

Verbs signifying to do or speak well or ill, to give or take away, to admonish, to clothe or unclothe, etc. govern an Accusative of the Person, and another of the Thing;² as,

*Πολλὰ ἀγαθὰ τὴν πόλιν ἐποίησε, Isoc. He conferred many services on the city.*³

Ἐργασμαι κακὰ τὸν οἶκον, Thuc. I have done evil to the house.

Ἀποστρεῖ με τὰ χρήματα, Isoc. He deprives me of my property.

*Ἐμάτα με ἐξέδυσαν, Hom. They stripped me of my clothes.*⁴

Distance and space are put in the Accusative; as,

*Ἐφεσσὸς ἀπέχει ἀπὸ Σαρδέων τριῶν ἡμερῶν ὁδόν, Xen. Ephesus is distant from Sardis three days' journey.*⁵ parts, qualities, and relations; διὰ is applied to the cause; εἰς, περὶ, and πρὸς, to motion. They are sometimes expressed; as ὃς κατὰ σῶμα καλὸς, κατὰ νοῦν δ' αὖ ἐστὶν ἄμορφος, Epigr.

The Accusative sometimes appears in the beginning of a sentence, without a regimen expressed; as τοὺς Ἕλληνας οὐδὲν σαφὲς λέγεται, Xen. Quod spectat ad.

1. This construction is frequent in Latin poetry: Crinem soluta, Virg. Humeros amictus, Hor.

2. One of these Accusatives is governed by κατὰ understood.

3. To the Accusative of the thing are frequently joined the Adverbs εὖ, καλῶς, κακῶς, instead of καλὰ, κακὰ, &c. The Verb alone, implying treatment, may have the same construction; as Ζεὺς με ταῦτ' ἔδρασεν, Aristoph.

4. Verbs of adjuring and swearing are also found with two Accusatives; as, ὀρκίζω σε οὐρανόν, Orpheus. Thus in Latin, Hæc eadem Teram, Mare, Sidera juro, Virg.

A change of Voice implies a change in the Case of the Person; but the case of the Thing is preserved; as ἡμεῖς πλειστά εὐεργετοῦμεθα, Xen. θοιμάτιον ἐκδοσμένους, Dem. Thus in Latin, Induitur faciem cultumque Dianæ, Ovid. Inscripti nomina regum, Virg.

5. The Accusative of Distance and Space, and that of Time, are both governed by a Preposition understood.

Continuance of time is put in the Accusative; as,

Ἐμεινεν ἡμέρας τρεῖς, He abode three days.

VERBS PASSIVE.

Verbs of a Passive signification are followed by a Genitive governed by ὑπὸ or πρὸς, by ἀπὸ rarely;¹ as,

Ὁ νοῦς ὑπὸ οἴνου διαφθείρεται, Isoc. The understanding is impaired by wine,

INFINITIVE.

One Verb governs another in the Infinitive; as,

Θέλω λέγειν, I wish to speak.

The infinitive is often used to signify what is expressed in Latin by ad and the gerund, or by the participle in dus; as,

Ἔδωκεν αὐτὸ δούλῳ φορῆσαι. He gave it to a slave to carry.

Ὁ ἄνθρωπος πέφυκε φιλεῖν. Man was formed to love.

Παρέχω ἑμαυτὸν ἐρωτᾶν. I present myself to be questioned.

Ἦλθον ἰδεῖν σε. I came to see you.

The infinitive is governed by an adjective (or substantive) expressing fitness or qualification; as,

Ἐπιτήδειος ποιεῖν τι. Fit to do any thing.

Οὐ δεινός λέγειν. Not powerful in speaking.

Whenever an infinitive, qualifying the preceding phrase or clause, does not admit of a sufficiently obvious construction, particularly in con-

1. Frequently, however, the Dative is appended to passive verbs, with or without ὑπό, especially to the perfect passive of verbs whose perfect active is not much used; as, τὰτα λέλεκται ἡμῖν, for λέλεχα τὰτα. Some Verbs, which in the Active are followed by the Genitive or Dative of the person, and the Accusative of the thing, are preceded in the Passive by the Nominative of the person; as οἱ τῶν Ἀθηναίων ἐπιτετραμμένοι φυλακῇ, Thuc. They who were intrusted with the defence of the Athenians, or they to whom the defence of the Athenians was intrusted. Thus, Lævo suspensi oculos, tabulamque lacerto, Hor.

sequence of other words being interposed, it is commonly introduced by ὥστε or ὡς ; as,

*Ἦν δὲ πεπαιδευμένος οὕτως, ὥστε πάνν ῥαδίως ἔχειν ἀρκοῦντα.*¹
He was so brought up as very easily to have what sufficed him.

The infinitive is used as a neuter substantive, not only singly, but in connexion with phrases, provided with an article, and subject to all the constructions of nouns ; as,

Τὸ φυλάξαι τὰγαθὰ τοῦ κτήσασθαι χαλεπώτερον, To preserve property is harder than to acquire it.

Τὸ μὲν οὖν ἐπιόρκον καλεῖν τινα, ἄνευ τοῦ τὰ πεπραγμένα δεῖκνύναι, λοιδορία ἐστίν. To call one perjured, without showing his deeds, is calumny.

The infinitive mood has an accusative before it ; as,

Φασι τὸν Οὐρανὸν δυναστεῦσαι τοῦ παντός. They say that Uranus ruled over the universe.

The infinitive mood has a nominative before it when the reference is to the same person implied by the nominative of the preceding verb ; and in this construction the nominative before the infinitive is omitted, except when an emphasis is laid upon it ; as,²

Ἔφη εἶναι στρατηγός. He said that he was a general, (αὐτὸς understood before εἶναι.)

Ἔφη αὐτὸς εἶναι στρατηγός, οὐκ ἐκείνους. He said that he himself was a general, not they.

1. Sometimes a participle takes the place of the infinitive ; see an explanation of this construction in the notes upon the syntax of the participle.

2. The principle of the construction of a nominative with the infinitive, whenever there is no change of person, is deserving of the student's attentive consideration, and will afford a key to the grammatical resolution of many phrases and forms of construction which would otherwise be unintelligible. The Latin poets imitate this construction ; thus. Rettulit Ajax esse Jovis pronepos. Ovid. Uxor invicti Jovis esse nescis. Horat. Vir bonus et sapiens dignis ait esse paratus. Id. Sometimes even without the infinitive ; as, Sensit medios delapsus in hostes. Virg. The Latin prose writers, however, always use the strict grammatical form, viz. the accusative with the pronoun se. The construction of a nominative with the infinitive may be referred to the general principle of Attraction, or, in other words, to the association of ideas.

Ἐνομίζοντο οὐδ' αὐτοὶ σωθίσεσθαι. They thought that they themselves would not be saved.

Instead of the Infinitive preceded by the Accusative, the Indicative preceded by ὅτι or ὥς,¹ is commonly used; as, Γινῶθι ὅτι ἐγὼ ἀληθῆ λέγω, Xen. Know that I speak truth.

Λέγω ὥς ἐκεῖνος οὐ πολεμεῖ, Dem. I say that he does not make war.²

The Infinitive of the Present, Future, and

1. Ὅτι and ὥς are really Pronouns; the former the Neuter of ὅστις, ἤτις; the latter the same as ὅς, in an Adverbial form. This will clearly explain the construction: γινῶθι ὅτι, know that; ἐγὼ ἀληθῆ λέγω, I speak truth. Λέγω ὥς, I say that or thus; ἐκεῖνος οὐ πολεμεῖ, he does not make war. So, And they told him that Jesus passeth by. Luke 18. It is not necessary that τις should be always joined with ὅς. We find in Homer, Γινώσκων ὃ οἱ αὐτὸς ὑπείρεχε χεῖρας Ἀπόλλων: i. e. Γινώσκων ὃ, knowing this: Apollo stretched his hand over him.

Ὅτι is sometimes used at the end of a sentence, in a manner which strongly elucidates this explanation; ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀποδώσεις, αἶδ' ὅτι, Aristoph. But you will not restore it, I know that.

Sometimes ὅτι is added to strengthen the force of another Pronoun; a practice common to the best Greek and Latin writers: ἀλλ' οὖν ἐγωγ' οὐ πῶσμαι, τοῦτ' ἴσθ' ὅτι, Aristoph. Hoc ipsum scias.

The Greeks in narrations frequently use the Present Tense, when ὅτι introduces the words of the person who is the subject of the narrative. Ὅτι, in such constructions, may either be rendered "as follows," or, what is far preferable, may be regarded as equivalent to the inverted commas in English, and remain consequently untranslated. But the Latins, in the idiom of the Accusative and Infinitive, place the Verb in the Perfect Tense.

Ὅτι sometimes signifies that, or to the end that. In this sense the Latin ut, generally shortened into ut, is the same word. Here it is still the Pronoun, and the full expression is διὰ ὅτι, for that, for this. The two words often coalesce, and become διότι. Thus Shakspeare, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines lag of a brother.

Sometimes ὅτι signifies elliptically what is the reason that—; as εἰποι ὅτι τόσον ἐχώσατο Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων, Hom. Here the full expression is εἰποι τί ἐστὶν αἴτιον ὅτι—let him say what is the reason for this, Phæbus is so enraged; or διὰ ὅτι.

It is likewise frequently used for because, and is there too governed by διὰ, for this reason.

These observations will easily suggest an analogical solution of the origin and use of the word in other languages.

2. This construction has seldom been imitated in Latin. But ὅτι has been rendered by quod, quia, and even quoniam, in the Vulgate, a translation which disgusted the classical reader, and which was succeeded by the more elegant versions of Beza and of Castalio. Yet we find some instances of that use of quod. Equidem scio jam filius quod amemus, Ter. Premoneo, nunquam scripta quod illa legat, Ovid.

Aorists, preceded by the Verb μελλω, expresses the Future; as,

Μέλλω τεθνάναι, Plato, I am about to die.

The Infinitive of some Verbs is preceded by ἔχω, in the sense of δύναμαι; as,

Μηδὲν ἔχουσιν εἰπεῖν, Dem. They have nothing to say.¹

The Infinitive is often governed by another Verb in an Imperative sense, understood; as,

Μήτε σὺγ' ἀθανάτοισι μάχεσθαι, Hom. (δρά, beware, or θέλε, wish, und.) Nor contend thou with the immortals.²

The Infinitive is sometimes put absolutely, without another Verb expressed; as,

Ὡς ἀπλῶς εἰπεῖν, Dem. To speak plainly.

Δοκεῖν ἐμοί, Soph. As it appears to me.³

Μικροῦ δεῖν, Isoc. Nearly.⁴

PARTICIPLE.⁵

The Infinitive is often elegantly preceded by

1. Thus, De Diis neque ut sint, neque ut non sint, habeo dicere, Cic.

2. Thus in Italian, non dir niente, take care to say nothing. Matthiæ, Gr. Gr. vol. 2. p. 284, considers it probable that this usage of the Infinitive was a remnant of the ancient simplicity of the language, from which the action required was expressed by means of the Verb absolute, or the Mood of the Verb which of itself indicated the action, without any reference to other parts of speech.

3. When a particle is joined to the Infinitive with the meaning of after, when, before, until, &c. there is supposed to be an ellipsis of συμβαίνει, or συνέβη, or συμβαίη, or συμβῇ, (according as the context requires a Present or a Past Tense, the Optative or Subjunctive Mood). When, however, the particle has the meaning of as or so, then ἔξεστι, δεῖ, εἰκός ἐστι, or something equivalent, is supposed to be understood: thus, ὥς ἀπλῶς εἰπεῖν, is for ὥς ἔξεστι ἀπλῶς εἰπεῖν, (as far as it is permitted) to speak plainly. So also, ὥς ἰδεῖν αὐτὸν, when he saw him, for ὥς συνέβη ἰδεῖν αὐτὸν, when (it happened that) he saw him; πρὶν ἀλέκτορα φωνῆσαι, before the cock crew, for πρὶν συνέβη, &c. before (it happened that) the cock crew.

4. The Infinitive is sometimes understood; as ὀλίγον παρδρόθην, Lysias, (δεν und.): συνέλονται, Dem. (φοῖσαι und.)

5. The distinction between the participle and the infinitive forms one of the most important parts of the Greek syntax.—If a verb is governed by another verb, or by an adjective, a double relation is established, according to which the use of the infinitive or participle is determined. 1. Either the leading verb or adjective conveys in itself a perfect and independent idea; or, 2. it has no perfect idea, but expresses an action which first becomes perfect by the addition of its reference. Thus the verbs, I pray, I persuade, I will, &c. always require an addition which the verbs εἰμὶ, γίνομαι, φαίνομαι, ὑπάρχω, ἔχω, κύρω;¹ as, expresses, for what I pray, to what I persuade any one, what I will. Now, when such an imperfect verb or adjective refers to a verb, this reference expresses either the consequence in view, the end, or else merely the object of the first verb or adjective. Thus, in the phrases, I will write, I command you to write, I admonish you to go, &c. the English infinitive is the consequence in view of the first verb, and is, in most cases, expressed in Latin by ut. On the contrary, in the phrases I saw him fall, I heard him say, scio me esse mortalem, intelligo me errasse, the infinitive is merely the object, not the end, of the verbs to see, hear, know, perceive. Upon these premises are founded the following rules:

Rule 1. When an imperfect verb or adjective is followed by a verb which expresses a thing to be done, the latter in Greek is put in the infinitive without a conjunction. Thus, δέομαι σου εἰλεῖν, I entreat thee to come; παραινῶ σοι γράφειν, I exhort thee to write; ἐπεισεν ἐμε πορεύεσθαι, he persuaded me to go; ἐμώλυνεν με γράφειν, he prevented me from writing. Thus the infinitive sometimes answers to the infinitive in Latin after the verbs nolo, cupio, conor, audeo, &c. when the subject of the two actions is the same, and sometimes to the conjunctions, ut, ne, quominus; as, oro te ut venias, hortor te ut scribas, persuasit mihi ut proficiscerer, impedivit me quominus scriberem. To the rule in Greek, however, ἐπιμελεῖσθαι constitutes a regular exception, being followed by ὅπως with the finite verb.

Rule 2. When an imperfect verb is accompanied by another, which marks merely the object of the former, the latter is put in the participle, sometimes where in Latin also the participle is used, as video te scribentem, audio te docentem, ὁρῶ σε γράφοντα, ἀκούω σε διδάσκοντα; and sometimes after verbs, which indicate a perception by means of the external senses, or the understanding, where in Latin the accusative with the infinitive is used; as scio me esse mortalem, sentio te iratum, esse, &c. οἶδα θνητὸς ὢν, αἰσθάνομαι σε χαλεπαίνοντα.

The distinction of the construction with the infinitive, and with the participle, is most clearly shown, when the same verb takes, according to its different senses, sometimes one, sometimes the other, mood; thus μανθάνειν, to perceive, has the participle, as, ἵνα μάθῃ σοφιστὴς ὢν τοῦ Διὸς νωθίστερος. Æschyl. that he may perceive that he is a more dull contriver than Jove; whereas μανθάνειν, to learn, has the infinitive, as μαθήσονται ἐναντιοῦσθαι. Xen. they will learn to oppose. Thus too, γινώσκειν, to perceive, has the participle, but to learn, the infinitive. It must be remembered, however, that the verbs, to say, to announce, constitute a regular exception to this rule, as well as, to mean, to think, to hope, which last take the infinitive, the former also ὅτι with the finite verb.

1. The Participle is sometimes used alone, εἰμὶ being understood; as μήκων κάρη βάλεν, ἥρ' ἐνὶ κῆκω βριθομένη (ἐστὶ und.) Hom. A poppy bends the head, which in a garden is weighed down. This ellipsis is found in Latin, not only in the Poets, but in the Historians, particularly in Tacitus. To this construction may be generally referred what is called the Nominative absolute. Thus φύλαξ ἐλεγχῶν φύλακα, Soph. (ἦν und.) Sentinel was blaming sentinel. σωθεῖς δὲ, παῖδας ἐξ ἐμῆς ἡμοσπόρου κτησάμενος, (οἷ und.) Eurip.

The Participle of εἰμὶ is often understood; as οἱ ἐν τέλει, (δυντες und.) Thuc. Those who are in power. τὰ πρὸς ποσὶ, (δντα und.) Soph. The things present.

Οὐκ ἐχθρὸς ὑπῆρχεν ὦν, Dem. He was not an enemy.

Τὸν λόγον σου θαυμάσας ἔχω, Plato. *I have admired your speech.*²

With a Participle τυγχάνω signifies by chance; λαμβάνω, privately or ignorantly; φθάνω,³ previously; as,

*Ἐφη τυχεῖν ἔων, Her. He said that he chanced to be.

*Ελάθομεν διαφέροντες, Plato. *We were not aware that we differed.*⁴

Φθάνω τοὺς φίλους εὐεργετῶν, Xen. I anticipate my friends in conferring benefits.

The Participle is used after δῆλος, φανερός, ἀφανής, &c. ;

Αὐτὸς τοῦτο ποιῶν φανερός ἦν, Arist. *He manifestly did this.*⁵

1. Thus εἰμί is used as an auxiliary with Participles; as τεθνηκότες εἶεν, Thuc. ἔστω φιληθεῖς, Eurip. μεταπεμπομένοι ἦσαν, Thuc. τετληότες εἰμίν, Hom.

2. This is imitated in the Latin Participle Passive, Neque ea res falsum me habuit, Sallust. Similar to this are the French and English idioms.

3. The primitive meaning of φθάνω is, to get beforehand, to be beforehand with, to anticipate. Among the many peculiar phrases in which it bears a part, the following may be enumerated as the most remarkable. In all of them the primitive force of φθάνω may be easily traced. Thus, ἔφθησαν πολλῶν οἱ Σκύθαι τοὺς Πέρσας ἐπὶ τὴν γέφυραν ἀπικόμενοι, Herod. The Scythians came to the bridge long before the Persians. Φθάνειν εἰς πόλιν, Xen. To reach the city first. Οὐ γὰρ ἔφθη μοι συμβῆσα ἡ ἀτυχία καὶ εὐθὺς ἐπεχείρησαν κ. τ. λ. Scarcely had misfortune befallen me, than they immediately attempted, &c. Οὐ γὰρ φθάνουσι παρὰ ἄνδρα ἀπικνεύμεναι, καὶ ἐν γαστρὶ ἰσχυοῦσι, Hippoc. For they no sooner come to the men than they conceive; properly, coming to, &c. they are not beforehand with what I am going to mention, viz. they conceive. Οὐκ ἂν φθάνοις ποιῶν τοῦτο, Eurip. You cannot be too quick in doing this, or, do it immediately. Τοιγὰρ φευγέων παῖδας οὐκ ἔτ' ἂν φθάνοις, Eurip. Do not therefore any longer defer raising a family. Οὐκ ἂν φθάνοις περαινών, Plato. Quickly finish. Οὐ φθάνοιτ' ἔτ' ἂν θνήσκοντες, Eurip. for οὐ φθάνοιτε ἄλλο τι πάσχοντες πρὶν ἢ θνήσκειν, you will quickly die. The sense of φθάνω underwent, however, a change in writers of a late epoch; thus in Ptolemæus de Judic. Facultate, p. 5. φθάνει means extends; and in the Analecta, 2. p. 155. we have ἰπὸ χεῦματος ἐφθάνετο, he was snatched away by the stream, i. e. before he could help himself.

4. Thus in Latin, Nec vizit malè qui natus moriensque fefellit, Hor.

5. This is more elegant than αὐτὸς τοῦτο ποιῶν φανερῶς ἦν, or than αὐτὸν τοῦτο ποιεῖν φανερον ἦν, or than οὔτι αὐτὸς τοῦτο ποιεῖ φανερον ἦν.

The Participle is used instead of the Infinitive, after Verbs signifying to persevere, to desist, to perceive, to show, or an affection of the mind; as,

Τὴν εἰρήνην ἄγοντες διατελοῦσιν, Isoc. *They continue preserving peace.*¹

Θεὸν οὐ λήξω προστάτην ἔχων, Soph. I shall not cease having God for my defender.

*Ἰσθὶ ἀφιγμένη, Aristoph. Know that thou art come

Δείξω σοφὸς γεγώς, Eurip. I shall show that I am wise.

Μέμνησο ἄνθρωπος ὢν, Simonides. Remember that you are a man.

*Ὁ Θεὸς πολλάκις χαίρει τοὺς μὲν μικροὺς μεγάλους ποιῶν τοὺς δὲ μεγάλους μικροὺς, Xen. *God is often delighted in making the little great, and the great little.*² are followed by the Genitive, Dative, or Accusative;³ either because they were originally Nouns, or because those cases are governed by a Preposition understood.⁴

1. The principle on which this rule is founded has been explained in the notes at the commencement of the Syntax of the Participle.

2. Σύνειδα is found with various Cases: ξύνειδα ἑμαυτῷ σοφὸς ὢν, Plato. ἑμαυτῷ ξυνήδειν οὐδὲν ἐπισταμένῳ, Plato.

This last expression must be referred to the force of ATTRACTION, which is particularly exerted on Participles. Attraction is indeed of universal influence in Greek construction. It seems as if, on many occasions, of two words relating to each other, but in different constructions, the Greeks wished one only to be in a particular Case, and the other to be attracted by it into the same Case.

A few additional instances will be here given. Οὐδὲν πώπορ' οὐδ' αἰσχροῦς οὐδ' ἄκλειος ἀπέβη, τοὺς ἱκέτας ἐλεῆσαντι, Isoc. It has never been disgraceful or inglorious in any one to pity the suppliant: ἐλεῆσαντι is here attracted into the Case of οὐδένι. Σκοπούμενος εὗρισκον οὐδαμῶς ἂν ἄλλως τοῦτο διαπραξάμενος, Isoc. Having considered, I found that I could by no means otherwise execute the business: διαπραξάμενος is attracted into the Case of σκοπούμενος. Οὐτε νῦν μοι μεταμέλει οὕτως ἀπολογησέμεν, Plato. I do not now repent having thus defended myself; for ἀπολογήσασθαι. Thus in Latin, Sed non sustineo esse conscius mihi dissimulanti.

3. *Ἴδε and ἰδοῦ, behold, which are sometimes, like the Latin en and ecce, found with a Nominative, are really Verbs, and govern the Accusative; as ἰδοῦ με, Eurip.

4. Adverbs with the article prefixed, are sometimes used for Adjectives, as ἐν τῷ πρὶν χρόνῳ, Soph. In the former time. In the same manner they are used for Substantives, as οἱ πέλας, Soph. The neighbours, οἱ πάντες, Eurip. The illustrious.

Examples of the former.

Πλὴν, rejection, πλὴν ἐμοῦ, Æschyl. *Excepting me.*¹
 Χάριν, for the sake, χάριν Ἑκτορος, Hom. For the sake of Hector.

 Τοῦ Διὸς ἐνώπιον, Plut. In the sight of God.

Examples of the latter.

* Ἄνευ ὀνομάτων. Plato, (ἀπὸ und.) Without names.

* Ἀμα λαῶ, Hom. (σὺν und.) With the people.

Ναὶ μὲν τόδε σκήπτρον, Hom. (ἐπὶ und.) *I swear by this sceptre.*²

Adverbs of time are sometimes changed into Adjectives; as,

Οὐ χρὴ παννύχιον εὐδεῖν βουλευφόρον ἄνδρα, Hom. *A man of counsel ought not to sleep the whole night.*⁴

Adverbs of quality are elegantly joined with the Verbs ἔχω, πάσχω, ποιέω, φέρω, φύμι, χράομαι, &c.; as,

Ἡδέως ἔχε πρὸς ἅπαντας, Isoc. Be pleasant to all.

Εὐ πάσχειν, εὐ ποιεῖν, Dem. To receive, to confer, benefits.

Two or more Negatives strengthen the Negation; as,

Οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδέν, Eurip. There is nothing.

Οὐδέποτε οὐδέν οὐ μὴ γένηται τῶν δεόντων, Dem. *Nothing that is necessary will ever be done.*⁵

1. Πλὴν sometimes assumes the nature of a Disjunctive, and is followed by every Case, according to the government of the Verb with which it is connected; as οὐδέν ἐστιν ἄλλο φάρμακον, πλὴν λόγος, Isoc. οὐ θέμις πλὴν τοῖς μαθηταῖσιν λέγειν, Aristoph.

2. The particle μὲν, of itself, neither affirms nor denies, but adds strength to that which is affirmed or denied. In affirmations μὲν is usually preceded by ναί; in negations the particle οὐ, or something equivalent, is added.

3. The Preposition is sometimes expressed; ἐκδὸς ἀπ' ἐωυτῶν, Her. μέχρῃς ἐπ' ἐμοῦ, Hom. ῥῆλε ἀπὸ σχεδὴς, Hom. ἅμα σὺν αὐτοῖς, Plut.

4. Thus in Latin, Nec minus Æneas se matutinus agebat, Virg. Nec vespertinus circumgemit ursus ovile, Hor.

5. In Latin, two Negatives make an Affirmative; yet the Greek idiom has been imitated: Neque tu haud dicas tibi non prædictum, Ter. The Greek idiom is of frequent occurrence in Plautus, and other old writers, though sometimes found in more recent ones, as in Propertius, 2. 15. ult. and Ovid. Pont. 1. 1. 66.

But if the two Negatives belong to two different Verbs, they form an Affirmative ; as,

Οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ὅτι οὐκ ὑπέσχετο, He promised every thing.

PREPOSITIONS

govern the Genitive, Dative, or Accusative.¹

GENITIVE.

Prepositions governing the Genitive.

[᾽] Ἀπὸ, ἀντὶ, ἐκ or ἐξ, πρὸ.

DATIVE.

ACCUSATIVE.

Εἰς or ές.

GENITIVE and ACCUSATIVE.

Διὰ, κατὰ, ὑπὲρ.

[᾽] Ἀνά.

1. The principal relations of things to one another are expressed in Greek by three Cases; origin and possession by the Genitive, acquisition and communication by the Dative, and action by the Accusative. The other relations, of time and place, cause and effect, motion and rest, connection and opposition, are expressed by PREPOSITIONS.

In the origin of language and of civilization, PREPOSITIONS were few; but when the progress of arts increased the relations of things, they became more numerous. In succeeding ages, when the extension of mathematical, and the improvements in philosophical science, produced new combinations of language, and required a greater precision of expression, the number of Prepositions was necessarily increased.

But that great variety, which became expedient in modern times, has been applied to the Greek language, and produced some confusion and difficulty to the learner. Twenty different meanings have been assigned to a Greek Preposition; nor were those meanings marked with slight shares of difference: the same Preposition has been made to bear the most opposite senses: to and from, for and against, above and below.

Some successful efforts have lately been made to clear these perplexities. One primary, natural sense has been assigned to each Preposition: to that sense may be referred all the other significations, arising from analogical or figurative relations, easily flowing from it, and regulated by the Case to which the Preposition is prefixed. From the combinations of the Prepositions with the different Cases arises that variety which forms one of the beauties of the Greek language. But that variety is consistent.

GENITIVE, DATIVE, and ACCUSATIVE.

᾽ Ἀντὶ.

The primitive meaning of this preposition is against, and it is perpetually used of one thing set or placed against another, by way of exchange, comparison, or equivalence. It denotes, therefore, that one object is exchanged for another, is given instead of it, comes in its place, &c. Hence we obtain the two general meanings, for; instead of; and hence also this preposition takes the genitive, because that case expresses the idea of removal out of a place, abstraction, &c. Thus,

For. Χάρις ἀντὶ χάριτος. Favour for favour.

Instead of. Εἰρήνη ἀντὶ πόλεμον. Peace instead of war.

Hence we may naturally deduce the following kindred meanings: 1. in the place of; as, ἀντὶ τοῦ πατρὸς, in the place of his father. 2. equal to; as, ἀνὴρ ἀντὶ πολλῶν, a hero equal to many (i. e. fit to be matched against many). 3. on account of; as, ἀνθ' οἷου; on what account (i. e. set or placed as an equivalent against what?). 4. in consideration of; as, ἀντὶ τῶν μεγάλων οἶδασιν χάριν, they are grateful in consideration of (i. e. they set their gratitude as a return against) the great favours they have received. In composition it denotes, 1. equality; as, ἀντίθεος, equal to a god (i. e. fit to be matched against a god). 2. reciprocity; as, ἀντιμετρέω, I return in the same measure or proportion, (i. e. I set measure against measure). 3. comparison; as, ἀντικρίνω, I compare, (i. e. I judge of two things by facing one against another). 4. But more commonly it denotes opposition; as, ἀντιτάσσω, I draw up against an enemy.

᾽ Ἀπὸ.

This preposition is properly used in reference to an object which before was on, with, at, another (not in, nor merely in the near vicinity of, another,) from which it is now separated. Hence ἀπὸ generally shows a removal, and its primary meaning is From; thus,

From. Ἀφῆκε ἑαυτὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ πύργου. He threw himself from the tower.

This primary meaning gives rise to many others; as, 1. ἀφ' ἵππων μάχεσθαι, to fight on horseback, (i. e. from horses). 2. γυνέσθαι ἀπὸ δείπνου, to have done supper, (i. e. to be from supper). 3. ἀφ' ἑσπέρας, beginning with the evening (i. e. from the evening, a vespérâ). 4. οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς στοᾶς, the Stoics, (i. e. those from the porch), οἱ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀκαδημίας, the Academics (i. e. those from the Academy). 5. πέφηνεν ἀπ' ἀργυρέου βιοῖο, he killed by means of a silver bow, (i. e. by the aid which proceeded from a silver bow). 6. ἀπὸ λείας ζῆν, to live upon, (i. e. from) plunder; 7. ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, of one's self, (i. e. from one's own inclination). 8. ἀπὸ σπουδῆς, with zeal, (i. e. from the influence of zeal). 9. ἀπὸ ξυμμαχίας αὐτόνομοι, independent according to the alliance, (i. e. from the terms of the alliance). 10. ὁ ἀπὸ τῶν πολεμίων φόβος, fear on account of the enemy, (i. e. fear proceeding from the enemy). In composition ἀπὸ denotes 1. departure; as, ἀπέρχομαι, I go away from a place. 2. separation; as, ἀποδιαστέλλω, I place quite asunder, (i. e. I separate one from another). 3. negation; as, ἀπόφημι, I deny, (i. e. do not assent to, but speak away from, a thing). 4. privation; as, ἀπομανθάνω, I unlearn, (i. e. I learn in a different way from, I learn away from, my previous mode of learning). 5. an augmentative force, as, ἐρεῖδω, I fix, ἀπερεῖδω, I fix firmly, (i. e. I fix from an object, allowing nothing intermediate to interrupt the connection); thus, ἀπηρεῖσάμην τὴν ὄψιν, I kept my sight fixed (i. e. I kept my sight from the object referred to, in one unbroken continuation, looking off towards no other object).

Ἐκ or ἐξ.

This preposition, in its original meaning, is employed only in reference to such objects as proceed from the interior of another object, or from the most intimate connection with it. Hence we obtain the general meanings of, Out of, from; as,

Out of. Αἶας ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος ἄγεν νῆας. Ajax brought ships out of Salamis.

From. Ἐκ τῆς πόλεως φεύγειν. To flee from the city.

This meaning of from, however, differs materially from the same meaning as assigned to the proposition ἀπὸ. Thus, ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως φεύγειν, implies merely that the person has been near the city, whereas ἐκ τῆς πόλεως φεύγειν pre-supposes that one has been in the city. From the two general meanings just given, we may deduce others of a kindred nature. 1. ἐκ παιδῶν, from boyhood, (i. e. out of the very state or time of boyhood). 2. ἐξ αἰῶνος, from all eternity, (i. e. out of eternity; pre-supposing an intimate commingling and connection with eternity: whereas ἀπὸ αἰῶνος is much weaker in meaning; as διὰ στόματος τῶν ἁγίων τῶν ἀπ' αἰῶνος προφητῶν, by the mouth of his holy prophets which have been from ancient times). 3. ἐκ φύσεως δοθεῖς, given by nature, (i. e. out of the riches or bounties of nature). 4. ἐκ Λακεδαιμόνος Πανσανίας, Pausanias of Lacedæmon, (i. e. out of Lacedæmon). 5. ἐκ τούτου, for this reason, (i. e. by reason of a motive proceeding out of this). 6. ἐκ τῶν νόμων, according to the laws, (i. e. in conformity with the injunctions which speak out from the laws). 7. ἐξ ἀρίστου, after dinner, (i. e. having come out of participation in dinner). 8. ἐκ καπνοῦ, beyond the smoke, (i. e. out of the smoke). 9. ἐκ περισίας, abundantly, (i. e. out of one's abundance). 9. ἐκ τοῦ ποδὸς κρεμάσαι τινα, to hang one by the foot, (i. e. the state or condition of hanging commences with the foot, the point of suspension, out of which the relation of hanging originates). 10. ἐκ τῆς ὕψις τοῦ ὄνειρου, in consequence of the vision seen in the dream, (i. e. by reason of the things which proceeded out of the vision when seen in the dream). 11. τὰ ἐξ Ἑλλήνων τεύχεα, the fortifications built by the Greeks, (i. e. the fortifications which resulted from, which proceeded out of, the labours of the Greeks). Hence τὰ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων πράγματα, deeds which can only be done by man, or, in other words, great, extraordinary deeds. In composition it denotes, 1. separation or division; as, ἐκκρίνω, I select, I separate from. 2. preference or pre-eminence; as, ἑξοχος, eminent, (i. e. rising above, having one's self out of, others). 3. Completion or success in the action expressed by the verb; as, φεύγω, I try to escape, or run away; ἐκφεύγω, I succeed in running away, I escape. So σώζω and ἐκσώζω, &c.

Πρὸ.

This preposition is commonly used in speaking of place, and then also of time, and connects the idea of precedence or priority with the usual signification of the genitive. Its primitive meaning is Before; as,

Hence we obtain the following kindred meanings: 1. πρὸ ἄλλων, more than others, (i. e. before, or in advance of, others, as regards the exercise of any quality). 2. πρὸ πολλοῦ ποιεῖσθαι, to value very highly, (i. e. to value before much, to value higher than much). 3. ἀθλεῖσθαι πρὸ ἀνακτος, to labour for, or at the command of, the king, (i. e. to labour in front of, before, the king; the latter keeping aloof and commanding, while another goes before and executes). In a similar way, πρὸ φίλου ποιεῖν, to do for a friend, implies that one goes before and executes the wishes of a friend. 4. πρὸ φόβου, through fear, (i. e. fear being the impelling cause, and urging forwards one who is before, in front of, it). 5. when joined with ἀπό, διὰ, περί, without a case the sense is strengthened; as ἀποπρό, afar off, (i. e. away from the front of an object, and consequently at a distance from it). διαπρό, through and through, (i. e. through in front; not resisted by the surface of a body, but passing completely through). ἐμπρό, farther before, more forwards, (i. e. on the front; referring to something appended to, adhering to, or placed upon, the front of an object, and consequently more or less in advance of the object itself.) In composition πρό has the general force of, before, in front of, forwards, of which examples will readily suggest themselves.

DA'TIVE.—'Εν.

This preposition is used only with verbs or clauses indicative of rest, as the Latin in with the ablative. Hence ἐν is joined in Greek with the dative only, this being the case which expresses that in, on, or with which any thing rests or remains. The primary meaning of ἐν is In; as,

In. 'Εν τῷ Θεῷ το τέλος ἐστὶ. The end is in God.

Hence we deduce the following kindred meanings: 1. ἐν οἴκῳ, at home, (i. e. in the house). 2. ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἐγένετο, he came to himself, (i. e. he was in himself again). 3. ἐν Μαραθῶνι, at Marathon, (i. e. in the plain of Marathon). 4. ἐν ἐμοὶ ἐστὶ, it depends on me, (i. e. it is in my power). 5. ἐν τάχει, speedily, (i. e. in haste). 6. ἐν δυνάμει εἶναι, to be able, (i. e. to be in the possession of power or means). 7. ἐν ἡδονῇ εἶναι, to please, to will a thing, (i. e. to be in a pleased, a willing, state of mind). 8. ἐν ἐμοὶ θρασὺς, bold against me, (i. e. bold in what relates to me, bold as far as regards me). 9. ἐν φαρμάκῳ ἐστὶ, it serves as a remedy, (i. e. it is in the character, place, or stead, of a remedy). 10. ἐν ὁμοίῳ ποιῆσθαι, to esteem equally, (i. e. to rank in an equal degree). 11. ἐν στεφάνοις, adorned with chaplets, (i. e. in an array, or adornment, of chaplets). 12. ἐν οἴνῳ, at wine, (i. e. in the midst of the festivities of the table). 13. It is sometimes used, however, when proximity only is implied, as ἐν Λακεδαίμονι, near Lacedæmon; ἐν Μαντινείῃ, near Mantinea. (Xen. Hellen. 7. 5. 18). In this usage it appears to be equivalent to the English phrase, "in the vicinity of, &c." 14. It is frequently put with its case for an adjective or participle; as, πάντες ἐν νόσῳ, all sick, (i. e. all in a state of sickness). 15. It is sometimes followed by a genitive, but then a dative is always understood; as, ἐν ἄδου (οἴκῳ understood) in the shades; ἐν διδασκάλου (οἴκῳ understood) in the master's house. 16. It sometimes stands alone, with its case understood ; as, ἐν δὲ δὴ καὶ Ἀσβλίους εἴλε, amongst others he took also the Lesbians ; (ἄλλοις understood). So also ἐν δὲ λέαινα, among the animals was a lioness ; (θήροις understood). 17. Sometimes ἐν and εἰς are exchanged ; (for an explanation of which construction, see remarks at the end of the prepositions). In composition this preposition has the general force of in, among.

Σύν.

Where σύν is used, it implies that the object is an integral part of another, something inherent in it ; and therefore it takes the dative, since this case expresses that in or on which any thing rests. In this it differs from μετά, since μετά expresses a looser connection, while σύν always implies a nearer and more intimate union. The primary meaning of σύν is with ; together with ; thus,

With. Σύν Θεῷ. With God's assistance.

Hence we obtain other kindred meanings : 1. σύν τῷ νόμῳ, according to the law, (i. e. in conformity with the law). 2. σύν τῷ σῷ ἀγαθῷ, to thy advantage, (i. e. accompanied with advantage to thee). 3. σύν τοῖς Ἑλλήσιν εἶναι, to be on the side of the Greeks, (i. e. to side with the Greeks). 4. οἱ σύν αὐτῷ, his companions, (i. e. those with him). In composition it denotes 1. concurrence in action ; as, συμπονέω, I labour along with another. 2. association ; as, σύνειμι, I associate with. 3. union, as, συμπλέκω, I entwine together, or interweave. 4. collection ; as, συμφέρω, I bring together, I collect. 5. The completion and fulfilment of an action ; as, συμπληρόω, I fill up, I complete. (The preposition here denotes the presence of all the component parts, with which, when collected together, the action is completed and fulfilled). 6. It strengthens the meaning of a verb ; as, συγκόπτω, I break to pieces, (i. e. I beat or strike the component parts of a thing together, and thus loosen the connexion between them). 7. In the verbs συνάχθωμαι, συλλυπέομαι, συναλγέω, συμπάσχω, συμπενθέω, &c. grief felt in common is expressed.

ACCUSATIVE.—Εἰς or ἐς.

The primitive meaning of this preposition is into, and hence it takes the accusative, this case expressing that towards which any thing approaches or tends, and into which it enters or penetrates. Thus,

Into. Εἰς ἄστυ ἦλθεν. He came into the city.

Hence we deduce other kindred meanings: 1. ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν Ἑλλάδα, He came to Greece, (i. e. he not only came to the borders, but penetrated also into the country itself). 2. ὕμνος εἰς Ἀπόλλωνα, a hymn to Apollo, (i. e. a hymn, not slightly touching upon, but entering into, the praises of Apollo). 3. εὐνοῦς εἰς τὸν δῆμον, well disposed towards the people, (i. e. a state of mind which enters into, and concerns itself about, the interests of the people). 4. ἀμαρτάνειν εἰς τινα, to offend against a person, (i. e. to cause, by one's misconduct, an angry feeling to enter into another's breast). 5. διαβεβλημένος εἰς Μακεδόνας, calumniated among the Macedonians, (i. e. an injurious report concerning another having been made to enter into the minds of the Macedonians). 6. τὰ μὲν εἰς Μέδουσαν, as to what concerns Medusa, (i. e. as to what enters into, and forms part of, the account relative to Medusa). 7. πολλὰ καλὰ ἔργα ἀπεφάνησαντο εἰς πάντα ἀνθρώπους, many noble deeds have been displayed before all men, (i. e. have been displayed before, and have entered into, the memories of all men). 8. μακάριος πέφυκ' ἀνὴρ, πλὴν εἰς θυγατέρας. He is a happy man, except as far as regards his daughters, (i. e. his happiness stops at his daughters, and does not enter into, or form part of, the things appertaining to them). 9. σπεύδομαι εἰς Ἀχιλλῆα, I am hastening to Achilles, (i. e. I am hastening to go in to Achilles). 10. ἐς τί, how long? (i. e. into what point of time?) 11. εἰς ἑσπέραν, towards evening, (i. e. having penetrated a little into the beginning of evening). 12. εἰς ἀπαξ, once for all, (i. e. having gone deeply and seriously into the first performance of an action, and expressing thereby a determination not to repeat it, but to let it serve once for all). 13. With numerals it signifies about; as, εἰς τριακοσίους ἐγένοντο, they were about three hundred, (i. e. they entered or advanced into the number three hundred, though they did not reach to the full limit and extent of that number; they wanted but little of being full three hundred strong). 14. It is sometimes followed by a genitive, but then an accusative is always understood; as, εἰς ᾄδου, to the shades, (οἶκον or τόπον understood.) In composition it has the general force of into, to, unto, &c. as εἰσφέρειν, I bring into, &c.

GENITIVE and ACCUSATIVE.—Διὰ.

This preposition, in its original import, signifies through. Hence it takes, in this sense, the genitive; since, at least in the local meaning, the idea of passing through includes in itself also that of passing out or proceeding from, &c. Thus,

Gen. Through. Διὰ χειμῶνος, through the winter.

Sometimes, however, διὰ marks the direction of an action upon an object, and in consequence is joined with the accusative. When thus followed by an accusative case, it has the general meaning of on account of: as,

Acc. On account of. Διὰ φθόνου. On account of envy.

I. From the general meaning of διὰ with the genitive, we deduce other kindred meanings: 1. It marks the instrument; since that through which the thing done passes, as it were, to its accomplishment, is said to be the medium of that accomplishment, inasmuch as it lies in the midst, between the volition and the action; as, διὰ πέλανος γράφειν, to write with ink, (i. e. through the means of ink). So also, δι' ἐλέφαντος εἰδωλα, idols of ivory, (i. e. made through the means afforded by ivory as a material). 2. διὰ τινός πρᾶττειν, to do a thing by means of another, (i. e. through the agency of another). 3. διὰ πίστεως, by reason of a promise given, (i. e. through the effect produced by a promise given). 4. διὰ παντός, always, (i. e. through all time). 5. διὰ μακροῦ, after a long time, (i. e. through a long intervening period of time. In each of these phrases χρόνου is understood). 6. διὰ πέντε ἡμέρων, every five days, (i. e. through intervals of five days each). 7. κῶμαι διὰ πολλοῦ, villages placed at a considerable distance from each other, (i. e. villages which one meets with, after passing through long intermediate distances). 8. διὰ βραχέων εἰπεῖν, to say in a few words, (i. e. through the medium of a few words). 9. διὰ χειρῶν ἔχειν, to have in one's hands, to take care of, to look to, (i. e. to have a thing in one's hands, and to pass it through them from one hand to the other; to handle; to exercise more or less observation and care towards a thing). 10. διὰ μνήμης τίθεσθαι, to remind, (i. e. to put a thing through another's remembrance). 11. διὰ πάντων ἀξίος θεᾶς, worthy of being noticed among all, (i. e. through the midst of all). 12. δι' αἰτίας ἔχειν, to accuse, (i. e. to hold a person bound, by due form of law, to go through a charge preferred against him and answer to it). So also, δι' αἰτίας εἶναι, to be accused, (i. e. to be going through an accusation, and striving to clear one's self from it). 13. With the verbs λέγειν, ἐργεσθαι, λαμβάνειν, &c. it constitutes other and similar periphrases; as, διὰ τύχης λέγειν, to be fortunate, (i. e. to be going through a career of fortunate operations): διὰ φόβου ἐργεσθαι, to be in fear, (i. e. to be going through the state of being in fear): δι' οἴκτου λαβεῖν, to pity, (i. e. literally, to take through pity or compassion; to make another experience the full extent of one's compassionate feelings, by leading him, as it were, through the very midst of those feelings).

II. With the accusative, as already remarked, διὰ denotes the direction of an action upon a definite object, and signifies generally on account of. But as the object and the occasion, or cause, of an action are nearly related, (the object being in one sense the occasion), hence διὰ, with an accusative, though translated on account of, for the sake of, is often, if not always, exactly equivalent to through. This meaning of through, however, differs, as will readily be perceived, from that which διὰ has with the genitive, in its carrying with it a reference to some action exerted upon a definite object, and therefore taking not the genitive but the accusative case.

From the general meaning of, on account of, for the sake of, which διὰ has with the accusative, may be deduced other kindred meanings : 1. οὐ δι' ἐμὲ, not by me, (not on account of any thing I have done ; not through my fault). 2. διὰ σὲ ταῦτα γράφω, I write this for thee, (i. e. on thy account ; through the regard which I feel towards thee). 3. δι' ὃν τρόπον, by what means, (i. e. on account of the performance of what things ; through the effect produced by what means). 4. διὰ τοὺς θεοὺς, by the protection of the gods, (i. e. on account of the aid afforded by the gods ; through the protection extended by the gods). 5. In the early state of the language, before the use of the prepositions was definitely settled, we find διὰ with the accusative sometimes having the simple force of διὰ with the genitive ; thus, νύκτα δι' ἀμβροσίην, during the divine night. Homer : νύκτα δι' ὀφρυνίην, during the dark night. Hom. Even in these and other passages, however, of a similar nature, there may be perhaps a remote and obscure reference to the influence of night, &c.

III. In composition, διὰ has often the force of the particle dis in English, and of dis, trans, tra, in Latin ; marking 1. separation ; as, διασπᾶω, I tear asunder, (i. e. I tear a thing through the middle, or any other part). 2. division ; as, διαμερίζω, I divide into parts, (i. e. I make a separation through the different parts of a thing). 3. arrangement ; as, διατάσσω, I dispose, I arrange, (i. e. I make an arrangement through the several parts of a thing ; I place each part of a thing in separate order ; dispono). 4. passage through ; as, διαπλέω, I sail through, I sail over. 5. reciprocation ; as, διαλέγομαι, I converse with another, (i. e. I speak, after having passed through a certain interval of time in silence, during which time he with whom I converse is speaking ; I speak in turn). 6. opposition or competition ; as, ἀνιδεῖν, I sing by turns, (i. e. referring to two musical competitors, who, during the contest, have their respective intervals of silence and exhibition of skill). This verb διᾶδω, has also another meaning ; viz. I sing out of tune, (i. e. I sing through the barriers interposed by melody and the rules of the verse ; I sing through, or overleap, the bars of the measure). 7. perseverance ; as, διαπονέω, I elaborate, I bring to perfection with much toil, (i. e. I labour through every interposing difficulty ; as persevero in Latin, from per and severus ; I adhere rigidly to my purpose through all intervening obstacles).

Κατὰ.

This preposition originally means down, implying the motion downwards, of one body towards another. Now when one body moves against another, either it moves with sufficient force to dislodge the quiescent body from its previous state of rest, or else the quiescent body resists the moving body so powerfully, that the latter is compelled to stop at, and remain even with, the former. The preposition κατὰ is used, therefore, to express each of these kinds of motion ; and as the genitive, in Greek, expresses the idea of removal from a place, while the accusative, on the other hand, denotes that on which any thing exercises a direct and immediate influence, without any reference to change of place ; hence κατὰ is joined with the genitive in order to express more fully the first kind of motion, and with the accusative in order to denote the second. Hence also, the primitive force of κατὰ with the genitive is down against, or simply against ; and with the accusative, even with. From these two sources flow all the various meanings in which κατὰ has been used. Thus, with the genitive ;

I. κατ' Αἰσχίνου λόγος, a speech against Æschines : so also, λόγος κατὰ τινός, a speech against any one. In these and similar examples the idea of motion from place is always implied. Thus, Æschines, through conscious guilt shrinks from the accusation of Demosthenes. And, indeed, generally speaking, in the case of every accusation, since the accused is compelled to remain silent, while the accuser is advancing with his proofs ; and since the guilt or innocence of the party accused cannot usually be known until after he has answered his accuser ; the mind pre-supposes a receding, in a greater or less degree, on the part of the former, from the charge preferred against him, whether it be only an apparent receding in consequence of his remaining silent while his accuser advances with a bold and confident air, and seems to convict him of his offence ; or whether it be an actual receding, arising either from guilt, or from some prudential motive, in order that he may advance in turn against the charge with more coolness and deliberation. 2. τρεῖς ἐγκώμια καθ' ὧν τὰ κάλλιστα, three beautiful panegyrics pronounced upon you. Here the literal force of κατὰ is down against, meaning by against (not hostility, but) simply motion towards, and the idea of change of place, is implied in those on whom the panegyric is pronounced shrinking from it through modesty. 3. κατὰ γῆς κάθημαι, I am sitting on the ground. Here the surface of the ground has been disturbed by the body coming in contact with it. 4. κατὰ γῆς ἀποπέμπω, I send him under the earth. That is, I send against the earth, which opens to receive him, and he descends to the shades. 5. κατ' ἀνθρώπου καὶ ἵππου τὸ ζῶον λέγεται; the term animal is used both in reference to man and to the horse. Here the idea of a burthen is conveyed; i. e. the term animal is put upon, is applied to, man and the horse; and a partial yielding of each to the burthen is pre-supposed by the mind. 6. ὀμόσαι καθ' ἱερῶν τελείων, to swear by a solemn sacrifice. This forms a beautiful example. The sacrifice is burning, the oath is put down upon the sacrifice, and both together ascend to the skies. 7. καθ' ἑκατόμβης εὐξασθαι, to make a solemn vow at the offering of a hecatomb. This admits of precisely the same explanation as the preceding phrase. 8. καθ' ἱερῶν τελείων ἐστιᾶν, to give a sumptuous entertainment with a solemn sacrifice. That is, to entertain down against a solemn sacrifice. Here the action implied by κατὰ is exerted against that portion of the sacrifice which is not burnt in honour of the Gods, and the idea of change of place is contained in the consumption of the remains of the victim by the guests. 9. κατὰ γήλοφου, down the hill. Here the idea of change of place is implied in the declivity of the hill receding, as it were, beneath the body which has come down against, and is rapidly traversing, its surface. So in Homer, βῆ δὲ κατ' Οὐλύμποιο καρφηῶν, he descended from the heights of Olympus. Here the idea of change of place is beautifully and strongly expressed. Not only does the declivity of the mountain recede beneath the rapid footsteps, but the very mountain tops tremble under the tread, of the irritated god. The idea of descent and consequent change of place is also implied in the following examples; as, καθ' ὅλης τῆς περιχώρου, through the whole region around, i. e. down through, along: κατὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς, down the head: ἐξορκίζω σε κατὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ζῶντος, I adjure thee by the living God, i. e. God himself being invoked to descend as a witness: κατὰ θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, among mortal men, i. e. down the race of mortal men, from the first to the last; the idea of change of place being implied in one generation passing in review, after another. Sometimes the Poets use it with a dative; as, κατ' ὄρεσφι, among the mountains.

II. With the accusative, κατὰ carries with it, as has already been remarked, the primitive import of even with. Hence we deduce the following significations: 1. κατ' ἀρχας, in the beginning, (i. e. even with the beginning). 2. κατὰ γῆν, on the ground, (i. e. even with the ground). 3. κατὰ στήθος ἔβαλε, he struck him on the breast, (i. e. even with the breast). 4. κατὰ τὸν πορθμὸν ἐγένοντο, they came near to the harbour, (i. e. even with, close up to). 5. κατὰ τὸν τόπον, at the place, (i. e. even with the place). 6. ἦλθε κατ' αὐτὸν, he came to him, (i. e. he came even with him). 7. κατὰ Κέρκυραν, over against Corcyra, (i. e. even with, abreast of). 8. κατ' ὀφθαλμοὺς, before one's eyes, (i. e. even with one's eyes). 9. κατὰ τὸν νόμον, according to the law, (i. e. even with, conformable to). 10. καθ' ὅλην τὴν πόλιν, throughout the whole city, (i. e. even with the whole city). 11. καθ' ἑαυτὸν, by himself, (i. e. even with himself). 12. κατ' ἔτος, every year, (i. e. even with each year). 13. κατ' ἔπος, word for word, (i. e. even with each word), &c. In these and other similar instances it will easily appear that there is no reference whatever to any change of place, but to some object which is fully acted upon, and yet, at the same time, presents a full resistance to that which acts upon it.

In composition, κατὰ often gives additional force to the sense of the simple term; as φορτίζω, I load, καταφορτίζω, I overload, (i. e. I weigh down with a burthen). 2. It denotes opposition; as κρίνω, I judge, κατακρίνω, I decide against, I condemn, (i. e. I judge down against another). 3. ψηφίζομαι, I give a vote, καταψηφίζομαι, I give a contrary vote, (i. e. I vote against my former vote). 4. descent; as, βαίνω, I go, καταβαίνω, I descend.

ΥΠΕΡ.

The primitive meaning of this preposition is over, above, with which are associated the kindred ideas of power, authority, protection, &c. As the genitive is that case which denotes motion from, υπὲρ is always joined with it when we want to express from whom that power emanates, on whose account that authority is exercised, or that protection afforded &c. Hence υπὲρ, with the genitive has the general meaning of for, on account of, &c. With the accusative, on the other hand, it denotes the exercise of power, authority, protection, &c. upon a given object, without any reference to motion proceeding from that object. Hence υπὲρ with the accusative may commonly be rendered by over, above, more than, against, &c. Thus,

I. Στρατηγεῖν ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν τῆς Ἀσίας. To be general for you in Asia, (i. e. literally, above from you; the authority (ὑπὲρ), emanating from you (ὑμῶν), and to be exercised in your behalf). 2. μάχεσθαι ὑπὲρ τινος, to fight for any one, (i. e. to stand over (ὑπὲρ) in an attitude of protection, either figuratively or really, and to fight in consequence of some solicitation, wish, &c. proceeding from some one (τινος)). 3. δεδιέναι ὑπὲρ τινος, to fear for any one's safety, (i. e. to place one's self, in thought, in an attitude of anxious observation over another, and to feel solicitous for his safety, in consequence of something proceeding from, or connected with, him, which interests one in his behalf; as, δεδιέναι ὑπὲρ ἀδελφοῦ, to fear for a brother, (i. e. in consequence of that kindred feeling of affection and sympathy which, proceeding from a brother as its exciting cause, connects us with him in the bonds of fraternal love). 4. ὑπὲρ πατρὸς καὶ μητρὸς, for, or, on account of, father and mother, (i. e. to place one's self, either in thought or in reality, over a father and mother in an attitude of watchful regard, and to be urged to the performance of some act for their welfare, by filial affection, which proceeds from them as the exciting cause). 5. ὑπὲρ τῶν κηπῶν οὗρος κεῖται, the keeper lies above the gardens, (i. e. the keeper has his post above the gardens, whence he may watch them to more advantage, and the exciting cause proceeds from the gardens, for he is their keeper). 6. ἐξ Αἰθιοπίας τῆς ὑπὲρ Αἰγυπτου, from Æthiopia which is beyond Egypt, (i. e. which lies above in reference to Egypt). Here the relation proceeds from Egypt; and Æthiopia, as far as regards the land of Egypt, is situated above: in other words, it is more to the south than Egypt. So also, τὸ ὄρος τὸ ὑπὲρ Τεγέας, the mountain which lies above Tegea: here the principle of relation proceeds from Tegea; and the mountain in question lies above, or beyond, as far as that cit. is concerned. So also, τὰ λεγόμενα ὑπὲρ ἐκάστων, the things that are mentioned respecting each: here ὑπὲρ denotes the certain things are said over certain persons as the exciting cause of those remarks, and as the subject of them. 7. Ὁ Θεὸς ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐστὶ, God is for us, (i. e. God is in the heavens in the attitude of a protector, because we have done something to merit that protection: the cause of his being our protector emanates from ourselves).

II. With the accusative ὑπὲρ denotes over, above, &c. without any reference to motion from the object on which its action is exerted. Hence it carries with it, when construed with the accusative, the idea of power, superiority, &c. originating in a thing itself, and not emanating, or derived, from another. Thus, 1. ὑπὲρ ἀνθρωπίνων ἐστὶ, it is beyond man's power, (i. e. it is above man). 2. ὑπὲρ τῶν δόμων, over the house. 3. ὑπὲρ τεσσαρῆκοντα ἄνδρας, more than forty men, (i. e. above forty men). 4. ὑπὲρ τὸν καιρὸν, unseasonably, (i. e. over, in advance of, the proper opportunity). 5. ὑπὲρ μόρον, against destiny, (i. e. over, more than, fate had decreed.)

III. In composition, it retains its general signification of over, above, for, &c. thus, ὑπεράγαθος, eminently good, (i. e. over, more than, simply good): ὑπεραιδεῖσθαι, to be excessively ashamed, (i. e. to be above, more than, simply ashamed): ὑπερέχειν, to hold over: ὑπερμάχεσθαι, to fight for something: ὑπεραγορεύειν, to harangue in favour of any one: ὑπεράλιος, beyond sea, (i. e. over sea).

DATIVE and ACCUSATIVE.—'Ανά.

The primitive meaning of this preposition is motion upwards. Hence it carries with it the general signification of up, up on, up along, &c. It is generally joined with an accusative. In poetry, however, it sometimes governs a dative. From its primitive meaning of up, up on, up along, are deduced various kindred meanings. Thus,

I. Ἀνά τὰ ὄρη, by the mountains, (i. e. up along the mountains). 2. Ἀνά τὴν Ἑλλάδα, through Greece, (i. e. up along Greece; referring properly to motion from the coast into the interior). 3. ἀνὰ τὸν βίον, during life, (i. e. up along life; comparing the progress through life to the toilsome ascent of a mountain, the summit of which brings us nearer to heaven). 4. ἀνὰ μέρος, by turns, alternately, (i. e. up along each part, through each part). 5. ἀνὰ πέντε, five by five, (i. e. counting up a certain number of fives separately; up each five). 6. ἀνὰ πρώτους, among the first, (i. e. up among the first, and not down among the second, third, and fourth). 7. ἀνὰ μέσον, moderately, (i. e. up a middle course). 8. ἀνὰ τὸν ποταμὸν πλέειν, to sail against the current, (i. e. to sail up the river). 9. ἀνὰ χρόνον, in process of time, after an interval of time, (i. e. up along time; the idea of ascent, being naturally implied from the accumulation of years, one upon the other). 10. ἀνὰ τὸ στόμα, through the mouth, (i. e. up along the mouth, the head being naturally somewhat depressed and bent forward towards the table in eating). 11. ἀνὰ κράτος, by force, (i. e. up along strength; collecting and reckoning up our strength, and employing it as a means). 12. ἀνὰ θυμόν, in mind, (i. e. up along the mind, commencing with its least and ending with its strongest powers: taking the whole range of the mind).

II. With the Poets this preposition is sometimes found with a dative case. As the dative expresses that in, on, or with which, any thing rests, remains, &c. it is hence accompanied by ἀνά whenever we wish to convey the combined ideas of elevation and rest. Thus, 1. χρυσέῳ ἀνὰ σκήπτρῳ, upon a golden sceptre. Hom. Il. α. 15. (alluding to certain fillets, remaining attached to the top of a golden sceptre). 2. εὔδει δ' ἀνὰ σκάπτῳ Διὸς αἰετός. The eagle sleeps on the sceptre of Jove. Pind. Pyth. 1. 10. So also, χρυσαῖς ἀν' ἵπποις, in a golden chariot. Pind. Ol. 1. 66. (vid. Boeckh. ad loc). The idea of rest is here implied by the individual alluded to being seated in the chariot. 3. ἀνά ναυσιν, in ships. Eurip. Iph. A. 759.

III. In composition it denotes, 1. motion upwards; as, ἀναβαίω, I ascend. 2. repetition; as, ἀναδιδάσκω, I teach again, I teach anew, (i. e. after teaching a subject throughout, down to the very end, I go back and teach again along the top of it, I re-commence my instructions). 3. In many cases, however, of composition with verbs, it strengthens the meaning of the simple verb by the force of its primitive signification; thus, ἀναβοάω, I cry aloud, (i. e. I send up a cry): ἀναγελάω, I laugh aloud, (i. e. I raise a laugh): ἀναγράφω, I register, (i. e. I write up public records): ἀναδείκνυμι, I shew, (i. e. I hold up to view): ἀναδινέω, I whirl, (i. e. up and down in a rotatory motion): ἀναδέχομαι, I stand bail, (i. e. I take upon myself to become surety for another): 4. Frequently also verbs compounded with ἀνά have the signification of back added to their original meaning; as, ἀνακαλέω, I call back, I recall: ἀνακλίνω, I lean back, I recline, &c. The verb ἀνακαλέω admits of a very easy explanation. Thus, if I call another back to any place, it evidently implies that the place to which he is recalled was the one from which he originally advanced. I therefore call him from the place which he has reached, up along that place where the motion forwards originated, and from which he started in the first instance; that is, I call him back. The verb ἀνακλίνω properly denotes the elevation of the face upwards as the body is thrown back in a reclining posture.

GENITIVE, DATIVE, and ACCUSATIVE.—'Αμφι.

The primitive force of this preposition is around, round about, and it is joined with the genitive, dative, and accusative. With each of these three cases it retains its primitive meaning of about, round about. Besides this, it conveys with the genitive the idea of something issuing from, or occasioned by; with the dative, rest or continuance in, on, or with any object; and with the accusative, an approach, tendency, or reference towards any object.

I. With the genitive. 1. ἀμφὶ πόνου ὁ πόνος, toil upon toil, (i. e. toil exerted round about other previous toil, and succeeding to, or, in other words, emanating from, it). 2. ἀμφὶ Φοίβου, for the love of Apollo, (i. e. doing something round about Apollo, in a figurative sense, on account of some kindness conferred by him on us, some favour proceeding from him). 3. φάναι ἀμφὶ θεῶν καλὰ, to speak well of the gods, (i. e. to speak well round about the gods, in consequence of blessings issuing from them towards us). 4. ἀμφὶ τῆς πόλεως, in the environs of, or, round about the city, (i. e. round about from the city, or, round about in respect of the city).

II. With the dative. 1. ἀμφ' ὤμοισιν ἐδύσατο τεύχεα, καλὰ, he put on the fine armour, (i. e. he put the fine armour round about his person, and it depended from, or rested upon, his shoulders: in other words, his shoulders supported the principal superincumbent weight of the armour). 2. ἀμφὶ μάχῃ τοσαῦτα εἰρήσθω, let thus much have been said concerning the fight. (Here the presence of the perfect εἰρήσθω, with its reference to continuance of action, naturally calls for ἀμφὶ with the dative; and the passage is equivalent to, "let thus much have been said and remain said round about, on the subject of the battle"). 3. ἀμφὶ δὲ τῷ θανάτῳ αὐτοῦ, as to what regards his death, (i. e. as to what has been said round about or reported, on the subject of his death). 4. σκιᾶ τινὶ λόγους ἀνέσπα, τοὺς μὲν Ἀτρεΐδων κατὰ, τοὺς δ' ἀμφ' Ὀδυσσεῖ, he darkly uttered hints against the Atridae and about Ulysses, (i. e. what he said respecting Ulysses was still more obscure than what he uttered against the Atridae: it was spoken round about on the subject of Ulysses). 5. ἀμφὶ δ' ἄρ' αὐτῷ ἄλλοι ἐποντο, others followed after him, (i. e. others followed round about, whose movements depended upon his). 6. ἀμφὶ σφίσι πένθος ὄρωρε, sorrow arose among them, (i. e. sorrow arose round about, and remained resting among, them). 7. τοιγᾷδ' ἀμφὶ γυναικὶ πολὺν χρόνον ἄλγεα πάσχειν, to suffer woes for a long period, about such a woman. (Here the dative conveys the idea of the united woes of the Greeks centering in, and being identified with, Helen as their exciting cause). 8. ἀμφ' Ἑλένη καὶ κτήμασι πᾶσι μάχεσθαι, to fight for Helen and all her wealth. (Here Helen and the wealth she brought from Sparta, are supposed to be placed in the midst as a prize, round about which the combatants are to fight, while the dative implies that the hopes and the fears of the parties centre in Helen and her wealth, and remain fixed upon so tempting a prize). 9. κάββαλεν ἄνδρα κακὰ χθονός, ἀμφὶ δ' ἀπ' αὐτῷ ἔξετο, he threw the man upon the ground, and sat down upon him, (i. e. his own person covered round about his prostrate foe, and remained resting upon him). 10. πεπαρμένη ἀμφ' ὀνύχεσσιν, pierced with his talons. (Here the presence of the perfect participle πεπαρμένη requires, as in the second example, the dative case with ἀμφὶ, and the literal meaning of the phrase is "having been pierced and remaining pierced round about, with the talons still continuing in the wound").

III. With the accusative. 1. ἀμφὶ κάμινον ἔχω τὰ πολλὰ, I am almost always occupied about my forge, (i. e. I am occupied round about my forge, and constantly going towards it.) 2. ἀμφ' ἄλα ἔλσαι Ἀχαιοὺς, to force the Greeks towards the sea, (i. e. to force the Greeks towards the sea, and the places round about it). 3. ἀμφὶ τὰ ἑβδομήκοντα ἔτη, about seventy years, (i. e. round about seventy years, and advancing rapidly towards that period). 4. Joined with a proper name, it is used in three different senses—First. It denotes the person signified by the proper name, with his companions, followers, &c. as, οἱ ἀμφὶ Πεισίστρατον, Pisistratus with his troops: οἱ ἀμφὶ τὸν Ὀρφέα, Orpheus and his followers: in these and similar phrases, the accusative denotes that the movements and actions of those who are engaged round about the principal personage, look to, are directed towards, are governed by, his movements.—Secondly, ἀμφὶ with the accusative of a proper name, sometimes denotes merely the person whom the proper name expresses. This construction appears to result from an increased force being given to the meaning of the accusative, by which the person towards whom the actions and movements of the rest are directed, occupies, in consequence of his rank or some other circumstance connected with him, the largest share of the mind's attention. Thus, οἱ δ' ἀμφὶ Πριάμον καὶ Πάνθοον ἠδὲ Θυμολῆην, Λάμπον τε Κλυτίον θ', Ἰκετάονα τ', ὄξον Ἀργεὺς. Priam and Panthous and Thymoetes, and Lampus and Clytius, and Hicetaon, offspring of Mars. So also: τρις γὰρ τῇ γ' ἐλθόντες ἐπειρήσανθ' οἱ ἄριστοι, ἀμφ' Ἀλάντε δῶο καὶ ἀγακλυτὸν Ἰδομενεῖα, for thrice have the bravest warriors advancing assailed it, the two Ajaces, and the distinguished Idomeneus.—Thirdly. It denotes, especially in later writers, the companions, &c. of the person named, without himself; as, οἱ ἀμφὶ Παρμενίδην καὶ Ζήνωνα ἐταῖροι, the friends of Parmenides and Zeno. 10. From these must be distinguished, however, the cases in which the preposition is not followed by a proper name, but by another substantive, or when the article is neuter. Thus, οἱ ἀμφὶ τὴν θήραν, the hunters; τὰ ἀμφὶ τὸν πόλεμον, what belongs to war, &c. (vid. preposition περί).

III. In composition it has the general force of about, round about; as, ἀμφιβάλλω, I throw around. Sometimes it has the meaning of ἀμφοτέρωθεν, on both sides; as, ἀμφιβροτος, defending on every side, (i. e. defending round about).

Ἐπὶ.

The original meaning of this preposition is close upon, and it is joined with the genitive, dative, and accusative. When it is followed by a genitive, it conveys, together with its own original meaning, the several ideas denoted by the genitive case; such as, part of time, part of place, something proceeding from, &c. something emanating from, &c. and it may generally be rendered by the phrase in respect of. With the dative there is a constant reference to continuance, or rest in, upon, or with, an object; with the accusative, motion or direction towards. These three respective meanings of the genitive, dative, and accusative, when combined each in turn with the primitive signification of ἐπὶ, produce the following results. Thus,

I. With the genitive. 1. ἐπὶ Κύρου, under Cyrus, (i. e. close upon in respect of Cyrus; referring to power proceeding from, and exercised by, Cyrus). 2. ἐπὶ τῆς αὐτοῦ ἀρχῆς, under his government, (i. e. close upon in respect of his government). 3. ἐπὶ τῶν πράξεων, by deeds, (i. e. close upon in respect of deeds; referring to some effect proceeding from them). 4. ἐπὶ κέρωσιν, to lead an army by one of its wings, (i. e. close upon in respect of a wing; referring to part of general place). 5. ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ, by himself, (i. e. close upon in respect of himself). 6. ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καταπλπτειν, to fall upon the ground, (i. e. close upon in respect of the ground; referring to part of place). 7. ἐπὶ τῶν Ἑλληνικῶν πόλεων, among the Grecian cities, (i. e. close upon in respect of the Grecian cities; the reference being the same as in the preceding example). 8. ἐπὶ πολλῶν, among many things, (i. e. close upon in respect of many things; same reference). 9. ἐπὶ τῶν ἱερῶν θυόσαι, to swear by the sacred victims, (i. e. standing near, close by, the victims). 10. ἐπὶ τοσούτων μαρτύρων, before so many witnesses, (i. e. near to, close by, so many witnesses). 11. ἐπ' ἀμφισβητήτου ἀποδείξεως, by indubitable proof, (i. e. close upon, in the immediate vicinity of, &c.) 12. οἱ ἐν' ἐξουσίᾳς, persons in office, magistrates, (i. e. close upon authority). 13. ἀποπλέοντες ἐπ' οἴκου, sailing directly homewards, (i. e. close upon home). 14. ἡ ἐπὶ τῆς πόλεως ὁδός, the road to the city, (i. e. close upon, leading directly down upon, the city). Perhaps in these two last examples the genitive and not the accusative is used, by reason of an obscure reference to motion from. Thus, to sail homewards implies a previous departure from home; and a road leading to a city, is to the inhabitants a road leading from it). 15. ἐπὶ τριῶν, ἐπὶ τεττάρων, by three, by four at a time, or, three deep, four deep, (i. e. close upon three, close upon four; in other words, each number of three or four following close after the one that went before it).

II. With the dative, 1. ἐφ' ᾧ, on which condition, (i. e. close upon and remaining firmly in which). 2. ἐπὶ τούτῳ, during this time, (i. e. close upon and continuing connected with this period of time). 3. ἐπὶ τοῖσι, in addition to these, besides, (i. e. close upon and connected with these). 4. ἐπὶ τῷ κέρδει, for gain, (i. e. close upon and connected with the purpose of gain). 5. ἐπὶ πολλῷ, at a high rate, (i. e. close upon and continuing in a high rate). 6. ἐπὶ τῷ παντὶ βίῳ, for his whole life, (i. e. close upon and not deviating from the course of his whole life). 7. ἐπὶ νηπιῷ μοι τίθνηκεν, he died leaving me yet a child, (i. e. his death happened close upon the period when I was still remaining in a state of childhood). 8. ἐφ' ἡμῖν ὑπάρχει, it depends on us, (i. e. it is closely and intimately connected with our means). 9. ἐπὶ μοι ἐστὶ, it is in my power, (i. e. it is closely and intimately connected with my ability to perform). 10. ἄλλοι ἐπ' ἄλλοις, one after another, (i. e. adhering closely one to the other). 11. ὁ ἐπὶ πᾶσι ταχθεὶς, he that was stationed last of all, (i. e. he that was stationed close upon and in immediate connexion with all the rest of the army). 12. ἐπὶ τῷ πατρὶ ὠνόμασε, he named him after his father, (i. e. his name was closely, or immediately, identified with that of his father, and remained so). 13. ἐπὶ τοσούτῳ στρατεύματι, with such an army, (i. e. close upon and continuing in connexion with such an army as the instrument of action). 14. ἐπὶ Τρώεσσι μάχεσθαι, to fight with the Trojans, (i. e. to remain fighting in close combat with the Trojans). 15. ἐφ' ἡμέρα, for the whole day, (i. e. in immediate and continued connection with the day). 16. ἐπὶ τῷ ποταμῷ, along the river, (i. e. close upon and not departing from the river).

III. With the accusative. 1. ἐπὶ τὴν Ἀττικὴν ἐπορεύετο, he went to Attica, (i. e. close upon and in the direction of Attica). 2. ἐπὶ πόσῳ, for how much, (i. e. close upon and tending towards how much). 3. ἐπὶ τὴν αἶαν, on the ground, (i. e. close upon and in the direction of the ground). 4. ἐπὶ τὴν ἐστίαν καθίζεσθαι, to be seated on the hearth, (i. e. to be seated close upon the hearth, with the eyes earnestly directed towards it as the source of safety and refuge). 5. τὴν πόλιν ἐφ' ἑαυτὸν ποιήσασθαι, to bring the city under subjection to himself, (i. e. to bring the city into close connection as regards himself. The middle voice here carries with it the additional idea of its being done, for himself, for his own private advantage). 6. ἑαυτὸν, ἐπ' ἐξουσίαν ποιήσασθαι, to establish himself in power, (to make himself close upon, and to direct all his movements towards, the acquisition of, authority). 7. ἐπὶ τὰς ἡδονὰς σιτρατεύομαι, I make war upon pleasures, (i. e. I engage in close warfare against pleasures).

IV. In composition, ἐπὶ denotes, 1. addition; as, ἐπιδίδωμι, I give in addition, (i. e. I give or place something upon a previous gift). 2. increase or augmentation; as, ἐπώδυνος, causing increased pain, (i. e. producing pain upon former pain; or, causing pain upon pain). 3. It denotes likewise reciprocal action; as, ἐπιγάμια, intermarriage, (i. e. one's marrying another, upon that other's agreeing to marry him): ἐπιβοήθεια, mutual assistance, (i. e. one's aiding another upon, or in consequence of, that other's having aided him). 4. It most commonly has in composition, however, the force of thereupon, denoting that one action takes place in consequence of another which has preceded it.

Μετὰ.

The original meaning of this preposition is with, and it is followed by the genitive, dative, and accusative. When construed with the genitive, it takes nearly the same sense as σὺν with the dative, except that σὺν indicates a nearer and more intimate union. Whatever is with, in company with, any person or thing, in a strict sense depends on or from that person or thing; hence μετὰ takes the genitive in this sense; whereas σὺν implies that the object is an integral part of another, something inherent in it, and therefore takes the dative, as expressing that in or on which any thing rests. When construed with the dative, which is an usage confined solely to the Poets, μετὰ signifies among, between, in, by. With the accusative, it indicates direction behind, after, in the rear of a thing. It is so used, partly of place, and partly of time; since events which succeed each other in time, constitute a series of objects following after each other.

I. With the genitive. 1. μετ' ἐμοῦ, with me. 2. μετὰ καιροῦ, according to circumstances, (i. e. in conjunction with a suitable opportunity). 3. μετ' ἀρετῆς πρῳτεύειν, to excel by means of virtue, (i. e. in conjunction with, and in consequence of the aid resulting from, the practice of virtue). 4. In Homer, μετὰ, with a genitive and neuter verb, denotes together with; in com- mon with ; as, μετὰ δμῶων πῖνε καὶ ἔσθ', he drank and ate together, or, in common, with his servants. Homer never uses it, when followed by the genitive, with any other than a neuter verb. Subsequent writers, however, join it, when a genitive follows, with an active verb, in order to express the joint action of two or more persons ; as, ἤλασε, τοὺς ἐναγεῖς Κλεομένης μετὰ Ἀθηναίων, Cleomenes, in conjunction with the Athenians, drove out the polluted. Thucydides. 5. In Plutarch, Alex. 77. there is a deviation, in the construction of μετὰ, from previous usage ; as, τὴν Στάτειραν προσαγαγούσα μετὰ τῆς ἀδελφῆς ἀπέκτεινε, having led forth Statira, she slew her together with her sister.

II. With a dative, as has been remarked, μετὰ occurs only in the Poets : as, 1. ὑφαίνει μετὰ φρεσὶν, he planned in his mind. Hesiod. (i. e. he planned together with his mind, and kept at the same time his deliberations concealed within his own breast). 2. χαῖται δ' ἐρῳώοντο μετὰ πνοῆς ἀνέμοιο, his locks were agitated by the blast. Homer. (i. e. kept floating with the blast, or, amid the blast).

III. With an accusative. 1. μετ' ἀμύμονα Πηλεΐωνα, next after the valiant son of Peleus. 2. μετ' ἀμύμονας Αἰθιοπῆας, to the good Æthiopians, (i. e. going after, seeking for, journeying towards them). 3. In the Attic writers it is joined with ἡμέρα ; thus, μεθ' ἡμέραν, in the day-time. Eurip.—μετὰ τρίτην ἡμέραν, on the third day. Plato.—οὔτε νυκτὶς οὔτε μεθ' ἡμέραν, neither by night nor by day. Plato. The principle on which the use of the accusative here depends has been explained in the introductory remarks on this preposition. 4. μετὰ χειρὸς ἔχειν, to have in one's hands. vid. Introductory Remarks.

IV. In composition it denotes, 1. change ; as, μετατίθημι, I transpose, I change the place of a thing, (i. e. I put a thing in a place, after having previously put it in some other place). So also μεταδοκέω, I change my opinion, (i. e. I think, after having previously thought ; I think again, or anew). In the same way may be explained every verb compounded with μετὰ and indicating change. 2. reciprocity ; as, μετάγγελος, a messenger sent between two parties.

Παρά.

The primary meaning of this preposition seems to regard one thing placed along side of another. It is construed with the genitive, dative, and accusative. With the genitive, it is properly used in reference to an object, which comes from the near vicinity of another, and, in prose, is usually connected only with words which imply animated existence. With the dative, it properly signifies near, by the side of. With the accusative, it denotes motion towards, to, or by the side of, or, in the near vicinity of any thing. Thus,

I. With the genitive. 1. ἐλθεῖν παρὰ τινος, to come from any one. 2. ἀγγέλλειν παρὰ τινος, to announce on the part of any one. 3. μαρθάνειν παρὰ τινος, to learn from any one. 4. ἡ παρὰ τούτων εὐνοία, the kindness of those persons, (i. e. proceeding from, shown by, them). 5. οἱ παρὰ τοῦ Νικίου, the messengers of Nicias, (i. e. those from Nicias). 6. κατηγορεῖται παρὰ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, he is accused by the Jews, (i. e. the accusation against him proceeds from the Jews).

II. With the dative. 1. παρὰ τῷ βασιλεῖ, with the king, (i. e. near to, by, or on the side of, the king). 2. παρὰ σοι, with you, or, on you, or, in your power. 3. παρὰ μνηστῆρσιν, among the suitors.

III. With the accusative. 1. παρὰ νῆας, towards the ships. 2. παρὰ Καμβύσῃ, to Cambyses. 3. παρ' ὅλον χρόνον, through one's whole life, (i. e. moving parallel with the whole course of one's life). 4. παρὰ τὴν πόσιν, in drinking, (i. e. accompanying drinking, moving by the side of it). 5. παρ' αὐτὰ τὰ ἀδικήματα, at the very moment of the unjust transaction, (i. e. moving on at the side, or in the near vicinity, of the unjust transaction). 6. παρὰ τὴν φύσιν, contrary to nature, (i. e. passing by nature, disregarding it). 7. παρὰ τὸ δίκαιον, contrary to justice, (i. e. passing by justice). 8. παρ' ὥραν, unseasonably, (i. e. passing by a proper season). 9. παρ' ἀξίαν, undeservedly, (i. e. passing by desert). 10. παρὰ τὰ ἅλλα ζῶα, beyond all other animals, (i. e. passing by, or beyond, all other animals). 11. οὐκ ἔστι παρὰ ταῦτ' ἄλλα, there is nothing else besides this, (i. e. there is nothing accompanying it, nothing moving at the side; it is by itself). 12. παρὰ τὴν ὑμετέραν ἀμέλειαν, on account of your negligence, (i. e. moving on in the near vicinity of your negligence, accompanying your negligence, attendant upon it as a consequence). 13. παρὰ τοῦτο, in consequence of this, (i. e. attendant upon this as a natural consequence). 14. παρὰ πολὺ, by much, (i. e. moving on by the side of much). 15. παρ' ὀλίγον, by little. 16. παρὰ μικρὸν ἦλθεν ἀποθανεῖν, he had nearly lost his life, (i. e. he came close to the side of a little, &c.). 17. παρὰ πολὺ ἐλθεῖν τὴν πόλιν ἦλθεν, he was far from taking the city, (i. e. he came close to the side of much, &c.). 18. παρὰ τοσοῦτον, by so much, so far. 19. παρ' ὀλίγον ποιεῖσθαι, to think little of. 20. παρὰ μῆνα τρίτον, every third month. 21. παρ' ἡμέραν, every day.

IV. In composition it frequently marks, 1. a faulty, or defective action; as, παραβαίνω, I transgress, (i. e. I pass by, I disregard): παραβλέπω, I see imperfectly, (i. e. I look aside: I do not look full at an object). 2. It signifies aside; as, παρένθεσις, insertion, (i. e. something put in by the side of other things). 3. a near equality; as, παρόμοιος, nearly alike, (i. e. by the side, near to the state, of being alike). It has also many other meanings, but they all flow so easily and naturally from the primitive as not to require any particular mention here.

Περί.

The original signification of this preposition is about, around. It serves to express the idea of surrounding or inclosing on all sides; and consequently differs from παρά, which merely denotes previous proximity, i. e. on one side. When construed with the genitive, it is commonly to be translated by of, concerning, about, all of which, in their primitive signification, are properly used in relation to any thing proceeding from one object towards another. With the dative, there is, besides the primitive force of περί, the idea of rest or continuance; with the accusative, there is a reference to motion on or upon. Thus,

I. With the genitive. 1. περί τινος λέγειν, to speak of, or, concerning any one. (In such cases, the person speaking conceives himself as being at or around the object; inasmuch as he has brought it within the compass of his knowledge, and has made it his own, either by actual inspection or contemplation; and then what he says, comes, as it were, from the object). 2. μάχεσθαι περί πατρίδος, to fight for one's country, (i. e. to fight round about one's country, in consequence of a right to demand our aid which naturally proceeds from her). 3. τυραννίδος περί, for the sake of power, (i. e. acting, carrying on operations, round about power, in consequence of some attractive charm proceeding from it). 4. ποιῆσθαι περί πολλοῦ, to value highly, (i. e. to act, or employ one's self, about a thing, in consequence of a great value emanating from it). 5. ἡγεῖσθαι περί μικροῦ, to think little of, (i. e. to think of a thing in respect of a slight advantage proceeding from it; to think slightly of it). 6. περί πολλοῦ εἶσιν ἡμῖν, he is of great importance to us, (i. e. he is round about to us in respect of a great advantage; in other words, we keep round about him in consequence of a great advantage which is to result). 7. In Homer περί with the genitive denotes superiority; as, περί πάντων ἔμμεναι ἄλλων, to be above all others. Perhaps this peculiar meaning may have arisen in the following manner: To be round about all, implies superior activity, care, attention, &c. and if πάντων ἄλλων, in the genitive, imply that this activity, care, attention, &c. are exerted in consequence of a request or a tacit consent proceeding from all the rest, who are conscious of the superiority of the individual in these respects, hence may be deduced the kindred idea of general pre-eminence on his part.

II. With the dative. 1. περὶ τῇ χειρὶ χρυσοῦν δακτύλιον φέρειν, to wear a golden ring on his hand, (i. e. round about, and remaining on, the hand). 2. περὶ γὰρ οἷς ποιμένι λαῶν, for he feared for the shepherd of the people, (i. e. his fears were active round about and remained continually connected with, &c.). 3. περὶ φόβῳ, from fear, (i. e. remaining round about fear ; being directly under its influence).

III. With the accusative. 1. ὧκουν Φοίνικες πᾶσαν τὴν Σικελίαν, Phoenicians dwelt in the whole of Sicily, round about. (The circumstance of their dwelling in the island implies a previous coming to it, and hence the use of the accusative). 2. περὶ τούτους τοὺς χρόνους, about this time, (i. e. round about, and advancing towards, this point of time). 3. περὶ λύχνων ἀφᾶς, about night-fall ; literally, about the hour of lighting lamps. 4. περὶ τρισχιλίους, about three thousand, (i. e. round about, and verging towards, three thousand). 5. ἐξαμαρτάνειν περὶ τινα, to offend against any one, (i. e. to offend about, and towards or against, one). 6. λέγειν περὶ τι, to speak upon any subject, (i. e. to speak about and upon it). 7. περὶ τι εἶναι, to be occupied about any thing, (i. e. to be about, and to direct one's efforts towards, any thing). 8. It is used in circumlocution with a proper name, like ἄμφι ; as, οἱ περὶ Σωκράτην, Socrates, or Socrates and his disciples, or the scholars and friends of Socrates.) See the remarks on ἄμφι when thus construed). 9. In circumlocutions with nouns that are not proper names ; as, τὰ περὶ τὴν ἀρετὴν, virtue, the same as ἀρετὴ alone. So also, οἱ περὶ φιλοσοφίαν, those who study philosophy : οἱ περὶ πῆλιν θήγαν, the hunters : &c.

IV. In composition περὶ often strengthens the sense ; as, περὶσεργος, performing any action with extraordinary care and diligence, (i. e. being carefully engaged in examining round about it, and in seeing that nothing is left undone). So also περὶαλγής, afflicted deeply, (i. e. remaining round about sorrow ; not leaving it). 2. In general, however, it has the meaning of round about, as well as the other shades of meaning which immediately result from it. Thus, περιαιρέω, I take away what is round about : περιβαίνω, I walk round about : περιαργυρόω, I silver over : περιεῖδω, I contemplate, &c.

Πρὸς.

This preposition, in its original signification, is used to express that from which any thing proceeds or emanates towards one's self. Hence it accords in this signification with the genitive, and is joined to it. It is followed also by the dative and accusative. When construed with the dative, it has the same original meaning as παρά, but more commonly means, in the immediate vicinity of. With the accusative, it indicates direction from any thing to, or towards, another. Thus,

I. With the genitive. 1. τὸ ποιούμενον πρὸς Λακεδαιμονίων, that which has been done by the Lacedæmonians, (referring to an act proceeding or emanating from them). 2. πρὸς ἀνδρὸς σοφοῦ ἐστὶ, it is the part of a wise man, (i. e. it hangs or depends from, it forms part of, a wise man's duty). 3. πρὸς θυμοῦ, of his free will, cordially, (i. e. spontaneously emanating from his own breast). 4. εἶναι πρὸς τινός, to be on any one's side, (i. e. to hang upon, or from, one). 5. πρὸς τινός εἶναι, to be an advantage to any one, (i. e. to proceed or emanate from any thing towards one). 6. πρὸς πατρός, on the father's side; πρὸς μητρός, on the mother's side, (i. e. to hang or depend from, &c.) 7. οἱ πρὸς αἵματος, the relations, (i. e. they whom an intimacy regards which proceeds from blood). 8. It is used in oaths and entreaties; as, καὶ σὲ πρὸς τοῦ σοῦ τέκνου καὶ θεῶν ἱκνοῦμαι, and I conjure you by your son and by the gods, (i. e. by that paternal feeling which may be said to proceed from your son, and by that feeling of veneration which may be said to emanate from the Gods, as the exciting causes of these respective emotions). 9. τῷ δ' αὐτῷ μάρτυροι ἐστίω πρὸς τε θεῶν μακάρων, πρὸς τε θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, and let them both themselves be witnesses before the blessed gods and before mortal men, (i. e. let them testify truly to the fact, on account of that feeling of respect which they must naturally have as well for the gods as for the rest of their own species. Here the feeling may be said to emanate from the gods and from men, as equally the exciting causes of it).

II. With a dative. 1. πρὸς τούτοις, in addition to these things, (i. e. remaining in the immediate vicinity of these things, and consequently added to, or united with, them). 2. γίνεσθαι πρὸς τοῖς πράγμασι, to be occupied with business, (i. e. to be in the immediate vicinity of business and to remain therein). 3. πρὸς τοῖς κριταῖς, with, or before the judges, (i. e. in their immediate neighbourhood or presence).

III. With an accusative. 1. πρὸς πατέρα τὸν σὸν, to or towards your father. 2. πρὸς μακρὸν Ὀλύμπον, towards vast Olympus. 3. σκοπεῖν πρὸς τι, to look to, or consider, any thing.

4. πρὸς λόγον, with regard to the matter. 5. πρὸς τὸ βέλτιστον, for the best, (i. e. directed towards that which is best). 6. πρὸς οὐδέν, on no account, (i. e. directed towards, referring to, no consideration). 7. πρὸς ταῦτα, on this account; accordingly. 8. πρὸς τὸ μέγεθος τῆς πόλεως, in comparison with the size of the city, (i. e. with reference to the size of the city). 9. πρὸς ὕβριν, with a contumelious manner, (i. e. looking towards, resembling, insolence of manner). 10. οὐ πρὸς τοὺς ὑμετέρους λόγους, not according to your words, or, not taking your words as a pattern. 11. πρὸς δαίμονα, against the will of the god, (i. e. looking boldly towards the god; facing and opposing his decrees).

IV. In composition it generally signifies, 1. addition; as, προσδίδωμι, I give in addition; I give besides. 2. towards; as, προσπλέω, I sail towards. 3. against; as, προσπιτῶ, I stumble against. 4. clearness, or adaptation; as, προσσιτέλλω, I put on a garment, making it fit closely around the body, (i. e. I bring it nearer to the body).

Ὑπὸ.

This preposition is used in its original meaning, in reference to an object which comes from the under part of another object. In its common use it is connected with passive verbs, in order to mark the subject from which the action proceeds, or in whose power it was that the action should or should not take place. It is evident that ὑπὸ implies more than παρὰ, or even ἀπὸ, since it always expresses efficiency in connexion with design, purpose, &c. while with παρὰ it often remains undetermined whether the action is the result of design, &c. or not. With the dative ὑπὸ denotes continuance under, indicating submission, subjection, and also, in a stronger manner than the genitive, the instrument by (i. e. under the abiding influence of) which, a certain effect is produced. With the accusative ὑπὸ properly expresses local direction towards the under part of any thing, under, &c. Thus,

I. With the genitive, 1. τύπτεσθαι ὑπὸ τινος, to be struck by any one (referring to its being under the control of him from whom the blow proceeded, whether he should give it or not). 2. ἀποθανεῖν ὑπὸ τινος, to be slain by any one. 3. ὑπὸ ἀγγέλων φράζειν, to tell by messengers, (i. e. to tell from under the lips of messengers). 4. ὑπὸ κήρυκος, by means of a herald. 5. ὑπὸ μαστίγων, by means of whips, (i. e. by means of the effect resulting from any thing being placed under the action of whips).

II. With the dative, 1. ὑπὸ μάστιγι, by means of, or with, a whip. 2. ὑπὸ κήρυκι, by a herald. 3. ὑπὸ μάρτυσι, by witnesses. 3. ὑπὸ τινι εἶναι, to be in subjection to one, (i. e. to remain under one's authority). 4. ὑπὸ σοφωτάτῳ Χείρωνι τεθραμμένος, brought up under the most wise Chiron. In these, and in every other instance of ὑπὸ being construed with the dative, there will be found more or less reference to an action which has lasted for some space of time.

III. With an accusative. 1. ὑπὸ τὴν γῆν ἵεναι, to go under the earth. 2. ὑπὸ τὴν ἑω, towards the east, (i. e. towards that region of the world which lies beneath the eastern sky). 3. ὑπ' αὐγᾶς δρᾶν τι, to examine any thing at the light, (i. e. to bring it to, and examine it under, the light). 4. ὑπὸ τὴν εἰρήνην, on the eve of the peace, (i. e. just beginning to move under, and feel the influence of, peace. Like the preposition sub in Latin, with the accusative). 5. ὑπὸ τοῖς αὐτοῖς χρόνοις, about the same time, (i. e. just moving under, and being acted upon by, the same space of time). 6. ὑπὸ τι, in some measure, somewhat, (i. e. moving under and acted upon by an object in some degree).

IV. In composition ὑπὸ retains the above significations; but often imports likewise, 1. decrease or diminution; as, ὑπογελῶ, I smile, (i. e. I keep under a laugh); ὑποβρέχω, I moisten a little, (i. e. I moisten in a degree under, or less than, what is usual or requisite); ὑπελαύνω, I urge on gently, (i. e. I urge on in a degree under, or less violent than, what is usual or might be required). 2. privacy; as, ὑπάγω, I withdraw privately; I retire, (i. e. I lead under or concealed from observation, I withdraw from observation, whether it be myself or another). 3. the beginning of an action; as, ὑποφαύσκω, to begin to shine, (i. e. to shine a little; to shine under, or with less brilliancy than, its full power; not to have attained as yet its meridian splendour).

General Remarks on the Prepositions.

Obs. 1. Prepositions are often used in an adverbial sense, their case being understood; especially ἐν in Ionic, signifying amongst others, amongst them, &c. according as the context requires. So also πρὸς in Attic, implying besides, particularly.

Obs. 2. Hence in Ionic writers they are often put twice, once without a case, adverbially, and again with a case, or in composition with a verb; as, ἀν' δ' Ὀδυσσεὺς πολέμητις ἀνίστατο, up arose the sage Ulysses. Homer. Ἐν δὲ καὶ ἐν Μίμφῃ, among others, in Memphis also. Herod.

Obs. 3. In composition with verbs, the prepositions are always used adverbially. Hence in the old state of the language, in Homer and Herodotus, it is customary to find the preposition and the verb separated by other words, and the former sometimes coming immediately after the verb; as, ἡμῖν ἀπὸ λοιγὸν ἀμῦναι. Homer. Ἀπὸ μὲν σεωυῖθ' ὤλεσας. Herodotus. In these and other similar cases, this is not properly a Tmesis, i. e. the separation of a word at that time used in its compounded form; but the prepositions at that time served really as adverbs, which were put either immediately before, or after the verbs. Latterly, however, particularly in Attic, the composition became more close, and the prepositions were considered as a part of the verb. In Attic writers the proper tnesis is extremely rare. Otherwise, however, a simple verb is sometimes put, and with it a preposition with its case, where, on other occasions, a verb compounded with that preposition is put; as, ὑπὲρ τινα ἔχειν for ὑπερῶν τινα.

Obs. 4. The prepositions are often separated from their case; as, ἐν γὰρ σε τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ ἀναιρομαι. In Attic this takes place, according to rule, with the conjunctions μέν, δέ, γὰρ οὖν; as, ἐν μὲν εἰρήνῃ, ἐν μὲν γὰρ εἰρήνῃ, ἐς μὲν οὖν τὰς Ἀθήνας; and with πρὸς, with the genitive, when it signifies per.

Obs. 5. Prepositions likewise are often put after their case; as, νεῶν ἀπο καὶ κλισιάων, particularly in the Ionic and Doric writers, and in the Attic poets. This takes place, in the Attic prose writers, only in περί with the genitive, of which the instances are frequent.

Obs. 6. When a preposition should stand twice with two different nouns, it is often put only once by the Poets, and that too with the second noun; as, ἢ ἀλὸς ἢ ἐπὶ γῆς. Homer. Σχιστὴ δ' ὁδὸς ἐς ταῦτ' Ἀελφῶν κἀπὶ Δαυλίας ἄγει. Sophocles.

Obs. 7. Prepositions which mark a removal, derivation, or motion from a place, viz. ἀπὸ, and ἐκ, as well as those which signify motion to a place, as εἰς, are often interchanged with those which mark rest in a place, as ἐν, and vice versa.

1. ἄθες, εἴθε, and other Particles, are sometimes joined with the Imperfect and 2d Aorist of ὀφείλω, as αἴθ' ὀφείλες ἀγνοεῖς τ' ἐμέναι, Hom.

2. ἄντικα introduces also an example or instance of any thing that has been said; for instance; as for example.

3. ἔπει is used elliptically, before both the indicative and imperative, especially when what is spoken appears so certain that the person addressed may be defied to dispute it. As, ἐπεὶ ἀπόκριται, "For (if it be not so) answer me."

1. Εἰ and ὅτε are used by the Dramatic Poets with the Indicative and Optative only. By Homer εἰ is used with the Subjunctive also, joined to ἄν or κε. Εἰ γὰρ with the Indicative and Optative is used for utinam.

When εἰ is used with an Imp. or an Aor. Indicative, the Verb in the corresponding clause, preceding or following, is put in the Indic. with ἄν, as εἰ μὴ τότ' ἐπόνουν, νῦν ἄν οὐκ εὐφραίνομην, Aristoph.

2. Μὴ, forbidding, with the Present, governs the Imperative; with the Future the Indicative; with the Aorist, when it refers to the Past, the Optative; when it refers to the Future, the Subjunctive.

3. These Particles, ἄν used in prose, and κε and κεν in verse, give a Potential sense to the Verb. Thus in the Imp. εἶχον signifies I had, εἶχον ἄν, I would have. In the 2d. Aor. εἶπον means I said, εἶπον ἄν, I would have said.

The Present Optative with ἄν is often used by tragic writers in the sense of a Future Indicative; thus μένοιμ' ἄν, Soph. I will stay.

Ἄν, joined with indefinite pronouns and adjectives, signifies soever, as ἅπανθ' ὃν' ἄν λέγω, Aristoph. Whatever words I may speak: ὅτι κεν καταεύσω, Hom. Whatever I may nod.

Ἄν in this case follows the Noun or Particle, and precedes the Verb.

Ἄν is sometimes understood; as, ἤλθον ἐγὼ, Theocr. i. e. ἄν, I would have come.

4. These have ἄν, expressed or understood, with the Optative.

OPTATIVE and SUBJUNCTIVE.

Ἐπεὶ, after.| Μη, lest.

CONJUNCTIONS Postpositive are γάρ, μὲν, δε, τε, τοίνυν. These are Prepositive, and Postpositive, ἄν, ἄρα, δὴ, ἵνα. The rest are Prepositive.

Signification of some of the Particles.

Αρα*. 1. Most common meaning therefore. 2. Where it appears expletive it would seem, in fact, to have a meaning analogous to in the nature of things, of course, ex ordine, &c. 3. When interrogative it has the force of num? The difference between ἄρ' οὐ and ἄρα μὴ is, that ἄρ' οὐ, nonne, requires an affirmative answer; ἄρα μὴ, num, a negative, as ἄρα does alone; but μὴ imparts some degree of dubiousness to the question, and that for the purpose sometimes of irony.

Γε is a restrictive particle. 1. Its most common meanings are at least, indeed, certainly, however, &c. as εἰ μὴ ὅλον, μέρος γε, "if not the whole, at least a part:" ἔγωγε, I indeed, I at least, I for my part, &c. In English, however, the sense of γε, in most combinations, can only be rendered by heightening the tone of the word to which it refers.

Γαρ. For, always follows other words, in which respect it resembles the Latin enim. It often occurs in answers, when it must be referred to something not expressed, as to καὶ or οὐ, οὐδὲν θαυμασιόν, ὁρθῶς λέγεις, and the like. Thus, in answers, ἔστι γὰρ οὕτω is equivalent to καὶ ("yes,") or ὁρθῶς λέγεις ("you speak rightly,") γὰρ ἔστιν οὕτω.

Δή. In prose never begins a sentence or member of a sentence; in verse it sometimes does, but not in Attic writers; 1. It signifies, certainly, surely, without doubt, &c. Νῦν δὴ with a past tense is, just now, a little while since. 2. This particle is also very commonly used in continuation of a recital, in which it is usually rendered igitur, then. 3. When joined with καὶ it signifies, now, by this time, already. καὶ δὴ is also used in asseverations, indeed.

Δήπου and δήπουθεν, signify 1. doubtless, of course, and also, 2. ironically, to be sure, forsooth.

Δῖθεν signifies 1. ἀπὸ τοῦ δὴ (i. e. ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν), forthwith, instantly. 2. It has an affirmative force, but rather in deceit and simulation, than in declaration of truth. Hence it may often be rendered, as if, forsooth, ostensibly, as was pretended.

Ἄρα. 1. Appears to be put for δὴ, now. 2. It is used in exhorting, beseeching, &c. yes, do, pray, I entreat. 3. It is employed in questions, and answers to tandem, prithee; and 4. in affirmation or asseveration, indeed, truly.

Kai and te serve for the simple union, both of single ideas, and of entire parts of a proposition. The connection by te is more usual in the elder and poetic language than in Attic prose, and generally this particle is not merely put once between the two ideas to be connected, but joined to each of the connected parts, as πατήρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε. This connection by te—te occurs with Attic prose writers only in the union of strongly opposed ideas, as φέρειν χρή τὰ τε δαιμόνια ἀναγκαίως τὰ τε ἀπὸ τῶν πολεμίων ἀνδρείως. Thucyd. 2. 64. With Homer, however, frequently, and, with the Attic poets, not rarely, in the union of kindred ideas, 1. te kai connects more closely than the simple kai, and is chiefly used when ideas are to be represented as united in one supposition. Hence this kind of combination is also chiefly used when opposite ideas are to be assigned as closely connected, thus, χρηστοί τε καὶ πονηροί—ἀγαθὰ τε καὶ κακά. For this reason we also say ἄλλως τε καὶ, particularly also, especially, (i. e. in other respects, on other grounds, and also,) because ἄλλως already expresses a natural and strong antithesis to that which follows. 2. καὶ—kai, as well—as, both—and. This combination can only be adopted, when the combined ideas are of different kinds, but never in those which are perfectly homogeneous. Hence several substantives can always be connected by kai—kai, as ἀπέκτειναν καὶ παῖδας καὶ γυναῖκας,—but of adjectives, only those which contain nothing homogeneous in their idea, as ἀνθρώπους εὐρήσεις καὶ ἀγαθοὺς καὶ κακοὺς, or καὶ πένητας καὶ πλουσίους, and the like; not πόλεις καὶ μεγάλη καὶ πολυάνθρωπος, but μεγάλη τε καὶ πολυάνθρωπος.

Mèn. The opposition in which one member of a proposition stands to another can be stronger or slighter, and in both cases the Greeks use μέν and δέ for connection. The English particles indeed and but can only be used to designate the stronger opposition, and hence we are often deficient in definite expressions for the Greek μέν and δέ, which we then translate sometimes by and, also, sometimes by but, on the contrary, yet, sometimes by partly—partly, as well—as also, sometimes finally by now, moreover, and the like. 1. When μέν is put in the first member of a sentence, the thought necessarily turns to an opposite member with δέ. Several cases nevertheless occurs, where, with μέν preceding, the expected δέ does not actually enter. Namely, either the antithesis to the member found with μέν expressly exists, but declares itself so clearly by the position and subject that δέ can be omitted

(this is chiefly the case when temporal and local adverbs are used, which stand in a natural opposition between themselves, as ἐνταῦθα and ἐκεῖ, πρῶτον and ἔπειτα, &c.)—or the antithesis is indicated by another particle, as ἀλλὰ, αὐτάρ, αὖτε, &c.—or the antithesis lies only in the mind, but is not expressly assigned in the discourse. This last is chiefly the case when personal and demonstrative pronouns are used at the beginning of a proposition in combination with μέν, as ἐγὼ μὲν προήρημαι, I have formed the resolution (another probably not.)—καὶ ταῦτα μὲν δὴ τοιαῦτα. These things are so circumstanced (but others differently). 2. Although where μέν occurs δέ must be supposed to follow, yet reversely, δέ does not necessarily imply a preceding μέν, but can be joined, without μέν preceding, to every proposition containing a farther developement and division of single consecutive circumstances, although the connection is then not so close as in the case of μέν and δέ. Also, δε is frequently used at the beginning of a discourse, addresses, and questions, or in answers, where it always indicates an opposition conceived in the mind.

Περ. This particle is in signification intimately allied to γε, and denotes, conformably to its derivation from περί, comprehension, or inclusion, whence, like γε, it is employed to strengthen single ideas. It very frequently enters into combination with relative pronouns, as also with temporal, causal, and conditional particles, to confirm their signification. The sense of this particle also is generally indicated in English merely by a stronger intonation of the word; although it frequently also may be translated by very, ever. In combination with a participle we often translate it by although, or how much soever. Thus, λέγει, ὥστε λέγει, δίκαια πάντα. He says all whatever he does say, justly.—μήτε σὺ τόνδ', ἀγαθὸς περ ἔων, ἀποαιρεσὺ κόρην, and thou, be thou never so excellent, (i. e. however excellent thou art) deprive him not of this virgin,—εἴπερ, if at all, provided that, if indeed.—εἰςπερ, seeing that, since.—καίπερ, with a participle, although.

Πῶς, how, is an adverb of manner. It is used, 1. in interrogation, as πῶς οὐκ ἄξιός ἐστι τουτοῦ; how can he but be worthy of this? 2. πῶς γάρ and πῶς γάρ ἄν are used elliptically after negative sentences, and πῶς γάρ οὐ after affirmative sentences, as ἐκείνα μὲν ἄξια χάριτος καὶ ἐπαινου κρίνει, πῶς γάρ οὐ; I judge those things deserving of thanks and praise; for how can I judge otherwise? of course I judge them so. 3. This particle, even not interrogatively used, retains its accent, when it signifies, in some certain manner, emphatically. And when, in this sense, πῶς μὲν—πῶς δέ are opposed, in one manner, in another manner, or, in some respects, in other respects, custom retains the circumflex, although analogy requires πῶς μὲν, πῶς δέ, &c. The circumflex is also retained when πῶς signifies, how, in what manner, without a question. But when it signifies indeterminately, in some manner or other; some how; in a manner; it becomes an enclitic, and loses its accent.

Ποῦ signifies 1. where? 2. whither? 3. It retains its circumflex accent, even when used materially, as τὸ γὰρ ποῦ αὐτό τέ ἐστὶ τι, κ. τ. λ. Aristot. although analogy would require it to be written ποὺ.

Που, an enclitic, signifies, 1. Any where, or somewhere. 2. It is used in speaking of things with some degree of uncertainty and caution, probably, perhaps, as I guess, if I mistake not, &c.

Τάχα. The primary signification is quickly, speedily, soon. This is its only sense in Homer. Next it signifies perhaps, and is used as synonymous with ἴσως by Plato and others. To augment its signification, it is joined with other equivalent words, as τάχ' ἂν, εἰ τυχοί, καὶ τοῦτον ἡδίκηει. Demosth. τάχα δ' ἂν ἔσως οὐκ ἐθέλοι. Aristoph.

Τοι, an enclitic, rarely standing alone, except in poetry, signifies truly, surely, certainly, at least, indeed. It is more frequently compounded with conjunctions and particles, 1. with δὴ and ἦ; as, ἦτοι, δήτοι, having nearly the same signification as the simple τοι. 2. With οὐ, as οὐτοι, certainly not, assuredly not, not at all. 3. With γὰρ and οὖν, as τοιγὰρ, τοιγάρτοι, τοιγαροῦν, therefore, hence, on this account. 4. With νυν, as τοίνυν, therefore, wherefore, &c. This particle τοι is properly the old dative case (when ο was used for ω, the latter not having been as yet introduced into the alphabet, and when the adscript ι was used, if indeed it were not always). Hence τοι is equivalent to τῷ.

Ὡς. This particle has various uses. 1. It is elegantly construed with participles in the genitive; as περὶ Θαΐδος φησιν ὁ Κλειταρχος ὡς αἰτίας γενομένης κ. τ. λ. "Clitarchus speaks of Thais as having been the cause," &c. 2. It is joined in a similar manner with accusatives also, νομιζων or the like being understood, as εἶχετο δὲ πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς ἀπλῶς τάγαθὰ διδόναι, ὡς τοὺς θεοὺς κάλλιστα εἰδύτας. He used to pray to the gods simply to give him what was good, since he thought the gods knew best. 3. Ὡς, ὡς γε, ὡς δὴ, ὡς οὖν, ὡς γοῦν, sometimes signify for, i. e. considered as, or, considered with reference or regard to, as ἦν δὲ οὐδὲ ἀδύνατος, ὡς Λακεδαιμόνιος, εἰπεῖν. Nor was he ineloquent for (i. e. considered as) a Lacedæmonian. Thucyd. ἀνὴρ, ὡς δὴ τότε, a man, for those times, (i. e. considered with reference to the age he lived in), κομψός που και άστεϊος. So also, τοῦργον ἐξηκριβωσεν ὥς γε (or, ὥς δὴ,) κατ' ἀνθρώπον. He finished the work with great exactness for a man, (the limited capacity and faculties of human beings being considered). 4. Ὡς also signifies, when, whilst, as soon as, &c. In this sense it is elegantly repeated to express the celerity of an occurrence; as, ὥς εἶδ', ὥς μιν μᾶλλον ἔδου χόλος. As soon as he saw them, immediately, &c. 5. It is often expressive of a wish; in verse, by itself; as ὦ Ζεῦ, ὥς Χαλύβων πᾶν ἀπόλοιτο γένος: Callim. Jupiter, ut Chalybōn omne genus pereat. But in prose εἴθε γε is often joined with it, or γε alone, some other word intervening; as, ὥς εἴθε γε καὶ ἐξεμέσαι δυνατὸν ἦν. Lucian. 6. It has sometimes the signification of οὔτι, that. 7. Like οὔτι it is also put before superlative adverbs and adjectives, &c. and strengthens the meaning, as ὥς τάχιστα, as quickly as possible. 8. Sometimes ὥς and οὔτι are conjoined before superlatives, when οὕτως may be understood, as ὥς οὔτι μάλιστα, in the same degree as what is most so. 9. Ὡς is often joined with an infinitive, in the sense of quemadmodum, or quantum, as, or as far as. Thus ὥς εἰκάσαι, as far as one may conjecture. ὥς ἔμοιγε δοκεῖν, as I think. ὥς εἰπεῖν, so to speak. ὥς ἐμὲ εὖ μεμνήσθαι, as far as I well remember. 10. It is sometimes put before ἕκαστος, as ὥς ἕκαστοι, severally, quisque pro se. 11. With the accent it stands for οὕτως, so: care, however, must be taken not to confound ὥς for οὕτως, with ὥς changed to ὅς because followed by an enclitic. 12. Ὡς with numerals, signifies about, as ὥς ἑκατὸν, about a hundred. 13. Ὡς is sometimes put for εἰς or πρὸς. In these constructions, ὥς is not properly a preposition, but a particle, which is frequently joined with prepositions signifying direction towards a point, to indicate that the idea of the preposition must not be taken in a strict and definite sense, as ὥς πρὸς, ὥς εἰς, as towards, as to, i. e. towards, to. By reason of this frequent combination with prepositions, ὥς became gradually used as a preposition itself, and, as such, denotes approach, yet always with the collateral idea, that the approach is made at a distance, and with timidity or reverence. Hence it is chiefly, though not exclusively, used with persons; as ὥς τοὺς θεοὺς—ὥς τὸν βασιλέα.

Negative Particles.

The Greeks employ for negation the two particles οὐ (οὐκ, οὐχ) and μή, whose composition with other particles produces a double series of negatives, which, in certain combinations of propositions, and under certain relations of sense, are used interchangeably, according to the same rule as the simple οὐ and μή themselves.

The difference between μή and οὐ is, that οὐ denies a thing itself, μή a thought of a thing. Hence οὐ is used absolutely, and independently of any foregoing verb expressed or understood, as οὐκ ἔστι ταῦτα, this is not so: whereas with μή, there must be either expressed or understood some verb significant of thought, suspicion, will; as μή ταῦτα γένηται, viz. φοβοῦμαι, I fear lest this may happen: μή τοῦτο δράσῃς, viz. ἴδρα. See that you do not do this. Sometimes, however, it is rather the thought or will itself that is understood than any particular verb expressive of it; as μή κεῖθε.

From this primary and constant difference between μή and οὐ is derived the distinction made by grammarians, that οὐ denies and μή forbids. Οὐ τολμήσεις is, you will not dare, to one, who, we know, has not audacity enough to do so and so: μή τολμήσεις is, dare not, to one who in our opinion is audacious enough to do what we know the former will not do.

Hence it appears too why μή, not οὐ, is joined with conditional particles; as, εἰ μή, ἐάν μή, ὅταν μή, &c. not εἰ οὐ, ἐάν οὐ, &c. for by their very nature these particles indicate that something is proposed as a supposition or thought of some one. And, in the same manner, the relative δὲ is used with μή, when we intend it to have an hypothetical signification; as, τίς δὲ δοῦναι δύναται ἑτέρῳ, & μή ἔχει αὐτός; who can give things to another, if he has them not himself? Had the expression been & οὐκ ἔχει αὐτός; the sense would have been, the things which a person has not himself, how can he give to another?

When μή is joined with participles, as is very frequently the case, the sense is properly, if there be such: thus, ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν οὐ κρίνεται, ὁ δὲ μή πιστεύων ἤδη κέκριται, ὅτι μή πεπίστευκεν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ. Iohn. 3. 18. Here it is οὐ κρίνεται, because it is simply and fully denied that the believer is ever subject to condemnation; but it is μή πιστεύων as expressing negation in a supposed case, and ὁ μή πιστεύων is equivalent to should there be any one who does not believe, &c. while the phrase οὐ πιστεύων would imply some definite individual who actually does not believe. So it is ὅτι μή πεπίστευκεν, i. e. because, by supposition, he has not believed; whereas ὅτι οὐ πεπίστευκεν would have been intended of some one person in particular.

The two negations are often combined together so as mutually to restrict or confine each other. This can take place in a two-fold manner, according to the order of position, thus either οὐ μή or μή οὐ. In this combination, as in all other cases, οὐ denies objectively, and μή subjectively. Hence οὐ μή implies the idea of no apprehension being entertained that a thing will take place; μή οὐ, on the contrary, the idea of an apprehension being entertained that a thing will not take place. Hence are derived the following rules.

1. Οὐ μή, is an extensive and emphatical negation, and indicates the imagining of a thing which should not and must not take place; as, οὐ μή δυσμενῆς ἔσῃ φίλοις, that thou wilt not (I expect,) be ill-inclined towards thy friends, that is, be not ill-inclined towards thy friends: ἀλλ' οὐπορ' ἐξ ἐμοῦ γε μή μάθῃς τόδε, yet never (must thou expect) that thou wouldst learn this from me, that is, yet never shouldst thou learn this from me.

2. Μή οὐ, in dependant propositions, when the verb of the principal proposition is either accompanied by a negation or contains a negative idea in itself, destroy each other, and are often to be translated by that; as, πρὸς τί βλέπων ἀπιστεῖς μή οὐκ ἐπισιτήμη ᾗ ἡ ἀρετή; with reference to what dost thou disbelieve that virtue is knowledge?—οὐκ ἀρνούμαι μή οὐ γενέσθαι. I do not deny that it has taken place.—πείσομαι γὰρ οὐ τοσοῦτον οὐδέν, ὥστε μή οὐ καλῶς θανεῖν, there will nothing happen to me so bad, but that I shall die nobly.

3. In independent propositions, on the contrary, μή ου is used in combination with the subjunctive to express negative assertions with less positiveness and strength, and is to be translated by indeed not, perhaps not, and explained by the addition of an omitted verb, as ὅρα, and the like: thus, ἀλλὰ μή οὐκ ᾗ διδασκὶν ἡ ἀρετή, but virtue may perhaps not be to be taught.—ἡμῖν δὲ μή οὐδὲν ἄλλο σκεπτέον ᾗ, ἢ ὅπερ νῦν δη ἐλέγομεν, but perhaps nothing else may be to be examined, than what we just now mentioned. In the same manner is μή οὐ used also in combination with the participle to strengthen the sense of μή, and to render it more distinct and prominent; as, δυσάλγητος γὰρ ἂν εἶην, τοιάνδε μή οὐ κατοικτιζῶν ἐδραν, for I should be unfeeling, were it possible for me not to pity, &c.

Of the Tenses and Moods.

TENSES.

1. GENERAL REMARKS.

1. In order to define accurately, and understand correctly, the peculiar signification of each tense, it is necessary that, besides the idea of time, regard should also be had to the stage or period of the action which is expressed in the verb. For, as the time admits of being resolved into three divisions, being either past, present, or future; so the action also, considered as such, appears in a threefold relation, and must be conceived either as completed and finished, or as developing and forming, or as at the moment of beginning and coming on.

2. Now, both the point of time and the stage or period of the action are indicated in the verbal forms which we denominate tenses, and hence the peculiar idea of each individual tense cannot be properly understood, unless at the same time a correct conception be entertained of the relation which intervenes between the time and the action.

3. But the action in each of its three relations can fall into each of the three divisions of time; and hence arise three times three, or nine tenses, which we shall here develop according to their idea, illustrated with examples from the Greek, and designated, as far as these will suffice, by the usual grammatical appellations.

1. The action falls into the present time,

(A.) as completed or finished.—γέγραφα, I have written.—Perfect tense.

(B.) as developing or forming.—γράφω, I write, am writing.—Present tense.

(C.) as at the moment of beginning, or coming on.—μέλλω γράφειν, I am beginning to write, am just going to write, am on the point of writing.—Compound future, formed with the present of the auxiliary verb.

2. The action falls into past time,

(A.) as completed.—ἔγραψα, I had written.—Pluperfect tense.

(B.) as developing.—ἔγραφον, I wrote, was writing.—Imperfect tense.

(C.) as at the moment of beginning.—ἔμελλον γράφειν, I was on the point of writing.

3. The action falls into the future time,

(A.) as completed.—γεγράφω, I shall have written.—Future perfect tense.

(B.) as developing.—γράψω, I shall write, or be writing.—Simple future tense.

(C.) as at the moment of beginning.—γράψων ἔσομαι, I shall be on the point of writing.

4. All the tenses here specified have a positive existence in a language, although they are not completely enumerated in the Grammar, which generally passes over such as do not possess an independent form, but are produced by composition with auxiliary verbs. In Greek, there is also the Aorist, the signification of which we shall develop in the remarks on the individual tenses.

2. Use of the Individual Tenses.

1. The Present expresses an action which we are just now performing, as in other languages ; as γράφω, I write, or am writing (am just now in the act of writing). The present tense is also used for assigning properties which are permanently connected with an object, or for the expression of a general sentiment, as πάντα τὰ ἀγαθὰ δίδωσιν ὁ Θεός. God gives all things that are good.—πολλῶν κακῶν ἀνθρώποις αἰτίος ἐστὶν ὁ πόλεμος. War is the cause of many evils to men. Hence in this latter usage it deserves the name of the present aorist ; for it is an acknowledged principle of universal grammar, that wherever time is signified without any farther circumscription than that of simple present, past, or future, the tense is an aorist.

2. The Perfect denotes an action as completed in past time, but continued in its consequences, or attendant circumstances, to the present ; as γεγάμηκα, I am married, (i. e. I have been and still continue married ;) whereas ἐγάμησα, the aorist, signifies I was, or have been, married, without indicating whether the relation still subsists. Hence the perfect is generally used to denote a lasting and permanent state, or an action finished in itself, and it therefore often occurs in Greek where in English we use the present : as ἀμφιβέβηκας, thou protectest, (i. e. thou hast protected and still dost continue to protect). The continued force of the perfect accompanies it through all the moods ; as, εἶπον, τὴν θύραν κεκλεισθαι, they gave directions for the door to remain shut. τὸ ἀγκύριον ἀνεσπάσθω, let the anchor be weighed and remain so. τεθνάθι, lie dead. τεθναιην, may I be dead, &c.

Several perfects are always used to denote only the finished action whose effect is permanent ; and therefore in English are translated by the present of some other verb, which expresses the consequence of the action contained in the Greek verb ; thus, from καλέω, I name, we have κέκλημαι, my name is ; I am called : from κτάομαι, I acquire for myself, κέκτημαι, I possess, (i. e. I have acquired, and the acquisition continues mine) : μνάομαι, I recall to my own recollection, μέμνημαι, I remember, I am mindful.

3. The aorist, on the contrary, only denotes generally an action or occurrence of the past, without determining the period of its termination, and without leaving the mind any room to dwell upon it: thus, ἐκτισθη ἡ πόλις can be said of any town; on the contrary, ἐκτισται ἡ πόλις only of a town which has just been built, or which now exists in its finished state. Hence the name of this tense, (ἀορίστος χρόνος,) the time being undefined, and no reference being to any fixed period.

As the aorist merely denotes an action of the past, undefined as to the period of its termination, and which does not leave the mind any room to dwell upon it, hence arises the usage of making the aorist often refer to a quick or momentaneous action, examples of which occur on almost every page of the Greek writers; as τοὺς πελταστὰς ἐδέξαντο οἱ βάρβαροι, the barbarians received (a momentaneous action) the targeteers, καὶ αὖς φυγὴν ἐίρεψαν, and put them quickly to flight.

As the aorist does not definitively mark the point of time when an action was performed, but only denotes generally that something has taken place at some period or other of the past, the Greeks use it also to indicate that something has occurred repeatedly at different periods, or that something is wont to take place. Such an aorist is translated in English by the present, or by the auxiliary verbs, to be wont, to use, &c. as Σωκράτης ἐδίδαξε τοὺς μαθητὰς ἀμισθί. Socrates was wont to teach his disciples without any charge. Τὰ ἄστρα ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ οἱ θεοὶ ἀνέφηναν. The Gods cause the stars to appear above our heads in the night-season, (i. e. always do this).

4. The Future tense expresses an action which is to be performed at a future period. Yet in Greek an accurate distinction must be observed between the simple future and that formed with μέλλω and the infinitive, as the former only assigns generally something which is to take place at one period or other of the future, while the latter always designates an action which is to be begun at this moment; thus γράψα, I shall write, (the time when the writing is to begin being undefined); on the contrary, μέλλω γράφειν, scripturus sum, I am on the point of writing, (am just now going to write).

5. The Imperfect expresses an action in past time, continued during another past action or its accompanying circumstances. Hence it is generally used to express a continuous action, and in narrative interchanges with the aorist which denotes something momentaneous.

The imperfect not only expresses continuance of action, but also, in consequence of this, what is customary. It differs from the aorist, however, in this latter signification, in that the aorist denotes what is always customary ; the imperfect what was customary during a specified period of time.

In many verbs, from the poverty of external forms, the established distinction between the aorist and imperfect has disappeared. Thus, forms of the imperfect, as ἦν, ἔφη, ἔκλυε, ἔξιστο, &c. are also used in the signification of aorists, which are partly not extant, partly less usual in these verbs. In the same manner also, aorists, as ἔστη, ἦλθε, ἔδν, &c. frequently stand in the signification of the imperfect.

6. The Pluperfect denotes an action, which was already completed when another began, or while another continued. It is therefore to the Past, what the Perfect is to the Present ; and as the Perfect is frequently rendered into English by the Present, so the Pluperfect is often rendered by the English Imperfect ; as, ἐδεδοίκειν, I was afraid, (i. e. I had been and still continued afraid).

7. The Paulo Post Futurum, or Third Future Passive as it is sometimes styled, is properly, both in form and signification, compounded of the Perfect and Future ; and, as the Perfect often signifies a continued action, this meaning remains in the Third Future, as ἐγγεγράφεται, he shall continue, or stand, enrolled. Consequently, this is the natural future of those perfects which have acquired a separate meaning of the nature of the present ; as, λέλειπται, he has been left, he remains ; λελειψεται, he shall have been left, shall remain ; but λειφθήσεται, he will be left, or deserted. So κέκτημαι, I possess ; κέκτησομαι, I shall possess ; but κτήσομαι, I will acquire.

In some Verbs the Third Future has a peculiar import : either, 1st. It shall, I will, as τεθήσεται, he shall be buried ; or, 2d. a hastening of the action, as φράζε και πεφράξεται, speak and it shall be accomplished immediately. In this usage, the Third Future is used to express the rapidity of an action, by taking, not the beginning of it, but its completion, and the situation resulting from it. It is on this latter acceptance that its name of Paulo Post Futurum (what will take place a little while after the present, i. e. futurum paulo post præsens tempus) rests.

The Attics employ the Third Future Passive of several Verbs, as a simple Future Passive ; as in δέω, to bind ; παύω, to cause to cease ; κόπτω, to cut, &c.

8. Although the Greek language is richer than any other in independent forms, nevertheless a circumlocution is also frequently made use of by means of the auxiliary verbs εἶναι, κυρεῖν, ὑπάρχειν and ἔχειν in connection with a particle, partly to supply deficient or to avoid inharmonious forms, partly to strengthen the signification. Thus, the subjunctive and optative of the perfect, both in the passive and active, are formed with εἶναι and the perfect participle, the independent forms being only very rarely used. But such circumlocutions frequently occur, particularly with the poets, even in the place of forms which are altogether usual, for the sake generally of strengthening the signification; as, ἔχων ἔσσι, more emphatical than ἔχει alone, &c. Of the circumlocutions formed with ἔχειν, those chiefly are to be remarked which express the idea of the continuous action; as, τοιαῦτά φασι τὸν ἀγαθὸν Κρέοντα κηρύξαντα ἔχειν (for κηρύξαι) such a command they say the good Creon has issued, (and it still continues). This kind of circumlocution, particularly with εἶναι, is very common in many writers, as, for example, Herodotus, who often employs it instead of the simple verbal form.

Of the Moods.

1. In simple propositions, the use of the Indicative is the same in all languages, as every thing which really exists, and every general sentiment pronounced unconditionally, must be designated by this mood.

2. The Subjunctive denotes the conditional and dependent, i. e. any thing which, in order to become real, requires the intervention of something else. From this general principle regulating its use are deduced the following shades of meaning, expressed by the same mood.

(A.) It is used in encouraging and exhorting in the first person plural, and in warning and prohibiting in the second person; because the performance of the action still depends upon the will of the person to whom the address is made; as, ἴωμεν, let us go.—μηδενὶ συμφορὰν δνειδίσῃς, reproach no one with misfortune.

(B.) It is used to express something undecided with respect to its issue, and consequently dependent, 1. in questions implying doubt; as, ἐγὼ τί ποιῶ; what am I to do?—εἴπωμεν ἢ σιγῶμεν; are we to speak, or remain silent?—2. In negative propositions chiefly with οὐ μή, when something is not likely to be positively denied, but is only stated as unlikely to occur. In this case we commonly translate the subjunctive by the future; as, οὐ μὴ εἴπω, I will not say.—εἰάν τοὺς φίλους κρατῆς εἴ ποιῶν, οὐ μὴ σοι δύνωνται ἀνέχειν οἱ πολέμιοι, if you surpass your friends in conferring favours on them, your enemies will not be able to withstand you.

3. The Optative denotes a thing purely imaginative, a mere human conception, abstracted from all reality and condition. Hence its use in simple propositions is very common and diversified, although it admits of being reduced to the following cases.

- (A.) Every occurrence which in and of itself is conceived as possible (whether the imagination employs it as an expectation, a hope, an apprehension, or as a merely assumed case), is expressed by the optative, usually in combination with the particle ἄν. In English we translate such an optative by the addition of the auxiliaries may, can, might, could, would, should, &c. as ἵσως ἄν τινες ἐπιτιμήσειαν τοῖς εἰρημέτοις. Some perhaps might find fault with the things that have been said.—οὐκ ἄν ἀνασχομένην, I should not endure.
- (B.) In the same light must the optative be considered, when it is used to express requests, commands, and even positive assertions, where with us it is, for the most part, translated by the imperative or the future. For in this usage there is couched merely a milder and more refined form of expression, chiefly adopted by the Attics, wherein we advance that which might be pronounced unconditionally and positively, merely as our own opinion and idea, and consequently do not anticipate the judgment of others. This peculiar usage is based upon the political equality of the Greeks, and more particularly that of the Athenians. Thus οὐκ ἄν ἀποφεύγοις τὴν νόσον, you will not escape the disease, (literally, possibly you might not escape)—λέγοις ἄν & δεῖ λέγειν, speak what you ought to speak, (literally, perhaps you might speak).
- (C.) The optative is also used for the expression of a wish, (for a wish is the idea that something can be, united with the desire that it may be), sometimes accompanied by the particles εἰ, εἴθε, εἰ γάρ, ὥς, and sometimes without them: as, καλήν σοι θεοὶ διδοῖεν τύχην, may the gods give you prosperity.—ὦ παῖ, γένοιο πατρός εὐνυχέστερος, O my son, may you be more fortunate than your father.

Use of the Indicative, Subjunctive, and Optative in Dependent Propositions.

PRELIMINARY REMARKS.

Use of the Particle ἄν.

1. The particle ἄν, is synonymous with the Epic κs or κsν, and imparts to the verbal expression, which it accompanies, the accessory idea of conditionality, i. e. it denotes that the thing of which we discourse is conceived as dependent upon certain circumstances. The use of this particle is therefore extremely various, as it is applied in all cases where a thing or an idea is not to be expressed absolutely and of itself, but as dependent on contingencies, consequently as uncertain, doubtful, difficult, probable, or generally as possible. Hence ἄν is frequently associated with other particles, to limit or modify their sense. On the use of ἄν in independent propositions, the following must be observed :

(A.) In connection with the optative, with which in the common language it is most frequently employed, ἄν denotes that the mere idea expressed by the optative is also conceived in a relation to reality, i. e. as realizing itself under certain circumstances; thus, οὐκ ἀνασχοίμην, I cannot possibly endure (the enduring appears to me impossible in and of itself, without any regard being paid to existing circumstances, or the operation of contingencies); on the contrary, οὐκ ἄν ἀνασχοίμην, I should not endure, (the circumstances would not be of that kind that I should endure).

(B.) In connection with the subjunctive, ἄν is used in simple propositions only by Homer and the poets, to denote that an event will be realised merely through existing circumstances; thus, ἥς ὑπεροπλήσει τάχ' ἄν ποιε θυμόν δλέσση. (Hom. Il. α, 205.) through his pride it will happen that he will soon lose his life, (δλέσσει would express the loss of life as a positive assertion without regard to existing circumstances; but δλέσση ἄν implies that the loss of life is conceived in a purely objective sense, and as the consequence of pride.)—In like manner, (Il. α, 182.) τὴν μὲν ἐγὼ σὺν νῆϊ τ' ἐμῇ καὶ ἐμοῖς ἐτάροισιν πέμψω, ἐγὼ δὲ κ' ἄγω. Here the future πέμψω designates the positive subjective assertion, but ἄγω κs a case brought about by circumstances. The English translation of such a subjunctive by the future, by no means actually corresponds to the true sense, but a nearer approximation to it is furnished by the construction it will happen that.

- (C.) In the connection of ἄν with the indicative, a distinction must be made between the different cases : 1. ἄν is only very seldom joined to the indicative of the present and future, to soften the positive assertion and to invest it with an air of uncertainty ; as, οὐκ οἶδ' ἄν, I dont exactly know, I dont rightly know.—οἶμαι ἄν, I should suppose—κινδυνεύει ἄν εἶναι, It would seem to be.—In this manner Homer frequently uses ἄν in connection with the future, as (Il. χ', 42.) τάχα κέν ἐ κύνες καὶ γῦπες ἔδονται. Soon perhaps will the dogs and vultures devour him.—(Il. δ', 76.) καὶ κέ τις ᾧδ' ἐρέει, and thus perhaps some one will say.—Also ἄν sometimes appears with the indicative of other tenses in the same signification ; as, (Xen. Cyrop. 7. 1. 38.) ἔνθα δὴ ἔγνω ἄν τις δσου ἄξιον εἶη τὸ φιλεῖσθαι ἄρχοντα ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχομένων. Then one might see, &c. 2. With the indicative of preterites, particularly of the imperfect and the aorists, ἄν denotes that an action has not taken place merely once and at the same definite period, but as often as circumstances occurred to occasion it ; hence in English translation we either express it by adverbs, as generally, usually, or by verbs to be wont, to use, or, according to an idiom, not unlike the Greek, by would ; as, οὕτως ἔλθοι ἐς ἄλλην οἰκίαν, ἀπελαύνει ἄν. As often as he came to any other dwelling, he used to be driven away.—εἴτ' οὐκ εἶχον ἄν, then again I should have nothing, used to have nothing.
- (D.) Sometimes ἄν is joined even to the imperative, to soften the positiveness of the expression contained therein ; as, ἔδρασ' ἄν, εἰ τοῦτ' ἔσθ' ἄν, I should have done it, that you may well suppose.
- (E.) When ἄν is joined to the infinitive or participle, the event expressed in the verbal form is represented by it as conditional and merely probable ; as, ἐνδύμιζον ῥαδίως ἄν σφίσι τ' ἄλλα προσχωρήσειν, they thought that the rest would readily surrender to them.—ἐδρίσκω τρύτην ἄν μόνην γενομένην τῶν μελλόντων κινδύνων ἀποτροπήν, I find that this would be the only way of averting the dangers which threaten.

Interchanged use of the Indicative, Subjunctive, and Optative.

IN

SUPPLEMENTAL PROPOSITIONS.

1. The particles made use of for assigning the time and cause, are the following: (a) for both the time and cause; ἐπει, ἐπειδή, ὥς, ὅτε.—(b) for the time alone; ἡνίκα, ὁπότε, ἕως.—(c) for the cause alone; ὅτι, διότι.

2. The following are general rules for the construction of these propositions:

(A.) The Indicative always stands in direct discourse after temporal and causal particles, when the time and cause are assigned unconditionally and as facts; as οὐ δοκεῖ σοι τόδε προνοίας ἔργῳ λοικέναι, τὸ, ἐπεὶ ἀσθενὴς ἐστὶν ἡ ὄψις, βλεφάροις αὐτὴν θυρῶσαι; does not this appear to you to resemble a work of Providence, since the sight is weak, (a fact), the guarding it with eye-lids like the doors of a house?

(B.) The Subjunctive is used in a supplemental proposition, when this proposition appears as conditional, and the temporal and causal particles then receive ἄν; as, Κύρος ὑπέσχετο, ἀνδρὶ ἐκάστῳ δώσειν πέντε ἀργυροῦ μνᾶς, ἐπὰν εἰς Βαβυλῶνα ἤκωσι, Cyrus promised that he will give each soldier five minæ of silver, whenever they arrive at Babylon.

(C.) The Optative stands in a supplemental proposition, when mere ideas and conceptions are assigned, consequently for the most part after temporal particles, to express not an individual circumstance, but cases of frequent recurrence; as, ταῦτα λέγων ὁ Σωκράτης οὐ μόνον τοὺς συνόντας ἐδόκει ποιεῖν, ὁπότε ὑπὸ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ὁρῶντο, ἀπέχεσθαι τῶν ἀνοσίων καὶ ἀδίκων ἔργων, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὁπότε ἐν ἐρημίᾳ εἶεν, ἐπειπερ ἡγῆσαιντο, μηδὲν ἄν ποτε, ὦν πράττοιεν, θεοὺς διαλαθεῖν. By dint of such remarks as these, Socrates appeared to make those, who associated with him, abstain from unholy and unjust actions, not only when they might be seen, (i. e. as often as they were seen), by men, but also when they might be, (i. e. as often as they were) in private, since they would entertain the conviction, (i. e. would always remain under the impression) that nothing of the things which they might do, (i. e. from time to time do) would ever for a moment, (force of the aorist) escape the observation of the gods.

Of the use of the Indicative, Subjunctive, and Optative in Transitive Propositions.

When a transitive verb has for its object a clause or part of a sentence, this clause is denominated a transitive proposition. Thus, ἔλεγον ὅτι Κῦρος ἐπέθνηκει. They reported that Cyrus was dead. Here the clause ὅτι Κῦρος ἐπέθνηκει is the object (or accusative) of the verb ἔλεγον. This clause, therefore, is called a transitive proposition, because it is reached by the action of the principal verb.

A near relation of a similar nature obtains when we take into consideration the aim or intention of an action. For here the action of the verb is evidently conceived as directed in its effect upon the intention. Thus, λέγω, ἵνα εἰδῇς. I speak, that you may know. Here the intention of the action is expressed by ἵνα εἰδῇς, and the action itself, as expressed by the verb λέγω, is evidently directed in its effect upon the intention of that action as expressed by the following clause.

Hence arise two kinds of transitive propositions, 1. Transitive Propositions for assigning the Object: and 2. Transitive Propositions for assigning the Intention.

I. Transitive Propositions for assigning an Object.

General Rule. These transitive propositions invariably take the indicative when any thing is expressed unconditionally or adduced as a fact; on the contrary, they have the optative, when we merely assign the opinions and ideas of others: thus, Πάντες ὁμολογοῦσιν ὡς αἱ μάχαι κρῖνονται μᾶλλον ταῖς ψυχαῖς, ἢ ταῖς τῶν σωμάτων ῥώμαϊς. Here κρῖνονται, the indicative, marks an actual and acknowledged fact.—Τισσαφέρνης διάβαλλει τὸν Κῦρον πρὸς τὸν ἀδελφὸν, ὡς ἐπιβουλεύει αὐτῷ, (that he was plotting against him). Here the optative ἐπιβουλεύει is used because it was the opinion of Tissaphernes (sincere or not is immaterial) that Cyrus was plotting against his brother.

In oblique discourse, ὅτι and ὡς are usually indeed followed by the optative; but even here the indicative enters when actual events and positive assertions are assigned. Thus, If I say, ἔλεγες, ὅτι Ζεὺς τὴν δικαιοσύνην ἔπεμψε, I indicate that I myself also believe that Jupiter did so: but if I say ἔλεγες ὅτι Ζεὺς τὴν δικαιοσύνην πέμψει, I merely state the supposition of him who said so, whether true or false.

Moreover, the indicative often stands in oblique discourse on account of the person being introduced as speaking himself, or being conceived as speaking himself in the midst of the narrative ; as, Θηραμένης συμβουλευόν τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἔλεξεν, ὥς χρὴ πείθεσθαι Λακεδαιμονίοις καὶ τὰ τεῖχῃ πειριαιρεῖν. Here χρὴ, the indicative, introduces Theramenes as speaking himself.

II. Transitive Propositions for assigning the Intention.

General Rule. The particles made use of for assigning the intention are ἵνα, ὅπως, ὅφρα, ὥς, ἕως, and μή. These intentional particles are joined with the subjunctive when the verb of the principal proposition (the leading verb in the sentence) is a present or future ; on the contrary, with the optative, when it is a past tense.

Illustration. The following remarks will serve to establish the truth of this rule. The intention is an idea, existing in the mind of the agent, of a result to be effected by the action. The accomplishment of the intention is made strictly conditional by the action, that is, the intention can only be accomplished by the action. Hence the intention really exists only so long as the action either is performed or is to be performed, and must therefore in this case, after a present and future, be expressed in the subjunctive. But if the action has been performed, the intention no longer exists, but the idea only remains that it was performed with a certain intention, and therefore in this case, after a past tense, the optative must be used.

Examples under this rule. Λέγω ἵνα εἰδῇς, I speak, that you may know.—ἔλεξα ἵνα εἰδείης, I spoke that you might know.—περιμενῶ, ἕως ἀνοιχθῇ τὸ δεσμωτήριον, I will wait until the prison be opened.—περιμενόμεν ἕως ἀνοιχθῆι τὸ δεσμωτήριον, we waited until the prison should be opened.

Use of the Indicative, Subjunctive and Optative, in Relative Propositions.

1. The words made use of for designating relation are the relative pronouns ὅς, ὅστις, οἷος, ὅσος, &c. and relative particles, as οὗ, ὅπου, ἐνθα, ἐνθεν, ὅθεν, ὅποι, ὅπως, ὥς, ἵνα, &c.

General Rule. The Indicative enters the relative proposition in all cases wherein any thing is expressed unconditionally and as a fact, even in narrative also, where the optative might be expected ; the Optative is used to designate a mere idea, chiefly therefore in assigning not a single and definite, but a frequently repeated, action; the Subjunctive stands after relatives in mentioning present and future things, to express an assumed case or existing intention; and, in this last case, the particle ἄν, in Attic prose always, and generally with Epic writers and the Attic poets, accompanies the relative.

Hence we deduce the following observations. 1. The Indicative stands in the relative proposition, when the verb of the principal proposition is a preterite, present, or future, and an event is expressed as definite and unconditional. 2. The Optative stands in the relative proposition after a preterite, present, or future, to express mere thoughts and ideas: 3. The Subjunctive can only stand after the present, or future, and that under the above-mentioned conditions

Imperative.

1. The Imperative denotes that the action expressed in the verb is required to take place or not to take place; consequently that, in the conception of the person requiring, it appears as necessary.

2. Hence in Greek, as in other languages, the imperative is used in accosting, requesting, commanding, exhorting, &c. Finally, it stands in the present when the action is conceived as continuous or permanent; and in the aorist, when as transient or momentaneous. Hence the imperative of the present occurs most frequently when an action already begun is to be continued; the imperative of the aorist, when one not yet begun is to be undertaken; as Θάρρῃς, ὦ φίλε! keep up your spirits my friend!—Ἀκούσον τολύπῃ, ὦ Κροῖσε, hear then, O Cræsus.

3. If the requisition is to be expressed negatively, as a prohibition, or dissuasion, the negative μή must always be used. In this case also the imperative stands in the present, when the action is conceived as permanent, consequently always when, being begun, it is to be discontinued. On the contrary, instead of the imperative of the aorist, which should enter when the action is conceived as momentaneous, therefore principally, when an action not yet begun is to be omitted, the Attics, at least, commonly use the subjunctive of the aorist: thus, μή μοι ἀντιλέγῃς refers to the contradiction having already begun: “Dont be contradicting me:” whereas μή μοι ἀντιλέξῃς is used when the contradiction is to be prevented. So μή κλέπτῃς and μή κλέψῃς, the former a general dissuasion from theft, the latter in reference to a particular and individual case.

4. The Greeks form also an imperative of the perfect. Such an imperative denotes either a permanent state; or it refers merely to the recollection of some past occurrence, and is used in assuming that a past action has been performed at a different time or in a different manner from what is really the fact; or it indicates generally a perfectly finished action.

5. The imperative following οἶσθ' ὅτι, οἶσθ' ὅ, οἶσθ' ὥς, is to be explained elliptically in the same way as the English constructions of this kind, wherein the imperative, which follows in the Greek, precedes; as, οἶσθ' ὃ δρᾶσον; do, you know what? — οἶσθ' ὥς ποιήσον; make it, you know how?

The Infinitive Mood has already been considered under the Syntax, to which the Student is therefore referred.

PROSODY.

PROSODY, in its common acceptation, treats of the quantity of syllables in the construction of verses. In the ancient Grammarians, προσωδία applies also to accent.

The vowels ε, ο, are naturally short; η and ω naturally long; but α, ι, υ, are called doubtful, being long in some syllables, and short in others. The quantity of syllables is determined by various methods:—

1. POSITION.

A short vowel, or a doubtful vowel, before two consonants or a double letter, is almost always long; as δευιη δε κλαγγη, αὐτὰρ ἔμς Ζεύς κατὰ φρένα, πολλὰς δ' ἰφθίμους. Hom.

This rule holds good in epic poetry, except in some proper names, and in words which could not be used in any other situation in the verse. The following exceptions to the rule must be attended to in scanning the Dramatic writers.

1. A short vowel before a soft mute, (π, κ, τ,) or an aspirate mute, (φ, χ, θ,) followed by a liquid, (λ, μ, ν, ρ,) and also before the middle mutes (β, γ, δ,) followed by the liquid ϕ, is much rather left short than lengthened by the Attic poets.

2. A short vowel before a middle mute, followed by λ, μ, ν, is almost always long. In Euripides such syllables are always long; but in Æschylus, Sophocles, and Aristophanes, they are sometimes short.

A short vowel before two consonants, neither of which is a liquid, or before two liquids, is always long; as, ὅς πολλὰ δὴ καὶ τῶνδε γενναίῳ πατρὶ. Eurip.

A short vowel is sometimes made long before a single liquid, which should be pronounced as if written double; as ἔλαβε pronounced ἐλλαβε; ἐλώρια pronounced ἐλλώρια.

A short vowel ending a foot, before ῥ in the beginning of the word following, is sometimes lengthened in the dramatic poets; as, τοῦτ' ἔστιν ἤδη τοῦργον εἰς ἐμὲ ῥέπον.

σὺ δ' οὐκ ἀνέξει; χρεῖν σ' ἐπὶ ῥητοῖς ἄρα.

Eurip. Supp. 461.

This license is of course employed only when the short syllable is the last of a foot: when it is the first of a foot it is left short (since even in the odd places of the verse an iambus is preferable to a spondee); but that the lengthening depends on the power of the inceptive ῥ, and not merely on the force of the ictus metricus, is evident from the fact that a short syllable cannot be so lengthened, in the iambic trimeter, before any other single consonant.

A short syllable is often made long, when the next word begins with a digammated vowel: as ὅς οἶ, for Φοι, Hom.; μέλανος οἶνοιο, for Φοῖνοιο, Hom.; οὐδὲ οὐς, for Φοῦς, Hom. In many instances, however, there is no need of having recourse to the insertion of the digamma, but the lengthening of a short syllable may be explained by the doctrine of the cæsural pause, that is, the pressure of the voice on the syllable in question, or, as it is sometimes called, the ictus metricus. (vid. Observations on the Cæsura.)

2. ONE VOWEL BEFORE ANOTHER.

One vowel before another does not suffer elision, as in Latin, at the end of a word, unless an apostrophe is substituted. (For farther remarks on elision, see in general, Appendix B.)

One vowel before another or a diphthong is short, unless lengthened by poetic licence; as πολυδάκτος πολέμοιο, Hom. Ταλαῖονιδας ἀνάκτορ, Hom.

A long vowel or a diphthong is mostly short when the next word begins with a vowel; as ὥρῃ ἐν σταρινῇ διτε, Hom. ἡμετέρῃ ἐνὶ οἴκῳ, ἐν. Hom.

Obs. A long vowel or a diphthong may be considered as consisting of two short vowels. If the latter is supposed to suffer elision, the former will of course remain short ; as οἰκο' ἐν.

3. CONTRACTION.

A contracted syllable is always long, as ῥοις, ῥοις ; ἱερὸς, τρός.

Two successive vowels, forming two syllables, even in different words, frequently coalesce in poetry ; thus θεὸς becomes a monosyllable, χρυσέω a dissyllable, and in ἡ λάθει', ἡ οὐκ ἐνόησεν, Hom. ἡ οὐκ are pronounced as one syllable (youk.)

4. COMPOSITION AND DERIVATION.

Words compounded and derived follow the quantity of their primitives, as ἄτιμος from τιμή, φῦγή from ἐφύγον.

Α, privative, is short, as ἄτιμος ; but long in ἄθανατος.

Αρι, ερι, βρι, δυσ, ζα, are short, as ζᾶθος.

Penultima of Nouns and Adjectives increasing in the Genitive.

GENERAL RULE.

The doubtful vowels in the penult. of Nouns and Adjectives increasing in the Genitive, are for the most part short.

Α is short, as σώματος. Except in

The Doric Genitive, as Ἀτρεΐδαο, μουσαῶν for μουσαῶων.

Κερας, κέρατος ; (vid. page 42.) κράς, κράτος ; ψάρ, ψαρός ; θώραξ, θώρακος ; ἱέραξ, ἱέρακος ; κόρδαξ, κόρδακος ; νέαξ, νέακος ; ῥήξ, ῥήγος ; σύρφαξ, σύρφακος ; Φαλαξ, Φαλακος ; and, in general, all Nouns ending in αξ pure, are long.

OF METRES.

A metre, or Syzygy, properly consists of two feet.

The principal metres are nine ; they take their name from the appropriate or prevalent feet ; viz. 1. Iambic. 2. Trochaic. 3. Anapæstic. 4. Dactylic. 5. Choriambic. 6. Antispastic. 7. Ionic a majore. 8. Ionic a minore. 9. Pæonic.

Besides these, there are Asynartetes, or Inconnectibles, almost innumerable.

1. Monometer is formed of one metre, or two feet.

2. Dimeter is composed of two metres, or four feet.

3. Trimeter, called also Senarius, consists of three metres, or six feet.

4. Tetrameter consists of four metres, or eight feet.

Some kinds of verse are measured by single feet ; as Pentameter, which consists of five feet ; and Hexameter, consisting of six feet.

The following kinds of verse are measured by double feet ; viz. Iambic, Trochaic, and Anapæstic.

Verses from their ending are denominated Acatalectic, Catalectic, Brachycatalectic, and Hypercatalectic.

A verse is called Acatalectic, which contains the exact number of feet, without deficiency or redundancy.

Catalectic verse is, where a syllable is wanting at the end.

Brachycatalectic verse is, where two syllables are wanting Hypercatalectic verse is, where there is a redundancy of one or two syllables at the end.

The last syllable of a verse is common, except in Iambic, Trochaic, Anapæstic, and greater Ionic.

DACTYLIC MEASURE.

1. Hexameters.

Hexameter, or Heroic verse, consists of six feet, the fifth of which is generally a Dactyl, and the sixth always a Spondee; each of the others may be either a Dactyl or a Spondee at the Poet's pleasure; as “Ως εἰποῦς ὧ|τρυνε μέ|ρος καὶ | θύμον ἐ|καστου, Hom.

Sometimes in a solemn, majestic, or mournful description, the Spondee take place of the Dactyl in the fifth foot; from which circumstance, such lines are called Spondaic; as “ὦ Ἀχιλλεῦ, κέλε|αι με Δι|ι φίλε | μυθή|σασθαι, Hom.

2. Pentameters.

This verse consists of five feet. The first and second may be either a Dactyl or Spondee at pleasure; the third must always be a Spondee; the fourth and fifth Anapæsts; as Ὅτε πο|δῶν ἄρ|ε|της οὐ|τε παλαιο|μοσύνης, Tyrtaeus.

This is the more correct mode of scanning Pentameters. Many, however, prefer the following method; viz. the first two feet as before; then a semifoot or long syllable; and lastly, two Dactyls, followed by another semifoot; as Ὅτε πο|δῶν ἄρ|ε|της || οὐτε πα|λαιμοσού|νης.

IAMBIC MEASURE.

Of Iambics there are three kinds: Dimeters, consisting of two measures, or four feet; Trimeters, of three measures, or six feet; and Tetrameters, of four measures, or eight feet.

The Iambic verse at first admitted the Iambus only: as may be seen in the following verse of Archilochus, its inventor;

Πᾶτῃρ | Ἀνκᾶμβ || ἄ, πει|δν εκ || φρᾶσῶ | λῶγδν. ||

But as this was not only ungrateful to the ear, on account of the frequent recurrence of the same foot, but also difficult with respect to composition, the Spondee was admitted into the odd places, i. e. the first, third, and fifth, and brought with them its resolutions, the Dactyl and Anapæst, but under these limitations; the Anapæst is used only in the first foot, (except it be an Anapæst of proper names, in which case every foot except the last receives an Anapæst,) and the Dactyl only in the first and third. The Tribrach, however, which is only an Iambus resolved, is found in every place except the last, which is always a pure Iambic. Hence the following rules may be deduced:—

1. The odd feet admit of a greater latitude than the even, for the latter admit only the Iambus and its resolution the Tribrach.

2. The Tribrach is admissible into the five first feet; the Spondee into the first, third, and fifth.

3. The Dactyl is admissible into the first and third places; but observe that it is more common in the third than in the first place of the verse.

4. The Anapæst is admissible into the first place only, except it be an Anapæst of proper names. For the introduction of certain proper names, an Anapæst may be admitted into any place except the last: but observe that the whole Anapæst must be contained in the same word, and, generally, so that its two short syllables may be inclosed between two long in the same word. The Anapæst admissible into the first place need not, however, be included in the same word, when the line begins either with an article, or with a preposition followed immediately by its case. (Monk. ad Soph. Elect. 4. Mus. Crit. vol. 1. p. 63.)

Hence the following is the Iambic Trimeter scale.

| 1st. Metre. | | 2d. Metre. | | 3d. Metre. | |
|-------------|-------|------------|-------|------------|-----|
| 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 |

| P.N. — — — | — — — | — — — | — — — | — — — | |

The most frequent Cæsural pause in this species of verse, is in the middle of the third foot; as κίρκοι πελειῶν || οὐ μάκρην λελειμμένοι.

This is called the Penthemimeral Cæsura, because it falls after the fifth half-foot. The Hepthemimeral Cæsura, which is in the middle of the fourth foot, is also of frequent occurrence; as ἦκω νεκρῶν κευθμῶνα || καὶ σκότου πύλας.

There are, however, so many verses with no Cæsura at all, that it seems useless to enlarge here on this subject. Sometimes a line occurs which has neither of these ; but the Cæsura takes place at the end of the third foot in case of an elision : or, with γ' , δ' , θ' , μ' , σ' , τ' , annexed to the end of the third foot. This is called by Porson the quasi-cæsura ; as,

Ἴθ' ὃ βροτῶν ἄριστ', || ἀνόρθωσον πόλιν.

Καίτοι νιν οὐ κείνος γ' || ὁ δυστηνὸς πόντε.

The first of these lines is an instance of the first species, and the second of the latter.

Occasionally the quasi-cæsura occurs without an elision at the end of the third foot. This was supposed by some, though erroneously, to express great agitation of mind in the speaker, and to represent that agitation : though a line in the Œdipus Tyrannus of Sophocles seems calculated to support the truth of that supposition ;

Ἦ Ζεῦ, τί μου δρᾶσαι || βεβούλευσαι περὶ. Œ. R. 738.

The last particular worth noticing is called the pause by Porson, and it is under the following circumstances. If a line end with a word or words forming a cretic (— ~ —), and a word of more than one syllable precede the cretic, the fifth foot of that line must be an iambus : as Σωτῆρι βάλῃ, λαμπρὸς ὥσπερ ὕμνῳ. Œ. R. 81.

Here ὥσπερ βλέμῳ would have vitiated the metre.

3. TROCHAIC MEASURE.

The Catalectic Tetrameter is the only species of Trochaic used by the tragedians in regular continued systems ; such as, θᾶσσον | ἦ μ' εἰ || χρεῖν προῖβατ' ὦν || ἰκδμ | ἦν δτ' || ἄστει | ος.

This metre at first composed the whole of the dialogue, but it gradually gave place to the Iambic Trimeter : and accordingly we find it but seldom used in the remaining Greek tragedians.

A Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic verse consists of seven feet and a Catalectic syllable, which feet are properly all Trochees. In every place, however, the Trochee may be resolved into a Tribrach.

This verse admits also a Spondee in the even places, that is, the second, fourth, and sixth, which Spondee may be resolved into an Anapæst.

In every place, except the fourth and seventh, a Dactyl of proper names is admitted, which should be contained in the same word, or so distributed that the two short syllables of the proper name be joined to the final long syllable of the preceding word. Hence the following is the scale of the Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic.

| 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 |
|------|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| — | — | — | — | — | — | — | — |
| — | — | — | — | — | — | — | — |
| — | — | — | — | — | — | — | — |
| — | — | — | — | — | — | — | — |
| N.P. | — | — | — | — | — | — | — |

The Cæsural pause in this species of verse uniformly takes place after the fourth foot, or at the end of the second metre.

The Trochaic Tetrameter is easily reducible to the Iambic measure, if a Cretic, or its equivalent, is removed from the beginning of it.

4. ANAPÆSTIC MEASURE.

This species of Measure admits Anapæsts, Dactyls, and Spondees, and is commonly Dimeters of four, and sometimes Monometers of two, feet. Of the former the strictest is the Dimeter Catalectic, called a Parœmiac, because proverbs, παροιμιαί, were sometimes written in that metre, which closes the system.

Anapæstics may contain an indefinite series of Metres. Any number of these constitutes a system, which may be considered as extended without any distinction of verses, or, in other words, may be scanned as one verse. It has, generally, for the sake of convenience, been divided into regular Dimeters, which of course can admit no license in the final syllable, and which must always be followed by a Parœmiac. But as in this mode of division it must often happen that a single Metre remains before the final Parœmiac, that Metre is placed in a separate verse, and is termed a base, although it would be perhaps more properly called a supplement.

The only restraint in Anapæstics is, that an Anapæst must not follow a Dactyl, to prevent the concurrence of too many short syllables; that each Metre must end with a word; and that the third foot of the Parœmiac must be an Anapæst.

The most important rule of all in this metre, is that established by Bentley, in his dissertation on the Epistles of Phalaris, viz. that the last syllable of each Anapæstic verse is not common, as in Hexameters, &c. but that all the verses are considered as connected together in one continued succession till the versus Parœmiacus finishes the whole, the last syllable of which may be long or short.

The following are the scales of some of the Anapæstic Measures :

CÆSURA.

(From Buttman's Grammar.—Everett's translation.)

1. Cæsura is properly the division of a Metrical, or Rhythmical connection, by the ending of a word. There is accordingly, 1st. a Cæsura of the Foot, 2d. a Cæsura of the Rhythm, 3d. a Cæsura of the Verse, which must be carefully distinguished, as the word Cæsura, without qualification, is generally applied to all three.

2. The Cæsura of the Foot, in which a word terminates in the middle of a Foot, is the least important, and without any great influence on the Verse, as the division into Feet is in a great degree arbitrary.

3. The Cæsura of the Rhythm, is that in which the *Arsis*¹ falls on the last syllable of a word, whereby the Arsis is separated from the Thesis. Such a final syllable receives, by the Ictus, a peculiar emphasis ; so that the Poets often place a short syllable in this situation, which becomes long thereby, and sustains alone the Arsis. This lengthening by Cæsura, as it is called, is particularly familiar in Epic poetry ; as,

1. That part of the Foot which receives the Ictus, the stress of the Rhythm, (the beat of the Time), is called Arsis, or Elevation; the rest of the Foot is called Thesis or Depression. The natural Arsis is the long syllable of the Foot; so that the Spondee and Tribrach leave it alike uncertain where the Arsis falls.

Τηλέμαχῃ | ποῖον σε ἔπος φύγεν ἕρκος ὀδόντων ;
 Αὐτὰρ ἔπειτ' αὐτοῖσι βέλδς | ἐχέπενυκὲς ἐφίεις.

As this usage is principally observed in the Epic Poets, and as in Hexameters the Arsis is always on the beginning of the Foot, the Cæsura of the Rhythm and the Cæsura of the Foot coincide. This has led to the erroneous doctrine, that the Cæsura of the Foot lengthened the syllable.

4. The Cæsura of the Verse exists, when the termination of a word falls on a place in the Verse, where one Rhythm agreeable to the ear closes and another begins. The estimation of this belongs to the minuter acquaintance with versification. In a more limited sense, by the Cæsura of the Verse is understood such a Cæsura in certain places in the Verse, one of which is necessary to every good Verse of the kind. This is what is meant when it is said of a Verse that it has no Cæsura. Whereupon may be remarked,

1st. That some kinds of Verses have their Cæsura on a fixed place. Of this kind among the foregoing Verses are, 1st. the Pentameter, which requires a word to end in the middle of the centre Spondee. This Cæsura can never be omitted. 2d. The Iambic Anapestic, and Trochaic Tetrameter Catalectic, which all have their natural Cæsura at the end of the fourth Foot. This Cæsura may be neglected.

2d. Other kinds of Verse have more than one place for the Cæsura, the choice of which is left to the poet. One, however, generally predominates over the rest. In Hexameters this is commonly in the middle of the third Foot, and either directly after its Arsis, as

Μῆνιν ἄειδε θεὰ, | Πηληϊάδεω Ἀχιλλῆος
 Οὐκ ἄρα μῶνον ἔην | ἐρίδων' γένος ἄλλ' ἐπὶ γαῖαν, or in the middle of the Thesis of a Dactyl,

* Ἄνδρα μοι ἔννεπε, Μοῦσα, | πολύτροπον, δς μάλα πολλά.

The first species is called the masculine or male Cæsura, and the second the female or Trochaic Cæsura. It rarely happens that both are absent from the Foot. Should they be wanting, however, they are usually supplied by the male Cæsura, in the second and fourth Feet, and if both be combined, the Verse is the more harmonious ; as ἀλλὰ νέον | συνορνύμεναι | κίνυντο φάλαγγες.

APPENDIX—A

DIGAMMA.

I.

1. That ancient language, out of which arose the Greek, the Latin, and the various branches of Teutonic, had, both in the beginning of words, and between vowels in their internal structure, many consonants, which, in process of time, were partly altogether lost, and partly weakened into aspirate or vowel sounds. A portion of the Greek diphthongs proceeded from this attenuation or rejection.

2. The sounds called Labial ($\pi, \beta, \phi, f, v,$) and Guttural ($\kappa, \gamma, \chi, ch, q, qu,$) were of most frequent occurrence.

3. The attenuation of the gutturals displays itself in Quoi $\sigma\iota$, Quam $\alpha\nu$, Qualis $\acute{\alpha}\lambda\acute{\iota}\kappa\omicron\varsigma$, $\eta\lambda\acute{\iota}\kappa\omicron\varsigma$, &c. (And here, too, the transition from guttural to labial is visible. Thus the oldest shape had probably both, as in QVoi; when the sound was softened, the guttural dropped out, and Voi, that is, $\Phi\sigma\iota$ ($\text{\AE}ol.$) remained; while, in the next stage, the guttural reveals again its mitigated form in the aspirate of $\sigma\iota$.)

4. But in labial sounds, at the beginning or in the middle of words, before vowels and even consonants, the ancient tongue was still more rich. The strongest of labial sounds is heard in the Latin F, which, in its figure and its place in the alphabet, answers to the Greek digamma—a letter, that seems to have agreed with F in its early pronunciation also, before that was exchanged for the softer sound of W.

5. This robust sound was attenuated.

a. In Latin chiefly before e and i; thus Festa, festis, Felia, finum, became Vesta, vestis, Velia, vinum.

b. In Greek it passed frequently into ϕ or β ; thus $\phi\rho\acute{\alpha}\tau\rho\alpha$ for $\text{\textsf{F}}\rho\acute{\alpha}\tau\rho\alpha$, the form in the Elean inscription, $\phi\rho\acute{\upsilon}\gamma\alpha\nu\omicron\nu$ (Lat. frutex), &c.; $\beta\rho\eta\tau\omega\rho$, $\beta\rho\alpha\delta\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\nu\tau\omicron\varsigma$, and similar words in $\text{\AE}olic$; $\beta\rho\acute{\epsilon}\mu\omega$ (Lat. fremo), &c.

6. It disappeared altogether, at least in the majority of dialects, from those words in which the $\text{\AE}olians$ substituted β , as $\rho\eta\tau\omega\rho$, $\text{\textsf{P}}\alpha\delta\acute{\alpha}\mu\alpha\nu\tau\omicron\varsigma$, $\rho\alpha\delta\acute{\iota}\nu\omicron\varsigma$ ($\text{\AE}ol.$ $\beta\rho\alpha\delta\acute{\iota}\nu\omicron\varsigma$), $\rho\acute{\omicron}\delta\omicron\nu$ ($\text{\AE}ol.$ $\beta\rho\acute{\omicron}\delta\omicron\nu$); and from some others, as $\rho\acute{\iota}\nu$, $\rho\eta\gamma\gamma\upsilon\mu\iota$ (Lat. frango), $\rho\eta\zeta\iota\varsigma$ ($\text{\textsf{F}}\rho\eta\zeta\iota\varsigma$ in Alcæus, according to the authority of Trypho), the verb $\eta\nu$, $\eta\varsigma$, η , "said," (otherwise only attenuated under the form of $\phi\eta\nu$, $\phi\eta\varsigma$, $\phi\eta$, or, in the Macedonian dialect, $\beta\eta\nu$, $\beta\eta\varsigma$, $\beta\eta$).

7. As QVoi, QValis, show a guttural in connexion with a labial, so, by a comparison of the forms $\phi\lambda\acute{\alpha}\nu$ and $\theta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\nu$, $\phi\eta\rho$ and $\theta\eta\rho$, $\phi\lambda\acute{\iota}\beta\omega$ and $\theta\lambda\acute{\iota}\beta\omega$, $\phi\lambda\acute{\iota}\alpha$ and $\theta\lambda\acute{\iota}\alpha$ (Etyim. Mag. under βλιμίζω and φλιά), we discover the labial sound before a dental in the ancient constitution of certain words. Thus the above were certainly $\text{\textsf{F}}\theta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\nu$, $\text{\textsf{F}}\theta\eta\nu$ (the Etym. M. admits φθῆρ and θῆρ, p. 451. l. 13.), $\text{\textsf{F}}\theta\lambda\acute{\iota}\beta\omega$, $\text{\textsf{F}}\theta\lambda\acute{\iota}\alpha$; as also $\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\varsigma$, $\acute{\epsilon}\delta\omicron\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon\nu$ were originally $\text{\textsf{F}}\acute{\delta}\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$ (the digamma remains in vereor), $\text{\textsf{F}}\acute{\delta}\epsilon\iota\sigma\epsilon\nu$. Through the abjection of one or the other letter came $\theta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\nu$ or $\text{\textsf{F}}\lambda\acute{\alpha}\nu$, $\phi\lambda\acute{\alpha}\nu$; $\theta\eta\rho$ or $\text{\textsf{F}}\eta\rho$ (Lat. fera), $\phi\eta\rho$, which $\phi\eta\rho$, according to Varro, de Ling. Lat. B. v. p. 45. was further softened by the Ionians into $\beta\eta\rho$. So $\phi\theta\acute{\iota}\sigma\alpha\varsigma$ dropped its θ in the form $\text{\textsf{F}}\acute{\iota}\sigma\alpha\varsigma$, preserved by Hesychius in the gloss $\gamma\acute{\iota}\sigma\alpha\varsigma$, $\phi\theta\epsilon\acute{\iota}\rho\alpha\varsigma$. In the same manner we may explain the $\text{\AE}olic$ forms $\beta\epsilon\lambda\phi\acute{\iota}\nu\epsilon\varsigma$, $\beta\epsilon\lambda\phi\acute{\omicron}\iota$, $\beta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\alpha\rho$ (Etyim. M. under βλήρ), equivalent to $\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\acute{\iota}\nu\epsilon\varsigma$, $\Delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\acute{\omicron}\iota$, $\delta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\alpha\rho$, by reference to the primitive $\beta\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\acute{\iota}\nu\epsilon\varsigma$, $\beta\delta\epsilon\lambda\phi\acute{\omicron}\iota$, $\beta\delta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\alpha\rho$; so that $\beta\delta$ was a middle sound between $\phi\theta$ and $\pi\tau$, as still perceived in $\beta\acute{\omicron}\acute{\delta}\alpha\lambda\lambda\omega$ $\beta\acute{\epsilon}\acute{\delta}\lambda\lambda\omega$, and derivatives from these.

N. B. The German Zwo, i. e. δωω, has a similar combination, with s intervening. In Greek the s first dropped out and δφο passed into δωο, then the φ also vanished and δο produced δωω, δοίω. Thus the Latin is, compared with τις, the Æol. gen. ῥίο, and the German dies-er, shows that the ancient form was τφίς, which, through the abjection of τ or φ, or τφ, became, in different tongues, τις, is, dieser. In the English this the digamma has passed into the aspirate.

8. In the middle of words the digamma commonly passed into υ. In the beginning of a word also the name of Velia displays an υ thus derived. At first, when founded by Phocæans from Ionia, the city's name was Ῥέλιε, but next, as Herodotus writes it, Ῥέλη, and, posterior to his time, this was changed to Βέλεα, and even to Ἑλεα, as it was in Strabo's day. Compare with these varieties the series of its Latin appellations, Felia, Velia, Helia, Elea; and take the whole as a convincing proof of the mutability and final extinction of a labial, once distinguished for a plenitude of life and vigor.

9. Lastly, let the student compare vicus with οἶκος, vinum with οἶνος, βάλλω with ἱάλλω, βάκχος with ἱακχος,—these will make it evident that the digamma and other labials may occasionally be transformed into ο or ι. The apparent change of the digamma, in Greek, into simple gamma, arose from a mere mistake of the grammarians, who wrote the one for the other. Thus, in the Lexicon of Hesychius we find γέαρ, γισχύν, and many more, for the genuine ῥέαρ, ῥισχύν, &c. (in Lat. ver, vis, &c.)

II.

1. The original force of the labial sound in the ancient digamma, and its attenuation in φ, β, or change into ο, ι, or the aspirate, having been explained, we must now, for the better grounding of that which follows, collect from inscriptions, coins, and the hints supplied by old writers, some specimens of those words, that retained the letter under different shapes and in some dialects, while they dropped it in the more common branches of the Greek tongue.

2. Under the first head we find, in the Elean inscription FAAEIΩN i. e. Ῥηλείων (com. Ῥηλείων); FEΠOΣ (com. ἔπος; and thus, in Hesychius, Γίπιν i. e. Ῥίπιν, com. εἰπιν); FAPON Dor. for Ῥέργον (com. ἐργον; compare the German werk and English work); FETAE Dor. for Ῥέτης (com. ἔτης); FETEΛ (com. ἔτεα; compare the Lat. vetus, vetustus): in the Petilian tablet FOIKIAN (com. οἰκίαν; compare the Lat. vicus): in a marble of Orchomenus FIKATI (com. εἰκοσι—compare the Lacedæmonian βείκατι); FEΔATIH (as the name of Elaiea); FETIA (com. ἔτεα).

3. Under the second head, or that of coins, may be mentioned FA, an abbreviation for Ῥαλείων, in harmony with the inscription already noticed, on those of Elis; Ῥαξίων, i. e. Ῥαξίων, i. e. Ἀξίων, on those of Axus in Crete.

4. Thirdly, the hints supplied by ancient lexicographers and others are numerous; thus Βαλικιώτης, says Hesychius, was the Cretan word for συνέφηβος, i. e. Ῥαλικιώτης (com. ἡλικιώτης); Ῥάναξ and Ῥανήρ (com. ἄναξ and ἄνῆρ) are given by Dionysius of Halicarnassus as Æolic forms, and Ῥάναξ is also quoted from Alcman by Apollonius; Ῥέθεν (com. ἔθεν) and Ῥοῖ (com. οἶ) are obtained from Sappho and Alcæus; Ῥείρανα (com. εἰρήνη) is given as Æolic by Priscian; Ῥέντρο and Ῥέννου, i. e. Ῥέντρο and Ῥέννου, are explained; the one in Suidas and Hesychius by ἐλαβεν, ἀνέλαβεν, and the other in Hesychius by λάβε, that is, they are the old digammatized shapes of ἔλετο, ἔλτο, and by the same substitution through which ἦνθε stood for ἦλθε, ἔντο, and of ἔλου, by a similar substitution ἔνου or ἔννου.

To this list many might be added, and its limits might be greatly extended by a comparison of the Greek with the Latin and Teutonic tongues.

III.

1. From that which has been advanced it appears, that the labial sound, universally, but especially in its most remarkable form, the digamma, was retained in those words which dropped it in the Attic and common dialects, not by the Æolians alone, but also by Ionians, Cretans, and Doric tribes. It has been traced likewise in the languages of other nations besides the Greek. The just conclusion is, that this sound was a peculiarity of the old Grecian, and the tongues related to it, and that its alphabetic character was called Æolic only because the Æolians continued to employ it, as the Latins employed their F, in writing, while, with the other Greeks, it served merely for a mark of number.

2. Next to general analogy, the foregoing conclusion is supported by the testimony of ancient authors. Thus, Dionysius Halicar. (Archæol. Rom. p. 16.) treats of the digamma as a letter belonging to the ANCIENT GREEKS, who prefixed it, he says, to most words beginning with a vowel; and Trypho (Mus. Crit. No. 1. p. 34.) affirms that the Ionians and Dorians made use of it as well as the Æolic tribes.

3. The question as to its use by HOMER must, therefore, first be stated without reference to the condition of his poems; thus,

Is it likely that the Homeric poetry, composed in an early period of Greek history, should have possessed a sound belonging to that ancient epoch, and to the original constitution of the Greek tongue?

4. We may be inclined to answer this question in the affirmative, although the sound, in the course of centuries, disappeared from the Homeric poems, and was the more certainly neglected in committing them to writing, inasmuch as in Attica, where this process took place, the alphabetic character of the digamma was out of use.

5. The silence of the ancient grammarians as to Homer's use of the digamma does not make against this opinion. They found their copies of the poet destitute of that character, and thought the less of restoring it to its original rights, from perceiving it to be, in actual use, confined to the Æolic dialect.

6. Still, of a sound that exerted so decided an influence over the quantity and form of words, some traces must have remained in the Homeric poetry, which no lapse of time could efface. And these it should be our next step to discover.

IV.

1. In the list of digammated words we placed and explained γέννον and γένρο, i. e. Γέννου and Γένρο, old forms of ἔλου and ἔλετο. This γένρο or Γένρο is found in Hom. II. N. v. 25, twice in Σ. vv. 476, 477, and in one or two other passages—in all required by the metre, which would be destroyed by throwing the initial letter away.

2. Of the same nature are γδοῦπῃσαν and γδοῦπος, that is ῥδοῦπῃσαν and ῥδοῦπος, old forms of δοῦπῃσαν (ἔδοῦπῃσαν) and δοῦπος. See Hom. II. A. 45. E. 672. H. 411. K. 329. A. 152. M. 235. N. 154. II. 88. Odys. Θ. 465. O. 112. 180.

3. On the same principle may be explained the word ἀφανδάνει, Od. II. 387. Instead of the φ, it should be written with a digamma, ἄφανδάνει, that is, the verb is compounded not of ἀπο and ἀνδάνω a very suspicious derivation, but of ἄφριπτιν and ἄφανδάνω, the old shape of ἀνδάνω.

V.

1. Where the digamma itself has vanished, the traces of its original presence have remained. No where is this so evident as in the pronoun of the third person. Its ancient forms, as was partly pointed out in the list of digammated words, were Fέo, Fέθεν, Foi, Fέ. That this pronunciation endured still at the epoch of the Homeric dialect, is demonstrated first by the negative οὐ, which is so placed before them, as if not an aspirated vowel, but a consonant followed it: thus, ἐπεὶ οὐ ἔθεν ἐστὶ χερειῶν, Il. A. 114. οὐ οἱ ἔπειτα, Il. B. 392. Compare Il. E. 53. P. 410. Od. A. 262. ἐπεὶ οὐ ἔ, Il. Ω. 214. Now, had the pronunciation not been οὐ Fέθεν, οὐ Foi, οὐ Fe, both the pronunciation, and afterwards the orthography, must have been οὐχ ἔθεν, οὐχ οἱ, οὐχ ἔ, like οὐχ ὄσιν, Od. X. 412. οὐχ ἐσπέσθην, Il. Γ. 239. and other similar collocations.

2. Another clear trace of a lost digamma is the absence of the paragogic N before this pronoun in δαῖτε οἱ, Il. E. 4. ὦτ' κέ οἱ αὐθι, Il. Ζ. 281. οἷ κέ ἔ, Il. I. 155. and a number of other passages, which must have been δαῖτεν οἱ, κέν οἱ, κέν ἔ, and so on, had they not been pronounced δαῖτε Foi, κέ Foi, κέ Fe, and the like.

A great many examples of apparent hiatus will be remedied by restoring these words to their original form. See Iliad A. 510. B. 239. X. 142. 172. Od. E. 353. Ζ. 133, &c. The collocation δέ οἱ alone, without elision, occurs in more than one hundred instances.

3. In a great number of instances, also, a short syllable is lengthened before the cases of this pronoun, without the aid of cæsuræ,—a most decisive proof that they had in their beginning a consonant which gave the force of position to preceding syllables.

VI.

1. By similar tests we may prove that many other words had the digamma in Homeric versification, especially such as are known to have had it in the ancient form of the Greek tongue.

- a. When short vowels suffer no elision before them: as αὐτοὺς δὲ ἐλώραι Il. A. 4. (read Fελώoia and compare Γέντο, i. e. Fέντο above); Ἀρτεῖδης τε ἀναξ, Il. A. 7. (read Fάναξ, and compare above Il. 4.)
- b. When in composition, also, neither elision nor crasis takes place: as διαειπέμεν, ἐπιάνδανε, ἀπόσιπε, ἄεργος, ἀαγὴς ἀέκρητι, ἀελπής, ἐκάεργος, θεοειδής, all of which are compounded of words that, according to various authorities, had the digamma in the old language. When verbs, where it appears that they should have the temporal augment, take the syllabic, as ἔαξε, ἔαξαν, Il. H. 270. Od. Γ. 298. ἔαλη, Il. Ν. 408; have the digamma converted into v still remaining; as εἶαδεν, Il. Ξ. 340. P. 647.

2. In this way it may be easily demonstrated, that most of those words, which were pronounced with the digamma in the ancient tongue, retained the same peculiarity in the Homeric language. The non-elision of vowels before them will alone be a sufficient test with reference to many vocables. Thus, with reference to several beginning with α; and particularly, under the words ἄναξ and ἀνάσσω, see the Misc. Crit. of Dawes, p. 141. who has collected all the examples in Homer, and amended those passages which seem to oppose this notion.

3. With reference to words that begin with e, it is necessary to observe:

- a. That the syllabic augment, originally, did not differ from reduplication, (as the forms τετύκοντο, λελαθέσθαι, λελάκοντο, λελαχείν, πεφραδέειν testify), so that digammated verbs would have the digamma prefixed also to their augments. For example, since ἔλπομαι was really Φέλπομαι, and εἰκω Φείκω, therefore 'Οδυσῆα ἔέλπετο, Od. Ψ. 345. should be 'Οδυσῆα ΦεΦέλιπετο: εἰς ὧπα ῥοικε Il. Γ. 158. should be εἰς ὧπα ΦεΦοικε, and so in similar instances.

- b. But since, even in Homer's time, the first consonant of the reduplication was so far shaken, that it appeared only in certain words, and in these not universally, (for we find ἔλαχον, ἔλαχε, &c. as well as λελάχητε, Il. Ψ. 76. λελάχωσι, Il. Η. 800.), so it is manifest that the digamma before ε may be equally affected, and that there is nothing inexplicable in such collocations as δεδάηκας ἔφοικε, Od. Θ. 146. δοσις φοῖ τ' ἐπέφοικε, Il. Γ. 392. and a few more of the same kind.

4. Homer appears to have preserved the digamma in the following words, besides those already mentioned: ἔαρ, ἶδον, οἶδα and other parts of that verb; εἶδος, εἶδωλον, εἴκοσι, ἐκίων, ἐκητι, εἰλέω and its varieties and derivatives; ἐλίσσω, ἐλίζε, ἐννυμι and its derivatives; ἔπος, εἶπον, &c.; ἔδος and δος; ἔργον, ἔοργα, &c.; ἐρέω, ἐρῶ, ἔσπερος, ἔτης, ἔτος, ἡδύς and ἡδομαι; ἦθος, ἶον, ιονθάς, ἴς, ἴσος, ἴσημι, ἴτυς, οἶκος and words connected with it; οἶνος and its derivatives.

5. Again, some words seem to have been digammated by Homer, as to the digamma of which, neither inscriptions nor any other relics of antiquity afford evidence. Such are ἄλις, ἀλῆναι, ἀλῶναι, ἀραιός, ἄρνες, ἄστυ, ἔδνον, ἔθειραι, ἔθνος, ἔκαστος, ἔκηλος, ἦνοψ, Ἥρη, ἡχέω, ἰαχῆ, ἱκμάς, οὐλαμός, οὐλος.

1. But few words, however, are used by the poet, without exception, in the manner required by the digamma, with which they commenced; viz. such as but rarely occur. These are ἀλῶναι, ἀραιός, ἔδνον, ἔθειραι, ἔθνος, ἔσπερος, ἔτης, ἐρῶ, ἦνοψ, ἶον, ἰοδνεφές, ιονθάς, οὐλαμός.

2. In all the rest, either a greater or less number of instances oppose the digamma. But few, however, as we have seen, in the case of ἔο, οἶ, ἔ, &c. Next to these, the digamma is maintained most steadily in the words ἄναξ, ἄστυ, εἶμα, and cognate vocables; and ῥοικε (Φέφοικε or ἔφοικε), a word which occurs in 115 places, only nine of which reject the digamma. With regard to the exceptions, in the case of these words, therefore, it may be received as certain, that the ignorance of later times, when the digamma had been banished from the Homeric poems, and the alterations to which the poems were subjected, were the real causes of their introduction.

3. But in the case of other words, considered as having had the digamma, so many places and such undeniable readings militate against the use of this letter, that the ignorance above alluded to, and the alterations produced by it, will not suffice to clear up all difficulty. Thus, there appears in twenty-five places βοῶπις πότνια Ἥρη, leading us to the form Φῆρη; and, on the other hand, we find θεὰ λευκώλενος Ἥρη in twenty-one places, supported by χρυσόθρονος Ἥρη in two. Even in the same book this difference occurs: thus, λευκώλενος Ἥρη, Il. A. 55. πότνια Ἥρη, ibid. 551. χρυσόθρονος Ἥρη, ibid. 611. In the same way πότνια Ἥβη, Il. Δ. 2. is opposed by καλλίσφυρον Ἥβην, Od. A. 602. μελιηδέα οἶνον, Il. Z. 258. K. 579. Od. I. 208, &c. by μελιηδέος οἶνον, Il. E. 545. Od. Γ. 46. The like happens with regard to the word ἄρνες, ἐκάς, ἔκαστος, ἐκίων, ἔργον, ἡδύς, Ἴλιος, Ἴρις, ἴσος, οἶκος.

4. The use of the digamma is equally variable in the tenses and moods of verbs. Thus, to Φίαχω, and the substantive Φιαχῆ, which reveal themselves in μέγα ἰαχον, Il. Δ. 506. P. 317. μέγα ἰάχουσα, Il. E. 343. ῥένοτο ἰαχῆ, Il. Δ. 456, &c. is opposed ἀμφιαχυῖαν, not ἀμφιΦιαχυῖαν, Il. B. 316. Against δοφειπῆρ, Il. I. 506. αἶσιμα παρΦειπῶν, Il. Z. 62. H. 121. νῦ δέ με παρΦειποῦσι ἄλοχος, Il. Z. 337. stands μή σε παρσιπῆρ, Il. A. 555. From Fάγω comes ἤξε in ἱππειον δέ οἱ ἤξε, Il. Ψ. 392. although Ἔξεν, ἔφαζεν, ἔφαγν, are so frequent and established, that ἔαξα and ἔαγν remained even in the Attic dialect. Against Ἔναξ, Ἔνασσε, stands ἤνασσε; against Ἔλίσσω, εἰλίπους; against Ἔφι, Ἴφικλείδης. Thus Ἔιδον and ἰδον, ἔρρικώς and εἰκνία, Ἔπος ἐνίσπω, &c. contradict one another.

5. Since, then, on the one hand, the existence of the digamma, and, on the other, its frequent suppression, have appeared as facts, and since the former can as little be mistaken as the latter denied, or ascribed solely to the ignorance of grammarians and transcribers, the question arises, How can these apparent contradictions be reconciled?

6. Priscian says that, in scansion, the Æolians sometimes reckoned the digamma for nothing. The example adduced by him is ἄμμες δ' Ἐειράναν, from which it appears that δέ, in apostrophe before the digamma, suppresses that letter, in the same manner as that in which it suppresses, in the like case, a following aspirate. Accordingly, the following places do not militate against the digamma, since in them it was suppressed by δ'; οἴσετε δ' ἄρν' ἕτερον, Il. Γ. 103; περισσεύοντο δ' ἔθειραι, Il. T. 382. (but περισσεύοντο ἔθειραι, i. e. ἔθειραι, Il. X. 315.); πειρήθη δ' ἔο αὐτοῦ, Il. T. 384. and so, in various passages, ἱππῶ δ' εἰσάμενος; τόν δ' ἰδον; τίς δ' οἶδ' εἰ; Τηλεμάχῳ δ' εἰκνία; νῦν δ' ἔκαθεν; εὐ δ' οἶκαδ' ἰκίσθαι; ἐν δ' οἶνον ἔχενεν, &c. &c.

7. The licence given to the simple δέ cannot be refused to ὄδε, ᾠδε, οὐδέ, and so τὸδ' εἰπόμεναι, Il. H. 375. ὥδ' εἰπησιν, Il. H. 300. οὐδ' ᾧ παιδὶ ἀμύνει, Il. Π. 522. may stand without offence.

8. Γέ exerts the same force as δέ in the suppression of a following aspirate. Since, then, δέ suppresses the digamma as well as the aspirate, the same privilege may be allowed to γέ; and we may preserve, without any offence to the digamma, αὐτὰρ ὅγ' ὃν φίλον νῖον, Il. Z. 474. εἰ κείνῳ γ' ἐπέεσσι, Il. Ξ. 208. and, in other places, τοῖ γ' ἴσασι; ἢ σύ γ' ἀνακτος, &c.

9. If, then, we may consider it as proved that, in the case of apostrophe after δέ, ὄδε, ᾠδε, οὐδέ, μηδέ, γέ, ὄγε, the digamma of the next word disappears, it can scarcely be doubted that, in conformity with this practice, the digamma should be dropped after other apostrophised words also. Hence we may deduce the general rule, that after apostrophe the digamma is thrown away. And thus, according to the analogy of δ' εἰσάμενος, δ' εἰκνία, &c., we find ᾄφρ' εἰδῆ, Il. Θ. 406. ᾄφρ' εἶπω, Il. H. 68. and, in a similar manner, ἴν' εἰδῆς; ἄρματ' ἀνάκτων; κέδν' εἰδνία; κάλ' εἰκνία; εἴσωμ' ἐκάστην; ἔσθι' ἔκηλος; τέρματ' ἐλίσσομεν; δάμνημ' ἐπέεσσι, &c.

10. Still a much greater number of places remains that reject the incipient digamma in words to which it belonged, without any apostrophe to suppress that letter: so that the question arises, Whether the digamma may be supplanted as well by the necessities of versification as by the influence of apostrophe?

11. To account, generally, for the disappearance of the digamma, let us observe,

- a. What was previously said as to its attenuation and rejection, whence we may understand how some words, originally digamated, such as Ἐνῆρ, Ἐλένη, Ἐδώρ, entirely lost the digamma in the Homeric dialect; and how others, though they retained digamma in themselves, lost it in their derivatives, as Ἐφι in Ἴφθιμος, Ἴφικλείδης; Ἐιδον in Ἰδομενεύς; Ἐλίσσω in εἰλίποδες; Ἐπος in ἐνίσπω.
- b. The disappearance of other consonants from the beginning of words. Thus μάλευρον and ἄλευρον; καπήνη (Thessalonian) and ἀπήνη; especially that of σ in ἄλς, Lat. sal, Eng. salt; ἔε, Lat. sese, Eng. self; ἔξειν, Lat. sedere, Eng. sit; ἔξ, Lat. sex, Eng. six; ἔπτά, Lat. septem, Eng. seven; ὑπέρ, Lat. super; ὑπό, Lat. sub; ὄς, Lat. sus, Eng. sow; and from the middle of words, as Μῦῃσα, Spartan Μῶσα; Κλέονσα, Spart. Κλεῶσα; παιζονσῶν, Spart. παιδῶσῶν; Μουσῶν, Lat. Musarum; ποιητῶν, Lat. poetarum, &c.

12. Moreover, that the same word, at the same epoch, might be pronounced with or without the digamma, according to the exigencies of metre,—as ῥεῖπον or εῖπον, ῥέργον or εργον,—we learn from the analogy of words, which, in like manner, retain or reject some other initial consonant. Thus,

K in κῶν, ῶν: as, λέχσασθε κῶν, Il. Γ. 447, and in other places, but ἄλαντος ῶν, Il. Α. 138, &c.: the latter forms (ῶν, ῖσθας, ῖοιεν, &c.) are found in about 200 places, the former (κῶν, κῖσθας, κῖομεν, κῖοιτε, &c.) in about 50.

Λ in λείβω, εῖβω: as, Διτ' λείβειν, Il. Ζ. 266, &c. but δάκρυον εἰβει, Il. Τ. 323, &c.: in λαΐψηρός, αἰψηρός: as, μένος λαΐψηρά τε γούνα, Il. Τ. 323, &c.: as in λαΐψηρός, αἰψηρός: as, μένος λαΐψηρά τε γούνα, Il. Χ. 204, &c. but παύομαι αἰψηρός δὲ κόρος κρεμεροῖο γούνο, Od. Δ. 103. Compare Il. Τ. 276, &c.

Μ in μία ῖα: as τῷ δὲ μῆς περὶ νηὸς ἔχον πόνον, Il. Ο. 416, &c. but τῆς μὲν ἱὲς στιχὸς ἦρχε, Il. Π. 173, &c. as the necessity of metre may demand. The form ῖα is even occasionally found employed merely to avoid the repetition of μ, as ἐν δὲ ἱῇ (read τ' ἱῇ) τιμῇ ἡμὲν κακός, Il. Ι. 319; just as, without necessity, the φ, which represents digamma in the word φῆ, is often dropped, since this is always ῆ at the beginning of a verse.

Γ in γαῖα, αῖα: as ἐστοναχίζετο γαῖα, Il. Β. 95, &c. but φυσίζοος αῖα, Il. Γ. 243, &c.

13. Since, then, κῶν, κῖομεν, λείβω, λαΐψηρός, μῆς, γαῖα, γαῖης, γαῖαν, &c., according to the exigencies of the metre, might also be pronounced as ῶν, ῖομεν, εῖβω, αἰψηρός, ἱὲς, αῖα, αῖης, ῖαν, &c. it need not seem extraordinary that digammated words should, on the same principle, sometimes throw away the digamma: especially since, in their case, the mutability of the letter, its suppression after apostrophe, and its entire extinction in later times, come in aid of such a supposition. Thus we may allow, in one series of examples, the collocations ἀλλὰ, φάναξ, ἀλλὰ φάνασσα, Ταλαϊνίδαο φάνακτος, &c.; and, in another series, γὰρ ἄνακτος, μὲν ἀναξ, ἧς περ ἄνασσε, θυμὸν ἄνακτος, &c.: in one place φάρμακα φειδῶς, and in another, εἶγε μὲν εἰδείης; in one place ἄνδρα φέκαστον, and in another, θυμὸν ἐκάστω; and so ῥεῖπος or ἔπος, ῥέργον or εργον, &c.

14. That which has been here admitted on the grounds of analogy and induction, namely, that the digamma may stand or fall, according to the exigencies of metre, is demonstrated—(not to mention again γέντο, i. e. ῥέντο or ῥέλτο, which is found in some places, while εἴλετο appears in others)—in the word εἰρίγδουπος, i. e. ἐριρῥόουπος, which becomes ἐρίδουπος when the syllable requires to be shortened: thus, ἐριγδούποιο, Il. Ε. 672, &c. ἐριγδουπος πόσις Ἥορς, Il. Η. 411, &c. but ἀκτάων ἐριδοῦπον, Il. Υ. 50. αἰδοῦσις ἐριδοῦπον, Il. Ω. 323, &c. It is demonstrated also in ῆ “as,” which is φῆ, i. e. ῥῆ, in Il. Β. 144, since on that line (κινῆθη δ' ἀγορῇ, ὥς κύματα μακρὰ θάλασσης) the Scholiast remarks that Zenodotus wrote φῆ κύματα; and thus too at Il. Ε. 499.—δὲ φῆ, κώδειαν ἀνασχῶν, | πέφραδ' ἑ τ' ῥώεσσι, κα' εὐχόμενος ἔπος ῥῖδα. * Zenodotus gives δὲ δέ, φῆ κώδειαν ἀνασχῶν | πέφραδ' κ. τ. λ. Here Homeric usage forces us to abandon φῆ for ῆφ, and the rules of versification force us to retain the consonant in φῆ, unless, with Aristarchus, in spite of sense and connexion, we give up the verse altogether, from an uncritical horror of the word φῆ or ῥῆ.

* Doubtless from manuscripts. It may be observed, by the way, that Homeric criticism would gain much in clearness and certainty, if more attention were paid to Zenodotus, and to his important and remarkable readings of the poet's text, than to the often partial and pedantic Aristarchus.

15. Lastly, in furtherance of our proofs, we may cite also those forms, which, as we shall presently see, had the digamma in the middle of the word, and yet dropped it as the verse might require: thus, εὔκελος i. e. ἔγκηλος and ἔκηλος, αὐτῶρ i. e. ἄφρῶρ and ἀτᾶρ, Ἀτρεΐδαο i. e. Ἀτρεΐδαφο and Ἀτρεΐδew, ἀλεύσασθαι and ἀλέασθαι, &c.; as, in Latin, both amaverunt and amarunt (amaerunt), paraverunt and pararunt, audiverant and audierant, were in use at the same time.

VIII.

Of the results of the foregoing investigations with regard to the treatment of the Homeric text.

1. We may, in the first place, admit as correct the list of digammated words in Homer which Heyne has given in an Excursus on the Iliad, book T. (vol. vii. pp. 708.—772.) leaving it to future research to ascertain whether one or two words may not yet be added to that catalogue; and, this done, we may,

- a. in the treatment of the text, prefer those readings which are conformable to the use of the digamma, since it is more probable that this letter might have been dropped by grammarians and transcribers ignorant of its claims, than that the poet should, without metrical necessity, abandon it.
- b. If the digamma cannot recover its right by critical aid without appealing to conjecture, then the place should be left undisturbed, since it is doubtful whether it has been corrupted by the alterations of grammarians, or rejects the digamma in obedience to the will of the poet. It is only in this way that, without giving up the doctrine of the digamma, the Homeric text can be preserved from perpetual and flagrant violations.

2. With greater confidence may we, before digammated words, throw away the paragodic ν, write οὐ instead of οὐχ, and dismiss those particles, which have been inserted instead of the digamma, evidently from ignorance, to fill up the verse. Thus ἐνθεν ἄρ' οἰνίζοντο for ἐνθεν φοινίζοντο, Il. H. 472. δὴπότεν ἰσόμορον for δὴπότε φισόμορον, Il. O. 209. μετὰ τ' ἦθεα καὶ νομόν for μετὰ φήθεα, Il. Z. 511, &c. &c. Here also it is left to future observation to determine how far, through these and similar safe alterations, the passages apparently opposed to the digamma may be diminished in number, and the list of words, which in Homer's usage retained the digamma, be augmented.

IX.

1. In order not to curtail or disconnect the history of the digamma, and at the same time for the sake of giving yet more support to the doctrines already propounded, we shall add what is to be said as to this letter in the middle of words,—a subject belonging rather to the dialect than to the versification of Homer.

2. In the Latin tongue we perceive it joined to consonants in comburo from con-uro; sylvā from ἔλν, or the old ἐλφν; cervus from κέρεας, Æol. κέρεος, old κέρεφος (kerevus, kervus, cervus, "the horned animal"); volvō from φέλεφω, φέλφω; salvus from σάφος; arva from ἀρόφω, as τινo from βίoφω; curvus from γῦρος, which must have been γύρφος. In Greek we find, in Suidas, δερβιστήρ, i. e. δερφιστήρ, from δεῖρω, and ἀλβάχνιον, i. e. ἀλφάχνιον, a vessel in which the οὔλαι (of which the true form thus appears to have been δλφαι) were deposited; we find also ἐπίβδας, i. e. ἐπιδαιτί, according to the Scholiast on Pind. Pyth. iv. 249. and σιβδῆν, there quoted; ρύμβος from ρύω in the Etym. Magn. Add ἰσφος, ἄμφρος. The sound is retained in γαμβρός, μεσημβρίη. To this class belongs also the well-known ΑΦΥΤΟ, properly ἀφτό, in the Delian inscription. Now as ἴσος, οὔλαι, γῦρος, have come from ἴσφος, δλφαι, γύρφος, so similar long vowels and diphthongs appear to be of similar origin, as οὔλαμος, ὀρούω from ὀρόφο, τίμη, from τίφω, τιφμή. So δμίλος, πέδιλον, πίδαξ, φῶλον, ψύχω, ψυχή, πτύω.

3. The digamma stands also between vowels: avarus, ἄατος (ἄφατος) ἄτος; Achivi, Ἄχαιοί; avum, αἰών; avernus, ἄφωρος; Argivi, Ἀργεῖοι; bos bovis, βός βοφός; Davus, Δαφός, according to Priscian; bios compare vivus; βιώ, νίνο; clavis, κλαῖς; divus, διος; levis λείος (λέφως); lavo, λούω (λόφω); Mavors, Μάρς, μάφω; novus, νέφός; ΠΙΦΩ, bibo; rinus, ρόφος; probus, προφός, Ἄεολ. πραφός. Add τὰφός λαφός (Villois. Proleg. Hom. II. p. iv.); δάφιον Alcman (καὶ χεῖμα πῶρ τε δάφιον, Priscian, p. 547.); ΕΦΑΟΙΟΙΣ in the Elean inscription, ΔΙΦΙ on the Olympic helmet, and ΣΙΓΕΥΕΥΣΙ, i. e. ΣΙΓΕΦΕΥΣΙ, in the Sigeian inscription.

4. To this head belong in Hesychius Αιβτός, ἀέτός, (Περγαῖοι).—Ἀβηδόνα, ἠφδόνα.—Ἀκροβᾶσθαι, ὑπακούειν.—Ἐβασον, ἔασον, (Συρακούσιοι), thus ἐάω, ἐφάω, ἐβάω, compare what Gregor. Corinth. quotes as Doric τὰ ἔα εἶα, τὰ ἔασον εἶασον. Δαβελός, δαλός, (Δάκωνες),—Θαβακόν, θακόν, thus θαφακόν, θαβακόν, θακόν, θακόν.—From the Pamphylian dialect, in Eustath. ad Hom. Od. p. 1654. φάβος, βαβέλιος ὀρούβω, or, since ου arises from the change of the digamma, more properly ὀρόβω.—To this head appertains also what Priscian says p. 547. and more fully at p. 710, viz. that the Ἄεολians placed the digamma between two vowels; "this is proved," he says, "by very ancient inscriptions, written in the oldest characters, which I have seen on many tripods." He cites, p. 547. Δημοφάφω, which, at p. 710. he calls Δημοφάφω, and, at p. 547, Δαφοκάφω, which, at p. 710, becomes Λαυκάφω. Δημοφάφω, Δαφοκάφω are right; the other forms in -δων must have arisen, after the neglect of the digamma, from the contraction of -άων to -ων, and the insertion of ο.

From all this it seems already clear that, in the old language, the digamma appeared very commonly in words between the open vowels.

5. It has already been stated that, before a vowel, the digamma often passed into u, in Greek into v. Priscian quotes from Latin the nunc mare nunc silva of Horace, and the zonam solvit diu ligatam of Catullus. As aves gives aviceps and augur, faveo, fautor, and lavo, lautus, so from άω, i. e. άφω, came avio, and with the insertion of d, avdio, audio, from γάω, i. e. γάφω, came gavio (hence gavivus), and gaudeo, gaudium. The Etym. Mag. has Ἄεolic αῶως, ἡ ἡώς; Hesychius has αῶως, ἡμέρα; Eustathius, p. 548, has αῶρηκτος for ἄβρηκτος from ἄφρηκτος infractus; and Heracleides has, as Ἄeolic, δαυλός, δαλός (Spartan δαβελός), so that it was δαφέλός, δαβελός, δαυλός, δαλός. Observe also ιαῶχεν, ιάχεν, (in German jauchen, jauchzen).

Of the digamma in the middle of words in Homer.

1. The digamma appears connected with a consonant, in Homer, in μέμβλετο, μέμβλωκε, παρμέμβλωκε. This verb was μέφλω μέβλω, as, in Hesychius, we find βέβλειν μέλλειν (or, as it should be written, μέλειν.) Thus μέφλωμαι, μεμέβλετο, μέμβλετο, and so forth. So we may explain ἄδδην, ἄδδκότες, ἔδδεισαν, ἵποδδείσαντες, as having been ἄδφην, ἄδφκότες, ἔδφεισαν, ἵποδφείσαντες, compared with ἴσος, ἄμφορος, ἄβρηκτος, from ἴσφος, ἄμφορος, ἄφρηκτος, compared also with duellum, which was dvellum, dbellum, and hence bellum (perhaps connected with θέλλα), as Duilius, Duellius, were called likewise Billius, Bellius. Ἄδφην is found also as ἄδην, without the digamma; and thus it augments the list of words, which retain, or drop this letter according to the demands of metre.

2. We may conclude, from preceding remarks, that the digamma appeared also between open vowels, in Homeric Greek. 'Αἶω, αἶσσω, δῖς, κληῖς, Ἀρήϊον, &c. since they are never found contracted into αἰώ, αἶσσω, οῖς, κληῖς, Ἀρῆϊον, were evidently pronounced αἶω, αἶσσω, δῖς, κληῖς, Ἀρήϊον, as αἶκω, αἶργος, &c. were αἶκων, αἶεργος, &c. Thus likewise θαλάκας, θαλάσσειν, ἱφασον, ἄφελον, ἄφεί (αἰεί), ἀφείδω, ἀφείρω, ἀφείστιος (not ἀνείστιος), Ἀφίδης, ἀφίδηλος, ἀλωά, (ἀλωά), ἀφολλής, ἀφολξ (ὠλξ), ἄφωρ, ἀφορτήρ, ἄφος (αῦος), ἀφαλός (αὔαλος) ἀφτῇ (ἀφτῇ), ἀφτμή (ἀφτμή) German athmen, γεραφός (γεραῖός) or γραφός German grau, anciently grav, δαφῆρ, δάφω (δαίω), δῆφιος ἔφανός, κραφαίνω (κρααίνω), from ΚΡΑ, ΚΡΑΩ, ΚΡΑΦΩ German kraf-t, λαφάς (λαῦς), λάφιγξ, Λαφέρτης, λέφων (German Leu, anciently Lev, whence Lowe), δφας (οῦς) gen. δφατος (οὔατος), ὀφίω, πνέφω, (πνείω), φαφενός (φαεινός), χέφω, χράφω, χρίφος, together with all substantives and verbs of the same kind having a vowel before the final vowel. In case of contraction the digamma disappears, thus Ἀτρείδαφο, Ἀτρείδαο, Ἀτρείδεα.

3. The Homeric language is full of traces of the digamma changed into ν. It appears in the termination eus, as βασιλεύς, Ὀδυσσεύς, Ἀτρεύς, Ἀχιλλεύς, Τυδεύς, words of which the roots are seen more clearly in the Latin forms Ulysses, Achilles, and are perfectly revealed in the forms AXLE, TVTE, ATPE, on old Italian works of art. But like βασιλίδης, so must there have been βασιλῆφος, βασιλέφω (βασιλεύω), βασιληφίς, (τιμῆς βασιληφίδος, Il. Z. 193.) βασιλήφιος (γένος βασιλήφιον), Od. II. 401. The digamma remained in the vocative βασιλεῦ, not to leave the root open and ending in the feeble ε, and in the dat. plur. βασιλεῦσι, combined with σ, as in the nominative singular.

4. In like manner, the digamma remained in future and aorist tenses, supported by σ, though it disappeared where it stood unsupported between vowels; since ἐμπνέουσι, Il. T. 159, &c. θεύσεται, Il. Ψ. 623. θεύσεσθαι, Il. A. 700. κλαύσομαι, Il. X. 87. κλαύσε, Od. Ω. 292. πλεύσεσθαι, Od. M. 25. χραύση, Il. E. 138. demonstrate that their verbs, θέω, κλάω, πνέω, χράω, were once θέφω, κλάφω, πνέφω, χράφω, (German graben); and, further, the parts and derivatives of ἀλείνω, κάω, κλέω, ῥέω, χέω, as ἀλεύσασθαι, καῦμα, κλυτός, ῥυτός, χυτός, point to ἀλέφω, κάφω, κλέφω, (properly to make a noise, so the German kließen, applied to dogs—as the German gaffen, Eng. gape, may be compared with χάφω (χάω, χαίνω), &c.

5. In some verbs, the digamma is either retained or dropped in the present, as δέω, or δέωω, or is not at all thrown away, as βασιλεύω, ἱερεύω. In some the σ is suppressed instead of it, as χέωω, (not χεύωω), Od. B. 222: and so χεύον, Od. B. 544. χευάντων, Od. A. 214. χεύαν. χεύαι, &c.

6. In the aorist of ἀλείνω from ἀλέφω, the digamma not only suppresses σ, ἀλενα, ἀλენαι, ἀλεύσασθαι, &c. but it is also lost itself, as in ἀλέασθαι, Il. N. 436, and so ἀλέασθε, ἀλέαιτο, in other places, which were undoubtedly ἀλέασθαι, ἀλέαιτο. Exactly in the same manner we find εὔκηλος and the common ἔκηλος, εὔαδεν instead of ἔαδεν, αὔταχος, αὔσταλος, and the strange form αὔερυσαν, which may be explained ἀφέρυσαν, viz. φέρυσαν with the intensive α prefixed. From all this, and the preceding remarks, it seems evident that the diphthongs αὔ, εὔ, arose from the attenuation of αφ and εφ.

XI.

History of the digamma in Homeric criticism.

1. Bentley was the first who clearly recognised the traces of the digamma in the Homeric poems, and the necessity of attending to it in the treatment of the Homeric text. On the margin of Stephanus's edition of Homer in Poet. princip. Her. he marked the lections of several manuscripts, prefixed the digamma to the proper words, and endeavored to alter the adverse passages according to its demands, often improving on himself, as he proceeded, and amassing or examining a great variety of matter. From these notes he drew up a full and elaborate treatise, in which he goes through the digammated words in alphabetical order, and overthrows all apparent objections to his doctrine. The notes alluded to (called the codex Bentleianus) were sent to Heyne, but not the treatise, and thus the dispersed observations, and somewhat crude views of the great critic have become known, but the larger work remains, still unpublished, in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge, where it was shown to me, in manuscript, together with the above-mentioned codex, in the year 1815.

2. After the labours of Dawes,¹ and of Payne Knight² on the subject of the digamma, this letter found in Heyne³ an eminent protector, who, after his fashion, gave many useful hints, but wavered in his observations, and brought the question to no decision. Both on this account, and because, following the example of his predecessors, he was too prone to change, or to throw suspicion on every passage that seemed to oppose the digamma, and thus to mangle the works of Homer, he gave ample grounds for contradiction and even censure.⁴ Soon after the outbreaking of this literary war Hermann⁵ took the field, dividing the truth from error with singular sagacity, and endeavouring with great pains to destroy the arguments against the reception of the digamma into the Homeric poems, but, at the same time, to prescribe proper limits to its use in Homeric criticism. The neglect of the digamma, in solitary instances, he admitted as a proof of the later origin of those passages, in which such instances occurred. The doctrine immediately acquired fresh partisans in Germany, as, for example, Buttmann in his Greek Grammar, and Boeckh.⁶ Recently, a new opponent to the digamma has appeared in the person of Spitzner, who, however, without combating the other proofs of its existence, rests his hostility to the letter on this single circumstance—that hiatus cannot be, by its aid, entirely removed from the poetry of Homer; expellas furcâ, tamen usque recurrit.

APPENDIX—B.

OF THE APOSTROPHE.

No general rule can be given respecting the use of the Apostrophe in the Greek prose writers. The Attic writers used it more than the Ionic, and the later Attic more frequently than the old, all of them chiefly in the monosyllabic particles δέ, γάρ, τις, in the adverbs ποτε, τότε, &c. in ἀλλὰ, αὐτίκα, &c. and always in the prepositions which end with α or ο; more rarely in other words. The following remarks may be of service to the student:

1. It depends in some measure upon the sense of a passage whether the Apostrophe is to be used or not: if the sense require that any pause, however short, should be made after a word ending in a short vowel and preceding another which begins with a vowel, the first vowel is not dropped, as αὐτίκα, ἔφη, εἶση.

2. A short vowel is not cut off before another, when such elision would injure the harmony of the sentence; nor when a particle is emphatic.

3. The particle ἄρα is Apostrophised before οὐ and οὐν, but not before other words. If a particle closely adheres in sense to a preceding word, it does not generally suffer Apostrophe.

4. The Apostrophe is very frequent in Demosthenes, whose orations were written to be spoken, and a leading feature of whose style is rapidity. Upon the whole it seems reasonable to say, respecting the prose writers, that, within certain limits, they used or neglected the Apostrophe as they judged it most conducive to harmony.

APPENDIX—C.

OF CONTRACTIONS.

1. GENERAL RULES.

1. The long vowels η and ω absorb all the rest of the simple vowels.

2. α absorbs all the vowels following it, except ο and ω.

3. ε unites in the diphthong ει, or the long vowel η, with all vowels following it except ο and ω.

4. ι and υ absorb all vowels following, and are contracted into one syllable with a vowel preceding. ι is generally subscribed under α, ε, ω, and unites in one syllable with ε and ο, as κέραϊ, κέρα; ὄρεϊ, ὄρει; δῖς, οῖς. When ι makes a diphthong with a vowel, and this is to be contracted with another vowel, the two other vowels are to be contracted according to the preceding rules, and the ι is either subscribed when from the contraction arises a long α, η, ω, as τύπτεαι, τύπη; τιμάοιμι, τιμῶμι; τιμάει, τιμῇ; or, if this is not the case, it is omitted, as χρυσάειν, χρυσοῦν.

5. ο coalesces with all vowels, preceding or following, in the diphthong ου, or, if an ι be under, in οι, or the long vowel ω.

2. THE MORE ACCURATE DISTINCTIONS OF THESE GENERAL RULES.

Αα becomes α, but the accusative plural of ναὺς is ναῦς, not νᾶς: so also τὰς γραῦς.

Αε becomes α, as γελάετε, γελᾶτε; ἐγέλαε, ἐγέλα.

Αει becomes α, as γελάεις, γελᾷς; αἰδῶ, ᾔδω.

Αο, Αου, Αω, become ω, as βοάουσι, βοῶσι; δρᾶω, δρῶ.

Αοι becomes ω, as δράοι, δρῶ.

Αη becomes α, as γελάητε, γελᾶτε; but αη becomes α.

Εα becomes ᾶ if a vowel or ρ precede, as Πειραιέα, Πειραιᾶ; ἀργυρεᾶ, ἀγυρᾶ; but when a consonant precedes, εα becomes ῆ, as ἀληθέα, ἀληθῆ. Yet in contracted Nouns of the second declension, εα becomes ᾶ, as δοτέα, δῶτᾶ.

Εαι becomes η, as τύπτεαι, τύπη, and εας, εις, as ἀληθέας, ἀληθεῖς.

Εε becomes ει, as ἀληθέες, ἀληθεῖς; but η in Nouns, if no consonant follows εε, as ἀληθές, ἀληθῆ.

Εο and Εον, in Attic make ου, as φιλέον, φιλοῦν. In Ionic and Doric ευ, as πλεῦνες for πλέονες: χείλευς for χείλεος.

Εοι becomes οι, as ποιέοι, ποιοῖ.

Εω becomes ω, as Πειραιέως, Πειραιῶς, but only when a vowel precedes; thus they do not say βασιλέως for βασιλέως. In dissyllabic Verbs, however, which become monosyllabic by contraction, εω, εη, εο, εον, are not contracted, but only εε and ει.

Ι, preceded by another vowel, suffers only the proper contraction, as ἔπει, ορεῖ; αἰδέει, αἰδοῖ. In a long and η and ω, it is subscribed, as κέραϊ, κέρα.

O*a* and O*ω* become ω, as βοάω, βοῶ; χρυσάω, χρυσῶ. O*η* also becomes ω, yet only in Ionic and Doric. Observe, however, that O*a* becomes ου in βόας, βοῦς; μείζονας, μείζους; and also that, in adjectives, the termination σα is contracted into a, and ση into η.

O*e* and O*ο* become ου, as πτερόεσσα, πτεροῦσσα; πρόοπτος, προῦπτος; and in composition προὔτρεψεν for προέτρεψεν; κακοῦργος for κακέργος. But observe that ἀθρόος, ἀντίξοος, and other words compounded with ξοος, do not fall under this rule: and that in words compounded of δμοῦ, when υ is omitted, οε remains unchanged, as δμοεθνής; if ο follows it is contracted into ω, as δμωρόφιος from δμοορόφιος.

O*ει* and O*οι* become οι, as εὔνοι, κακόννοι, for εὔνοοι, κακόννοοι; and δηλοῖς, δηλοῖ, for δηλόεις, δηλόει. In words compounded with ειδης, however, οε remains unchanged, as μονοειδής; and in the present infinitive, and in adjectives in οεις, οει becomes ου, as δηλόειν, δηλοῦν; πλακοῖς, πλακοῦς.

O*η* becomes οι, in the second and third persons present subjunctive where η has the subscript ι, as δηλόηι, δηλοῖ; otherwise ω, as δηλόητον, δηλώτον.

Υ*ι* is not contracted if these vowels are in two syllables, as βότρυι. In those cases where υ seems to coalesce with a vowel following, it may be supposed to have taken the power of a consonant like our V.

3. PECULIAR DIALECT FORMS.

Frequently, (especially in Attic), a word that ends with a diphthong or a vowel, is contracted into one with the following word that begins with a vowel or diphthong. If an ι be among these vowels, it is subscribed: but more properly it is only subscribed when it is the last of the two contracted vowels. The rules are the same as those preceding: only a few particular ones occur.

A with α, as τὰδικα for τὰ ἄδικα, but only when the second ά is short; thus, not τὰθλα but τὰ ἄθλα.

A*ι* with a, as κάπθ for καὶ ἀπό; κᾶν for καὶ ἄν. (The ι rejected, and aa contracted.)

A with ε as τὰμά for τὰ ἐμά.

A*ι* with ε, as καγῶ for καὶ ἐγώ, κᾶτι for καὶ ἔτι.

A*ι* with ει, as κᾷτα for καὶ εἴτα (ι rejected, crasis of a and ε, contraction of a and the latter ι.)

A*ι* with ή, as χή for καὶ ή: A*ι* with ο, as χῶσα for καὶ ὅσα. The χ arises from κ on account of the rough breathing of the following vowel.

I with ο, as κῶνον for καὶ οἶνον; χῶ for καὶ οἶ.

O with a, as ἀνήρ for δ ἀνήρ: O*ι* with a, as ἀνδρες for οἱ ἄνδρες.

O with ε, as εὐμός for δ ἐμός; τοῦμόν for το ἐμόν.

O with οι, as οῖνος for δ οἶνος.

O*ι* with ε, as μούγκωμιον, for μοι ἐγκώμιον; O with ι, as θαιμάτιον for τὸ ἱμάτιον. Observe, however, that the ο, ου, and ω, of the article often unite with the simple vowel of the following word, and become a long; as δ ἕτερος, contr. ἄτερος; τὸ ἕτερον, contr. θάτερον; τοῦ ἑτέρου, contr. θατέρου; τῷ ἑτέρῳ, contr. θατέρῳ. (In Doric, ἄτερος was put for the simple ἕτερος:) thus also τὰγαθοῦ for τοῦ αγαθοῦ; τάνδρός for τοῦ ἀνδρός; τάνδρῃ for τῷ ἀνδρῇ, &c.

η ου is written separately, but pronounced as one syllable; also ω ου; as ἐγὼ οὐ.

Ω with οι, as ἐγῶδα for ἐγὼ οἶδα.

ACCENTS.

1. FIRST PRINCIPAL LAW. In the Greek language, only one of the three last syllables of a word is capable of receiving the acute accent.—EXPLANATION. If the accent were to recede beyond the third syllable, the whole word would to the hearing be necessarily divided into two or more. Hence Εἰώνημος, Ἀλιμούσιος. Besides, an equilibrium must exist between the accented syllable and the unaccented ones which follow. This equilibrium would be destroyed if more than two were to follow the accented syllable, as two only are able to produce it.

2. SECOND PRINCIPAL LAW. The accent falls either on the syllable containing the principal idea of the whole word, or on the one which is nearest to the syllable of the principal idea, that the number of syllables in the word generally will permit.—EXPLANATION. The root of a word is the principal idea. Thus in γράμμα, the first syllable is the root, and of course accented. In compound words, however, the added word forms for the accent the principal idea, because it gives to the whole its shade, its definiteness, its distinction. Thus, in πρόγραμμα the principal idea is now in πρό, and γράμμα, in reference to the accent, becomes subordinate, because the preposition πρό gives to γράμμα its definite signification. Again, in γραμματίον, the accent is on the antepenult, being as near as it can come to the syllable (γραμμ) containing the principal idea, without violating the first law. It must be observed, however, that in the Greek language, with few exceptions (but in the verb without exception), the accent can never pass beyond the first compound: thus ἔς, πρόες (first compound); not, however, σύμπροες (second compound), but συμπρόες. The first compound therefore remains as the principal idea for the Greek accent.

3. THIRD PRINCIPAL LAW. A syllable long by nature is equivalent to two syllables with respect to the time occupied in its pronunciation; consequently, if the final syllable of a word be long by nature, the accent cannot stand on the third from the end.—EXPLANATION. This law necessarily follows from the nature of the thing itself. In Ἀριστοφάνης the accent ought to stand thus, Ἀριστόφανης, because the syllables Ἀριστο enlarge and define the idea of φάνης: but the syllable ης contains two short times, and hence, this syllable being reckoned for two, the accent in Ἀριστόφανης would fall upon the fourth syllable, which is a violation of the first law: consequently we must write Ἀριστοφάνης. But in the Attic and old Ionic declension, wherein other dialects give ο instead of ω, as πόλεως (otherwise πόλεως), the last syllable, though long according to quantity, is considered as short for accentuation; and the reason for this lies in the half length of ω in such old forms. And again, the syllables terminating with the diphthongs οι and αι, when not closed by a consonant (as οιν, αιν, οis, ais), are, like the Attic or old Ionic ω, considered short in accentuation. The reason of this lies in the short pronunciation of these diphthongs, even the oldest poets having allowed themselves to elide οι and αι in certain instances. The third person of the optative active, however, in οι and αι, always obtains as long, being the result of contraction; and the same is the case with the adverb οἶκοι (properly οἶκω.)

4. The three principal laws just given are sufficient for ascertaining the position of the accent in the oldest periods of the Greek language. Thus the Æolians, whose dialect must be considered as the oldest of the Greek dialects, invariably accented according to these laws. In the whole of their dialect not a single word is to be found accented upon the last syllable, except the dissyllabic prepositions, as παρά, περί, ὑπό. But in prepositions this is easily accounted for, because they are connected as closely as possible with the following word, to which they refer. The same old accentuation, conforming to the sense, has been retained almost invariably by the remaining dialects of the Greek language, 1. in the oldest parts of speech, the verb: 2. in the oldest nouns, the neuters: 3. in proper names, which belong to the oldest nouns; as, for example, εὐπειθής is an adjective, but Εὐπειθης, a proper name. But in other words, these dialects exhibit a remarkable deviation from the oldest or Æolic usage, all endeavouring to place the accent on the final syllables of words, even when these contain no principal idea; as, ἀγαθός, σοφός. This peculiarity of oxytoning can only be explained historically; for, marking the last syllable of a word with the accent, when the principal idea is not contained in this syllable, is in every case an abandonment of the etymological signification of the word. This will be made more clear by a comparison with modern languages. Those called the Roman languages, which are derived from the Latin, have in their words mostly left the old radical syllable of the Latin unchanged, and merely furnished this with terminations, which may be considered as the only part belonging to them. Now, it is remarkable that the languages spoken of, particularly the French, are accustomed to throw the accent upon these terminations, their only property in the word, because the etymological root, borrowed from the Latin, must in its original signification and nature remain entirely unknown to them. Thus, the French form from fraternitas fraternité, from conscriptio conscriptión, with the accent placed upon the last syllable, which is their own property in the word.

6. Now, the later dialects, Doric, Ionic, Attic, bear the same relation, in respect of the accentuation of many words, to the oldest dialect, the Æolic, as the Roman languages to their parent, the Latin. Hence the Attic dialect accents, for example, βουλῇ, βωμός, σοφός, where the Æolic had βόλλα, βῶμος, σόφος. That the accentuation upon the last syllable in the later dialects originated in an abandonment of the etymological meaning of a word, to be explained only by the given relation of the later dialects to the Æolic, or of the Roman languages to the Latin, is proved above all by the remarkable fact, that the Greeks almost invariably accent all words of barbarous (i. e. foreign) terminations upon the last syllable. Thus Ἀσμάχ (Herod. 2. 30.), Οἰροτάλ (Herod. 3. 8.), Νηῖθ, Ἀβραάμ, Μελχισεδέκ, Μιχαήλ, Δαβίδ, Ἀλιλάτ, Μωϋθ, Θαμύς. Here one cannot but perceive an endeavour to bring the last barbarously terminating syllable as clearly as possible before the ear of the hearer, that the word, whose etymology was unknown to the Greeks, might appear to them at once as barbarous.

The Acute is used on the last syllable, the penultima, or the antepenultima.

1. Accents were first marked by Aristophanes, a Grammarian of Byzantium, who lived about 200 years before the Christian æra. He probably first reduced them to a practical system, because some marks must have been necessary in teaching the language to foreigners, as they are used in teaching English.

For the proper modulation of speech, it is necessary that one syllable in every word should be distinguished by a tone, or an elevation of the voice. On this syllable the Accent is marked in the Greek language. This elevation does not lengthen the time of that syllable; so that Accent and Quantity are considered by the best critics as perfectly distinct, but by no means inconsistent with each other. That it is possible to observe both Accent and Quantity is proved by the practice of the modern Greeks, who may be supposed to have retained, in some degree the pronunciation of their ancestors. Thus in τυπτομένην they lengthen the first and last syllable, and elevate the tone of the penultima.

In our language the distinction between Accent and Quantity is obvious. The Accent falls on the antepenultima equally in the words liberty and library, yet in the former the tone is elevated, in the latter the syllable is also lengthened. The same difference will appear in báron and bácon, in lével and léver, in Reáding, the name of a place, in which these observations are written, and the participle reáding.

The Welsh language affords many examples of the difference between Accent and Quantity, as diolch, thanks.

It has been thought by many that the French have no Accent: but in the natural articulation of words this is impossible. Their syllabic emphasis is indeed in general not strongly expressed; but a person conversant in their language will discover a distinctive elevation, particularly in public speaking. This is in many cases arbitrary: thus the word cruel, in expressing sorrow and affection, will on the French stage be pronounced crúel: in expressing indignation and horror, cruél. But the general rule is, that in words ending in e mute the Accent is on the penult; as formidáble, riváge: in other words on the last syllable, as hauteúr, vertú.

On one of the three last syllables of a word the Accent naturally falls. Hence no ancient language, except the Etruscan, carried it farther back than the antepenultima. The modern Greeks sometimes remove it to the fourth syllable; and the Italians still farther. In English it is likewise carried to the præ-antepenultima, but in that case a second Accent appears to be laid on the alternate syllable, as détérmination, unprófitable. In poetry the metre will confirm this remark.

That variation existed in the different States of Greece, which is now observed in the different parts of Britain. The Æolians adopted a baryton pronunciation throwing the Accent back, saying ἐγώ for ἐγὼ, θεός for θεός. In this they were consistently followed by the Latin dialect. But some words in the latter language changed their Accent: thus in the Voc. Valeri, the Accent was anciently on the antepenultima, and was afterwards advanced to the penultima. In English a contrary effect has been produced: thus acceptable is now acceplable; corruptible, córruptible; advertisements, advértisements; &c. In Welsh the Accent is never thrown farther back than the penultima, and is rarely placed on the last syllable. In Scotland the Accent is oxyton, in imitation of that of France, probably on account of the close connexion which formerly subsisted between the two countries.

1. The Grave is said to be the privation of the Acute, and to be understood on all syllables on which that is not placed. The Acute with the rising inflection has been, by a musical term, called the Arsis, the Grave with the falling inflection, the Thesis.

But where it is expressed on the last syllable, the Grave has the force of the Acute marking an oxyton. Indeed no substantial reason is given for the use of both Accents. Perhaps it may be said that the Grave is used to show that the voice, after the elevation, must fall to

The *Circumflex*¹ is used on the last or the penultima.

The Acute and the Grave are put on long and short syllables; the Circumflex on syllables long by nature,² and never on the penultima, unless the last syllable is short.³

No word has more than one Accent, unless an Enclitic follows.

*Enclitics*⁴ throw their Accent on the preceding word, as ἄνθρωπός ἐστι, σῶμά ἐστι.⁵

Ten words are without Accents, called Atonics: ὁ, ἡ, οἱ, αἱ, εἰ, εἰς, ἐν, ἐξ, (or ἐκ,) οὐ (οὐκ or οὐχ), ὥς.⁶

RULES OF ACCENTS.

Monosyllables, if not contracted, are accented, as δς, κοῦς, χεῖρ.⁷

Monosyllables of the Third Declension accent the last syllable of the meet the common, or what Aristotle calls the middle, tone of the next word; but that the Acute is preserved at the end of the sentence, where the change is necessary; that the interrogative τίς always requires an elevation of voice; and that an Enclitic, becoming a part of the word, generally reduces the Accent to the rules of the Acute.

In French the Grave Accent,—when it is not used for distinction, as à, to, from a, has, and où, where, from ou, or,—makes the syllable long and broad, and has the force of the Circumflex: the sound is the same in près and prêt, in excès and forêt.

1. The Circumflex is said to raise and depress the tone on the same syllable, which must be long, and therefore consist of two short; thus σῶμα is equivalent to σόδμα. But this double office of the same letter it is not easy to discriminate in speaking.

2. A syllable long by nature, is that which contains a long vowel or a diphthong, as σῶμα, σπονδαῖος. Some few syllables with a doubtful vowel are circumflexed, as μᾶλλον πᾶγμα, πᾶγος, δῖος, κῆμα, &c. but they are contractions.

3. In Diphthongs, the Accents and Breathings are put on the last vowel, as αὐτοῦς; except in improper diphthongs, αἰδῆς for ᾗδης.

4. An Enclitic inclines on the preceding word, with which it is joined and blended.

5. So in Latin, que, ne, ve. But the Accent, which in virum is placed on the first syllable, is brought forward to the second in virumque.

We may carry the analogy of Enclitics to English. When we say, Give me that book, we pronounce me as a part of the word give. For the boy is tall, we say the boy's tall; thus is becomes a perfect Enclitic. This is frequent in French, donnez le moi, je me lève, est-ce lui; and particularly in parlé-je, where the last syllable of parle must be accented before the Enclitic. In Italian and Spanish the Enclitic is joined, as dammi, deme, give me.

6. These may be called Proclitics, as they incline the Accent on the following word. Thus in English the Article the is pronounced quickly, as if it made part of the following word. In poetry it coalesces with it, as Above th' Aonian mount. When these Atonics are at the end of the sentence, or following the word to which they are naturally prefixed, they recover their accent, as ἔχοντες σπέρμ' ἀνέβαν φλογός οἱ. Pind. κακῶν ἔξ, Theocr. θεὸς ὤς, Hom. When they precede an Enclitic, they are accented, as εἰ με.

7. The following appear to be excepted αἶ, νῦν, οὖν, ῥς, ὄρως, μῦς, γραῦς, παῖς, οὖς, πᾶς, παῖς, πῖρ; but many of them are probably contractions; thus νῦν, from νένν, οὖν from έον, πᾶς from πάας, πῦς or πάνης. Indeed the circumflex always leads to the suspicion of some contraction.

Genitives and Datives, but the penultima of other Cases, as S. χεῖρ, χειρὸς, χειρὶ χεῖρα. D. χεῖρε, χειροῖν. P. χεῖρες, χειρῶν, χειρσί, χεῖρας.¹

Dissyllables, if the first is long and the last short, circumflex the former, as μοῦσα;² in other cases, they acute the former, as μοῦσας, λόγος, λόγου.

Polysyllables, if the last syllable is short, acute the antepenultima, as ἄνθρωπος; if long, the penultima, as ανθρώπου.³

Exceptions with the last syllable short:

1. Participles Perfect Passive, as τετυμμένος.
2. Verbals in εος and εον, as γραπτός, γραπτόν.
3. The increasing Cases of Oxytons, as λαμπάς, λαμπάδος; τυπείς, τυπέντος.
4. Many derivatives, as παιδίον, ἐναντίος.
5. Compounds of βάλλω, πολέω, χέω, if not with a Preposition, as ἐκ-βόλος.
6. Compounds of τίκτω, κτείνω, τρέφω, with a Noun, if they have an Active signification, as πρωτοτόκος, she who produces her first child; ξιφοκτόνος, he who kills with a sword; μητροκτόναι, a matricide; λαοτρόφος, he who feeds the people. If they have a Passive signification, they follow the general rule, as πρωτότοκος, the first born; ⁴ ξιφόκρονος, he who is killed with a sword; μητρόκτονος, he who is killed by his mother; λαότροφος, he who is fed by the people.⁵

1. Except Participles, and τίς interrogative, with δάδων, δμῶων, θῶων, κράτων, λάων, παίδων; πάντων, πάντων, πᾶσι; Τρώων, φῶτων; ὥτων, ὥτων.

2. Εἵπερ, τοίνυν, ὥστε, &c. are considered as two words, the latter of which is an Enclitic; they cannot, therefore, be circumflexed.

Nouns in ξ, increasing long, acute the penult, as θῶρας, κήρυξ, φοίνιξ; if they increase short, they circumflex it, as αἰλαξ, δηλιξ, πίδαξ.

3. From these rules are to be excepted Oxytons, such as generally words in εος, ης, ω and ως, whose Gen. ends in ος pure, as βασιλεὺς, ἀληθής, &c. Adjectives in ικος, θος, λος, ρος, στος, as ἀγαθός, καλός, &c. Participles Perf. 2d Aor. and 2d Fut. Active, and Aorists Passive; Prepositions; and others, which will be learnt by use.

In Latin Polysyllables, the Accent depends on the penultima. If that is long, the Accent is placed upon it, as amīcus: if short, upon the antepenultima, as ānimus. In Dissyllables the Accent is on the first syllable. Hence may be deduced another proof of the difference between Accent and Quantity. In Latin the Accent falls on the first syllable of ānimus and of tibi, but that syllable is not lengthened in pronunciation. The Accent falls on the first syllable in cārmina; but if an Enclitic follows, as carmināque, the Accent, which is inadmissible on the prae-antepenultima, must be laid on a syllable which cannot be pronounced long.

In reading Greek the general practice of this country follows the Latin rules of Accent. In words of two, and of three, short syllables, the difference of the French and English pronunciation is striking. The former makes Iambs and Anapæsts, the latter Trochees and Dactyls: the French say fugís, fugimús: the English fúgis, fúgimus. In many instances both are equally faulty: thus we shorten the long is in fávīs, the Plural of fávus: they lengthen the short is in ὄρις, the Genitive of ος.

4. So πρωτογόνος and πρωτόγονος, βουνόμος and βούνομος, ναυιάχος and ναύμαχος.

5. The difference of Accentuation serves also to mark the difference of signification, and has on some occasions given precision to the language, and even determined the ambiguous meaning of a law. Of this distinction a few instances may be given :

7* Compounds of Perfects Middle with nouns and Adjectives, as ἀστρολόγος, οἰκονόμος, παμφάγος.

8. Many other Compounds retain the Accent, which they had in their simple state, as αὐτόφι, οὐρανόθεν, κατεῖχον, συνῆλθον. So Prepositions, preserving their final vowel in composition, as ἀπόδος, ἐπισχες.¹

| | |
|-----------------------|------------------------|
| ἄγων, leading; | ἄγων, a contest. |
| ἀληθες, truly; | ἀληθες, true. |
| ἄλλα, other things; | ἀλλὰ, but. |
| ἄπλοος, unnavigable; | ἄπλος, simple. |
| ἄρα, then; | ἄρα, an interrogation. |
| βίος, life; | βιός, a bow. |
| δίδομεν, we give; | διδόμεν, to give. |
| δόκος, opinion; | δοκός, a beam. |
| εἶσι, he goes; | εἰσι, they are. |
| ἐνι, he is in; | ἐνι, in. |
| ἐχθρα, enmity; | ἐχθρὰ, hostile things. |
| ζῶον, an animal; | ζῶον, living. |
| θεα, a sight; | θεὰ, a goddess. |
| θεῶν, running; | θεῶν, of gods. |
| ῖον, a violet; | ἶον, going. |
| κάλως, a cable; | καλῶς, well. |
| λάος, a stone; | λαός, a people. |
| λεύκη, a poplar; | λευκή, white. |
| μόνη, alone; | μονή, a mansion. |
| μῦριοι, ten thousand; | μυριοί, innumerable. |
| νέος, new; | νεός, a field. |
| νόμος, a law; | νομός, a pasture. |
| ὅμως, yet; | ὁμός, together. |
| παίθω, I advise; | πειθῶ, persuasion. |
| πόνηρος, laborious; | πονηρός, wicked. |
| τρόχος, a course; | τροχός, a wheel. |
| ῶμος, shoulder; | ὠμός, cruel. |

The list might easily be extended, particularly in marking the difference between a proper and a common name, as Ξάνθος, a river; ξανθός, yellow; ἄργος, a man, or a city; ἀργός, white, &c.

In English the same difference may be observed; thus conduct, produce, Nouns; conduct, produce, Verbs. Jōb, the name of a man; jōb, a common word, &c.

1. These exceptions have given occasion to some to inveigh against the use of Accents, as vague and arbitrary; and to more to neglect them entirely. An attempt to reduce these apparent inconsistencies to a system may tend to rescue this branch of Greek Grammar from that objection.

The most general cause of these exceptions is abbreviation. Thus the original form τυπτέμεναι, on which the Accent is placed regularly, was shortened into τυπτέμεν and τυπτέναι, which retain the Accent on the same syllable. From τετυφέμεναι was formed τετυφέναι, from τυπτέμεναι τυπείναι, from πετυφάμενος τετυμμένος.

Verbals in εον were formed from δέον; thus γραπτέον was originally γράπτεν δέον, necessary to write, whence probably was derived the Latin scribendum. Ναυτίλος may naturally be formed from ναυτέκελος for ναυτικήλος. Παιδίον is abbreviated from παιδάριον, or from παιδίδιον, which Exceptions with the last Syllable long.

The Attic mode of keeping the Accent on the antepenultima in Μενέλαος for Μενέλαος, λίξεως for λίξεος; or the Ionic genitive, as Πηληϊάδεω; or the Compounds of γέλως, as φιλόγελως, can scarcely be called exceptions, as the two last syllables were in pronunciation contracted into one.

Αι and οι final are considered as short in Accentuation, as μοῦσαι, ἄνθρωποι.¹ Except Optatives, as φιλήσαι,² τετύφοι; Infinitives of the Perfect in all Voices, of the Second Aorist Middle, and of the Present of Verbs in μι, as τετυφέναι, τετύφθαι; τετυπέναι; τυπέσθαι; ιστάναί.³

The Genitive Plural of the First Decl. circumflexes the last Syllable, as μουσῶν; ⁴ except Adjectives of the 1st Declension, whose Masculine is of the 2d, as ἅγιος, ἅγιων, ἁγία, ἁγίων: with ἐτησίων, χλούνων, and χρήστων.

Oxytons of the first and 2d Decl. circumflex the Genitives and Datives, as S. τιμῇ, τιμῆς, τιμῇ, τιμῇν, τιμῇ. D. τιμᾷ, τιμαῖν. P. τιμαί, τιμῶν, τιμαῖς, τιμᾶς, τιμαί.⁵

Vocatives Singular in εν and οι are circumflexed, as βασιλεῦ, αἰδοῦ.

Pronouns are Oxytons, except οὗτος, ἐκείνος, δεῖνα, and those in τερος, as ἡμέτερος.⁶

The Imperatives ἔλθε, εἰπέ, εὔρε, ἴδε, and λαβε, are accented on the last, to be distinguished from the 2d. A. Ind.

is formed from παῖς, as αἰγίδιον is from αἶξ. Thus νεανίσκος and παιδίσκος are probably formed from νεανία and παιδί, with εἰσχω.

It is natural that the cases of a Noun or Participle and the persons of a Tense, should retain the Accent through every inflection; thus from λαμπάς, λαμπάδος, &c. from τυπεῖς, τυπέντος, &c. and from τυπῶ, τυποῦμεν, τυποῦμαι, &c. So φιλέον, the neuter of φιλέω; so also παρθένος, from the original word παρθήν.

The Compounds likewise cannot be said to form an exception, as the primitive words are not affected by the junction. On this principle many apparent anomalies may be explained; thus δλίγος is from λίγος, of which λίγα is still extant; and αἰδόλος from οἰγοδόλος.

This is a faint outline of the system: but an acute observer of the etymology and origin of the language will easily solve the difficulties of Accentuation on similar principles.

1. The Diphthongs αι and οι are considered as short, for they were generally pronounced at the end of words like ι. Thus αι and οι are in Russian pronounced i. This pronunciation seems, in some instance, to have affected the quantity, as ἰωμαῖ φίλην, Hom. ἤβης τε καὶ γήραος, Hes. ὕμιν μὲν θεοῦ δοῖεν, &c. But the best critics have suspected the genuineness of the readings, and proposed emendations. In the last passage θεοῖ may be read as a monosyllable.

2. Hence φιλήσαι, 1. Aor. Opt. φιλήσαι. 1. Aor. Inf. φίλησαι, Imper. Middle.

3. Οἴκοι cannot be thought an exception, as it is put for οἶκω, of which it is the ancient form.

4. Because it is a contraction from the original form μονσάων.

5. Μήτηρ and θυγάτηρ, when not syncopated, accent the penult. in every case, except the Vocative: a case, which from its nature frequently throws back the Accent, as ἄνερ, πάτερ, σῶτερ.

6. Before γε they throw back their accent, as ἐγωγε, ἐμοιγε.

Oxytons undeclined lose their Accents when the final vowel suffers elision, as ἀλλ' ἔγε, παρ' ἐμοῦ. Those that are declined throw an Acute on the penult. as πόλλ' ἐπὶ, δέιν' ἔπαθον.

Contractions are circumflexed, if the former syllable to be contracted is accented, as νότος νοῦς; φιλέομεν, φίλομεν: otherwise they retain the acute, as φίλος φίλει; ἑσταῶς, ἐστῶς.¹

ENCLITICS.

Pronouns μου, μεν, μοι, με; σου, σεο, σευ, σοι, τοι, σε; σὸ, οἶ, ἐ, μιν, σφε, σφιν; σφωε, σφισι, σφεας; τις, τι, indefinite, in all cases and dialects, as τον, τευ, τω.

Verbs, εἰμι and φημι in the Pres. Indic., except the 2d pers. sing.

Adverbs, πη, που, πω, πως, ποθεν, ποτε, except when used interrogatively.

Conjunctions, γε, τε, κε, κεν, θην, νυ, νυν, περ, ῥα, τοι, and δε, after Accusatives of motion, as οἰκονδε.

Enclitics throw their Accent on the last syllable of the preceding word, if that word is accented on the antepenult, or circumflexed on the penult, as ἡκουσά τινος, ἦλθε μοι.

Enclitics lose their Accent after words circumflexed on the last syllable, as ἀγαπᾷς με; and after Oxytons, which then resume the Acute Accent, as ἀνὴρ τις.

They preserve their Accent in the beginning of a clause, and when they are emphatical, or followed by another Enclitic.

Enclitic Monosyllables lose their Accent after a word accented on the penultima, as λόγος μου; but Dissyllables retain it, as λόγος ἐστί; else the accent would be on the præ-antepenultima.²

The Pronouns preserve their accent after Prepositions, and after ἔνεια, or ἦ, as διὰ σέ.

Ἔστι accents its first syllable, if it begins a sentence, is emphatical, or follows ἀλλ', εἰ, καί, οὐκ, ὥς, or τοῦτ', as οὐκ ἔστι.

DIALECTS.

I.

"The Greek language, like every modern one, was not, in ancient times, spoken and written in the same manner in all parts of Greece: but almost every place had its peculiarities of dialect,³ both with respect to the use of single letters, and of single words, forms of words, inflections and expressions. Of these dialects there are four principal ones, the Æolic, the Doric, the Ionic, and the Attic. Originally, however, there was but one common language,⁴ and this was the Doric; not indeed the Doric of later times, but a language spoken by the Dorians, from which were derived the Æolic and Ionic varieties, after the colonization of the coasts of Asia Minor. It was not till the Greeks colonized Asia Minor, that their language began to assume both consistency and polish. The Ionians were the first who softened its asperities, and, by attention to euphony, laid aside, by degrees, the broadness and harshness which were retained by their Æolian neighbours on the one hand, and by the Dorians on the other. The rich soil of Ionia, and the harmonious temperature of its climate, combined with the more proximate causes of its vicinity to Lydia, and its commercial prosperity, will account for this change of language. It was from the colonies that the mother country first adopted any improvements in her own dialects."

"Ut Omnium Græcarum urbium et nationum origo referenda est ad Thessaliam, Macedoniam, Epirum, et loca vicina, quoniam qui ea loca primis temporibus incolebant, et antea Γραικοὶ vel Πελασγοὶ dicebantur, primum Ἕλληνες leguntur nominati fuisse ab Hellene, Deucalionis filio, qui, ut Deucalion, in Phthiotide, Thessaliæ regione, regnasse tra-

II.

"It seems probable, that all the Greek colonists in Asia Minor spoke at first a common language. One of the most remarkable features in the change, which originated with the Ionians, was the gradual disuse of the digamma. This letter the Dorians laid aside at a later period; the Æolians, on the contrary, always retained it; whence its appellation of Æolic. The first change which the inhabitants of Attica made, was to modify their old Doric to the more elegant dialect of their richer and more polished colonists; so that, if we recur to the period of about 1000 years B. C., we may conclude, that the language of Attica was nearly the same as that in which the Iliad was composed. Subsequently, however, as the people of Attica embarked in a more extended commerce, the form of their dialect was materially altered, and many changes were introduced from foreign idioms."

III.

"The ÆOLIC DIALECT prevailed on the northern side of the Isthmus of Corinth, (except in Megaris, Attica, and Doris) as well as in the Æolic colonies in Asia Minor, and some northern islands of the Ægean Sea; and was chiefly cultivated by the lyric poets in Lesbos, as Alcæus and Sappho: and in Bœotia, by Corinna. It retained the most numerous traces of the ancient Greek: hence also the Latin coincides more with this than with the other Greek dialects. It is peculiarly distinguished by retaining the old digamma, called, from this circumstance, the Æolic digamma. Alcæus is considered as the model of this dialect."

IV.

"The DORIC DIALECT, as being the language of men who were most of them originally mountaineers, was hard, rough, and broad, particularly from the frequent use of a for η and ω; as for instance, ἀ λαθα, τᾶν κορᾶν, for ἡ ληθη, τῶν κόρων: and from the use of two consonants where ditur; et quoniam Ἐλλὰς fuit urbs atque regio in Thessaliâ, cum nondum ulla alia in terrarum orbe nota esset Ἐλλάς: ita linguam antiquissimam et primitivam Græcorum, quæ proprie dicebatur Ἑλληνικὴ, fuisse Thessalorum sive Macedonum propriam, sed ab initio, si quidem cum linguâ Græcorum, qualem in libris hodie exstantibus reperimus, imprimis cum Atticâ comparaveris, valde horridam et incultam, et barbaram potius quam Græcam, reliquarum tamen Græciæ dialectorum omnium fontem et originem statuendam esse, non verisimile modo, sed pæne tertum est." Sturzins de Dialecto Macedonicâ et Alexand. § 3.

the other Greeks employed the double consonant; as, for instance, σζ for ζ, as μελίσσεται, &c. The Doric tribe was the largest, and the parent of the greatest number of colonies. Hence the Doric dialect was spoken throughout the Peloponnesus, in the Dorica Tetrapolis, in the Doric colonies of Magna Græcia and Sicily, and in Doris in Asia Minor. It is divided by the Grammarians into the old and new Doric dialects. In the old, the Comic writer Epicharmus, and Sophron, author of the Mimes, were the principal writers. In the new, which approached nearer the softness of the Ionic, Theocritus is the chief writer. Besides these, the first Pythagorean philosophers wrote Doric, fragments of whose works are still remaining; for instance, Timæus, Archytas, (who is considered as the standard of this dialect) and Archimedes. Pindar, Stesichorus, Simonides of Ceos, (who probably, however, used the Doric only when he was writing for Doric employers,) and Bacchylides, used, in general, the Doric dialect, but softened it by an approximation to the others, and to the common one. Many instances of the dialect of the Lacedæmonians and Megarensians occur in Aristophanes. Besides these, the Doric dialect is found in decrees and treaties in the historians and orators, and in inscriptions. This dialect was spoken in its greatest purity by the Messenians."

V.

"The IONIC DIALECT was the softest of all, on account of the frequent meeting of vowels and the deficiency of aspirates. It was spoken chiefly in the colonies of Asia Minor, and in the islands of the Archipelago. It was divided into old and new. In the former, Homer and Hesiod wrote, and it was originally very little, if at all, different from the ancient Attic. The new arose when the Ionians began to mix in commerce and send out colonies. The writers in this were Anacreon, Herodotus, and Hippocrates.¹ The principal residence of the Ionic tribe, in the earliest times, was Attica. From this region they sent forth their colonies to the shores of Asia Minor. As these colonies began earlier than the mother country the march of cultivation and refinement, the terms, Ionian, Ionians, and Ionic, were used, by way of eminence, to denote their new settlements, themselves, and their dialect, and finally were exclusively appropriated to them. The original Ionians at home were now called Attics, Athenians; and their country, laying aside its primitive name of Ionian, took that of Attica."²

VI.

"The ATTIC DIALECT underwent three changes. The old Attic was scarcely different from the Old Ionic, as Attica was the original country of the Ionians; and hence we find in Homer many forms of words, which were otherwise peculiar to the Attics. In this dialect

1. "The student is to attribute to Anacreon only the fragments which were collected by F. Ursinus, and a few additional ones; and not those poems which commonly go under his name, a few only excepted. As Anacreon lived more than 100 years before Herodotus, his dialect was probably different. With respect to Herodotus, it is to be observed, that he adopted the Ionic for his history, being himself a Dorian; consequently he is not always consistent in his usages, and perhaps is more Ionic than a real Ionian would have been. His dialect is certainly different from that of Hippocrates." Blomfield, Remarks on Matthiæ's Gr. Gr. p. xxxiii.

2. In the age of Homer the Attics were still called Ἰάονες.

Solon wrote his laws. Through the proximity of the original Æolic and Doric in Bœotia and Megaris, the frequent intercourse with the Dorians in Peloponnesus, and with other Greeks and foreign nations, it was gradually intermixed with words which were not Ionian, and departed farther from the Ionic in many respects, and particularly in using the long α where the Ionians employed the η, after a vowel, or the letter β; in avoiding the collision of several vowels in two different words, by contracting them into a diphthong, or long vowel; in preferring the consonants with an aspirate, whilst the Ionians used the tenues; &c. Thus arose the middle Attic, in which Gorgias of Leontium was the first who wrote. The writers in this dialect are, besides the one just mentioned, Thucydides, the tragedians, Aristophanes, and others. The new Attic is dated from Demosthenes and Æschines, although Plato, Xenophon, Aristophanes, Lysias, and Isocrates, have many of its peculiarities. It differed chiefly from the foregoing, in preferring the softer forms; for instance, the 2d Aor. συλλεγεις, ἀπαλλαγεις, instead of the ancient Attic and Ionic, συλλεχθεις, ἀπαλλαχθεις; the double ρρ instead of the old ρσ, which the old Attic had in common with the Ionic, Doric, and Æolic; the double ττ instead of the hissing σσ. They said also, πλεῖμων, γναφεύς, for πνεύμων, κναφεύς and σύν instead of the old ζύν."

"Athens having attained an important political elevation, and exercising a species of general government over Greece, became, at the same time, the centre of literary improvement. Greeks from all the tribes went to Athens for their education, and the Attic works became models in every department of literature. The consequence was, that when Greece, soon after, under the Macedonian monarchy, assumed a political unity, the Attic dialect, having taken rank of the others, became the language of the court and of literature, in which the prose writers of all the tribes, and of whatever region, henceforth almost exclusively wrote. The central point of this later Greek literature was established under the Ptolemies at Alexandria in Egypt."

VIII.

"With the universality of the Attic dialect, began its degeneracy. Writers introduced peculiarities of their provincial dialects; or in place of anomalies peculiar to the Athenians, or of phrases that seemed artificial, made use of the more regular or natural forms; or instead of a simple phrase, which had become more or less obsolete, introduced a more popular derivative form, as νήχεσθαι for νείν, to swim, and ἀροτριᾶν for ἀροῦν, to plough. Against this, however, the Grammarians often pedantically and unreasonably struggled; and, in their treatises, placed by the side of these offensive or inelegant modernisms the true forms from the old Attic writers. Hence it became usual to understand by Attic, only that which was found in the ancient classics, and to give to the common language of literature, formed in the manner indicated, the name of κοινή, 'the vulgar,' or ἐλληνική, 'the Greek,' i. e. 'the vulgar Greek.' This κοινή διάλεκτος, after all, however, remained essentially Attic, and of course every common Greek grammar assumes the Attic dialect as its basis."

1. Buttmann's Greek Grammar, p. 2. (Everett's translation.)

IX.

"To the universality, however, of the Attic dialect, an exception was made in poetry. In this department the Attics remained the models only in one branch, the dramatic. For the other sorts of poetry, Homer and the other elder Ionic bards, who continued to be read in the schools, remained the standard. The Doric dialect, however, even in later days, was not excluded from poetry; on the contrary, it sustained itself in some of the subordinate branches of the art, particularly in the pastoral and humorous. When, however, the language that prevails in the lyrical portions of the drama, that is, in the chorusses and passionate speeches, is called Doric, it is to be remembered that the Doricism consists in little else than the predominance of the long a, particularly in the place of η, which was a feature of the ancient language in general, and retained itself for its dignity in sublime poetry, while in common life it remained in use only among the Dorians."

"The Macedonian dialect must be especially regarded among those which are, in various degrees, incorporated with the later Greek. The Macedonians were allied to the Greeks, and numbered themselves with the Dorians. They introduced, as conquerors, the Greek cultivation and refinement among the conquered barbarians. Here also the Greek was spoken and written, not, however, without some peculiarities of form which the Grammarians denominated Macedonian. As Egypt, and its capital city Alexandria, became the principal seat of the later Greek culture, these forms were comprehended under the name of the Alexandrian dialect. The natives also of these conquered countries began to speak the Greek (ἐλληνίζειν), and such an Asiatic Greek was denominated ἐλληνιστῆς. Hence the style of the writers of this class, with which were incorporated many forms not Greek, and many oriental turns of expression, was denominated Hellenistic. It need scarcely be observed, that this dialect is contained in the Jewish and Christian monuments of those times, especially in the Septuagint and in the New Testament, whence it passed, more or less, into the works of the Fathers. New barbarisms of every kind were introduced during the middle ages, when Constantinople, the ancient Byzantium, became the seat of the Greek empire and centre of literary cultivation. Out of this arose the dialect of the Byzantine writers, and finally, the yet living language of the modern Greeks."

"As regards more particularly the Greek of the Scriptures, it must be observed, that the language of popular intercourse, in which the various dialects of the different Grecian tribes, heretofore separate, were more or less mingled together, and in which the Macedonian dialect was peculiarly prominent, constitutes the basis of the diction employed by the Seventy, the writers of the Apocrypha, and those of the New Testament. The Egyptian Jews learned the Greek, first of all, by intercourse with those who spoke this language, and not from books; for they had, in the time of our Saviour, a decided aversion to Greek culture and literature. When they appeared as authors, they did not adopt the style of writing employed by the learned, but made use of the popular dialect, which they had been accustomed to speak. The character of this dialect, however, can be only imperfectly known; as the Septuagint, the New Testament, and some of the fathers of the Church, exhibit the only monuments of it, and these are not altogether pure. Since, however, much which belonged to it was peculiar to the later Greek writings; so writers in the κοινή διάλεκτος, particularly Polybius, Plutarch, Artemidorus, Appian, &c. and more especially the Byzantine historians, may be used as secondary sources. That this later dialect had peculiarities of its own, in several provinces, is quite probable; as the ancient Grammarians, who have written upon the Alexandrian dialect, have asserted. Accordingly, some find Cilicisms in the writings of St. Paul; though this hypothesis is rejected by recent critics as untenable and devoid of any firm support. The popular Greek dialect was also intermixed by the Jews with many idiomatic forms of expression from their native tongue. Hence arose a Judaizing Greek dialect, which was in some degree unintelligible to the native Greeks, and became an object of their contempt."

XII.

As respects the Latin language, which many have regarded in its origin as only another dialect of the Greek, it may be remarked that three different tongues combine to form it, viz. the Celtic, the Æolic Greek, and the Pelasgic. The basis of the Latin tongue appears to be the Celtic.¹ The Æolic Greek is supposed to have been introduced by some of the wandering remnants of the Æolic tribes² who had fought before Troy, and were driven by storms on the coast of Italy when returning to their homes; while the Pelasgic came in with that ancient race when they laid the foundation of the Etrurian commonwealth.³ Whatever the Greek and Latin possess in common with the Sanskrit (Sonskrito) language, appears to have been obtained through the medium of the Pelasgi; and it is remarkable that, as this ancient people made a permanent settlement in Italy, so the Latin presents far more traces than the Greek of affinity with the Sanskrit.⁴

XIII.

"The opinion that the Greek and Latin owed their origin to the Sanskrit, and consequently that the last is of greater antiquity than the other two, was never, we believe, questioned till Mr. Stewart broached a directly opposite doctrine in his last volume of the philosophy of the Human Mind. In this he has been supported, with much ingenuity and learning, by Professor Dunbar, in his Enquiry into the Structure of the Greek and Latin languages.⁶ In the Appendix to this work, he has endeavoured to establish the derivation of the Sanskrit from the Greek. Mr. Stewart supposes 'that the conquests of Alexander in India, and the subsequent establishment of a Greek Colony in Bactria, diffused among the native inhabitants a knowledge of the Greek language, of which the Brahmins availed themselves to invent their sacred dialect.' It does not clearly appear, whether the opinion of Mr. Stewart and Professor Dunbar is, that this dialect was formed simply by adapting Greek terminations to the vernacular tongue, or by forming it entirely from the Greek. But, take whichever supposition we please, the opinion is equally groundless. The object of the Brahmins was to invent a sacred dialect; that is, a dialect not understood by the mass of the people. But if they merely combined Greek with the vernacular tongue, so as to make the terminations of the verb, as is the case, the sacred language would, with very little trouble, be learnt by the people. If, on the other hand, the Brahmins formed the whole of their sacred dialect from the Greek, with perhaps some few alterations either in the vocabulary or in the grammatical structure, it must have been understood by the Greek inhabitants of Bactria; and, if Mr. Stewart is correct in his opinion, that the conquests of Alexander, and the Greek colonists had diffused among the native inhabitants a knowledge of the Greek language, the sacred dialect must have been equally accessible to them. Mr. Stewart admits, 'that it must be ascertained from internal evidence which of the two languages was the primitive and which the derivative; and whether the mechanism of the Sanskrit affords any satisfactory evidence of its being manufactured by such a deliberate and systematic process as has been conjectured.'

Merely calling the attention of the reader to the absurdity of supposing, that any language ever was or could be formed by such a deliberate and systematic process, we shall now examine the internal evidence adduced by Professor Dunbar, in support of the derivation of the Sanskrit from the Greek. The Professor maintains, that the Greek verbs of motion and existence form the terminations of every verb in Sanskrit. The verbs of motion and existence are undoubtedly very similar in those two languages, but which are the original, and which the derivative, is not proved. His strongest evidence, however, is this: the Sanskrit augment, significative of past time, is borrowed from a Greek word, which, however, was not employed as an augment in the earlier periods of the Greek language; therefore the Greek could not have been derived from the Sanskrit, but the latter must have been derived from the Greek, at a time when the augment was used. 'The augment,' he says, was 'just coming into use in Homer's time, as he seldom uses it, unless when compelled by the nature of the verse.' He gives several examples of the separate use of the essential verb, (from which the augment was afterwards formed,) even when the language was carried to its highest state of perfection. This is a plausible mode of reasoning, but, in our opinion, not satisfactory, nor decisive of the question. The essential verbs are the same both in Sanskrit and Greek: at the remote period when the latter was derived from the former, it is highly probable that the primitive mode of using them separately was universal in the Sanskrit. As the Greek became polished and refined, the grammatical structure was changed; the essential verbs were shortened and converted into augments. The Brahmins, equally attentive to the improvement of the grammatical structure of their language, would soon perceive that the change of these verbs into augments would tend to that improvement. In fact, we know, that in all languages there is a tendency to incorporate words, and to effect this incorporation by the same processes as were adopted by the Greeks. In our own language, the word loved is, in fact, formed by the annexation of the essential verb, did, to the radical term. In this manner the past tense is formed in the Anglo-Saxon and our oldest English writers. The employment of the essential verb did, separately, unmutilated, and placed before the radical term, does not, we believe, occur in Wickliffe: it was afterwards introduced, but is now nearly laid aside again, except where particular emphasis is meant to be given. From these considerations we cannot lay much stress on Professor Dunbar's argument, grounded on the employment of the augment in the Sanskrit, and its unfrequent use in the Greek of Homer's time.

But there are other proofs against the doctrine broached by Mr. Stewart, and adopted by Professor Dunbar, that the Sanskrit is a comparatively modern language, manufactured by the Brahmins out of the Greek, after the time of Alexander, for their peculiar use. Mr. Colebrook, in his Essay on the Sanskrit and Prakrit Languages, maintains that there is no good reason for doubting that the Sanskrit was once universally spoken in India: and, he adds, when it was the language of Indian courts, it was cultivated by all persons who devoted themselves to the liberal arts; in short, by the first three tribes, and by many classes included in the fourth. He farther states, that nine-tenths of the Hindoo, which, with a mixture of Persic, forms the modern Hindostanee, may be traced back to the parent Sanskrit; that there are few words in the Bengalee which are not evidently of the same origin; and that all the principal languages of India contain much pure as well as corrupt Sanskrit. With respect to the Sanskrit itself, 'It evidently derives its origin, and some steps of its progress may even now be traced, from a primeval tongue, which was gradually refined in various climates, and became Sanskrit in India, Pahlavi in Persia, and Greek on the shores of the Mediterranean.'

To these overwhelming objections to the opinion of Mr. Stewart and Professor Dunbar, we shall merely add, that, in the time of Alexander, the five rivers of the Panjeab, which fall into the Indus, bore Sanskrit names, the same as they do at present. Taking into consideration the relation between the vowels a and u in Oriental orthography, and the connection of the consonants B and V with the aspirate, the Hydasper of Nearchus, Alexander's admiral, is the Bedrusta or Vetasta of the Sanskrit. The name given it by Ptolemy, Bidaspes, serves, as Dr. Vincent justly remarks, on this occasion, as well as on all others, 'as the point of connection between the Macedonian orthography and the Sanskrit.' For the steps by which the names given to the other four rivers, by Nearchus, may be traced through the names given them by Ptolemy, to these Sanskrit appellations, we must refer the readers to the first volume of Dr. Vincent's learned and ingenious work on the Commerce and Navigation of the Ancients, pp. 94, 98, 101, 104, 108. GENERAL PROPERTIES OF THE DIALECTS.

loves contractions, as φιλῶ for φιλέω, ᾗδεν for εἰδεν.

Its favourite letter is ω, which it uses for ο.

It changes long into short, and short into long syllables, as λεῶς for λαός.

In Nouns, it changes ο, οι, and ου of the Second Declension into ω; as N. V. λεῶς, G. λεῶ, D. λεῶ, A. λεῶν, &c.

It changes εις into ης, as ἱππῆς for ἱππεῖς.

It makes the Vocative like the Nominative, as ὦ πάτερ, ὦ φίλος, Soph.

In some Nouns it makes the Accusative in ω, instead of ων, ωα, or ωνα; as, λαγῶ, Μίνω, Ποσειδῶ, for λαγῶν, Μίνωα, Ποσειδῶνα.²

It changes the Gen. εος into εως, as βασιλέως for βασιλέος.³

1. A marked difference exists between the Old and the New Attic. The former used short and simple forms: the latter softened, and, in some cases, lengthened, the word. The former used the short words δειν, αλεῖν, θέρεσθαι, νεῖν, κνεῖν: for these the latter substituted δεσμεύειν, ἀλῆθειν, θερμαίνεισθαι, νήθειν, κνήθειν. The Old neglected ι, which the New added or subscribed; the former wrote κάω, κλάω, λωστος, πρῶμος: the latter, καίω, κλαιο, λῶϊστος, πρῶμιος.

Other changes marked the distinction. The New Attic in some cases avoided the sound of σ; hence it substituted ἄρρην, θάρρος, μυρρίνη, θάλαττα, πρίττω, φυλάττω, for the ἄρσην, θάρσος, μυρσίνη, θάλασσα, πράσσω, φυλάσσω of the Old Attic.

In the Future of verbs the Old used the contraction form δλῶ, καλῶ, δλῶ, ἀναβιβῶμαι; the New Attic resumed σ, and made them δλέσω, καλέσω, ολεσω, ἀναβιβάσσομαι. After the adoption of this Future, which became the general form in the common dialect of Greece, the Attics still preserved the other form, which is now distinguished by the name of the Second Future.

It may be questioned whether the κ and χ, the π and φ, were not added to the Perfect, which was originally formed in the Old Attic and Ionic by the change of ω into α, as we find traces in ἴσταα, μέμαα, and in the Aorists ἔσενα, ἔχεα, ἤλενα. It is indeed probable, that in the simplest forms of the language those tenses were similar; the principle of variety and of precision introduced these changes and additions, which adorned the luxuriant language of ancient Greece. That of modern Greece has returned to the original simplicity; it has only one Past tense; as γράφω, ἔγραψα; πλέκω, ἔπλεξα; γνωρίζω, ἐγνώρισα; ψάλλω, ἔψαλα.

Even the accentuation underwent some change. The Old Attic said, ὁμοῖος, τροπαῖον; the New, ὁμοιος, τρόπαιον.

2. So in Latin, Aut Atho, Aut Rhodopen, Virg.

3. This Genitive exemplifies the difference of the dialects. The Common dialect is βασιλείος, the Attic βασιλέως, the Ionic βασιλῆος, the Doric and Æolic βασιλεως.

It is probable that the Nom. υς was originally ϛς, which was declined into εϛος, εϛι, εϛα, &c.

The Digamma will explain the principle of many formations. Thus, Πηληιάδης, in the Æolic form, was Πηληφιᾶδαϛο: hence α in the penultima is lengthened; hence too, ε is changed into the Ionic η. The Genitive of Nouns in ος was probably οϛο, which was shortened into οϛ: the Poets changed the Digamma into ι, and made the termination οιο. But the Digamma was, by the greater part of Greece changed into υ, in the formation of Cases. Thus the Gen. of σὺ and of ο was σέϛο and έϛο, ab-

In three Verbs, it changes the Augment ϵ into η , in $\eta\beta\sigma\upsilon\lambda\omicron\mu\eta\nu$, $\eta\delta\sigma\upsilon\delta\mu\eta\nu$, $\eta\mu\epsilon\lambda\lambda\omicron\nu$.

It changes $\epsilon\iota$ into η , as $\eta\delta\epsilon\iota\nu$ for $\epsilon\iota\delta\epsilon\iota\nu$.

It adds a syllable to the Temporal Augment, as $\delta\rho\acute{\alpha}\omega$, $\epsilon\acute{\omega}\rho\alpha\sigma\omicron\nu$ for $\acute{\omega}\rho\alpha\sigma\omicron\nu$; $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\kappa\omega$, $\epsilon\omicron\iota\kappa\alpha$ for $\omicron\iota\kappa\alpha$.

It adds $\theta\alpha$ to the Second Person in σ , as $\eta\sigma\theta\alpha$ for $\eta\varsigma$, $\omicron\iota\delta\alpha\sigma\theta\alpha$, by Syncope, $\omicron\iota\sigma\theta\alpha$, for $\omicron\iota\delta\alpha\varsigma$.

It changes $\lambda\epsilon$ and $\mu\epsilon$ of the Perf. into $\epsilon\iota$, as $\epsilon\iota\lambda\eta\phi\alpha$ for $\lambda\epsilon\lambda\eta\phi\alpha$, $\epsilon\iota\mu\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\iota$ for $\mu\epsilon\mu\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\iota$, $\epsilon\iota\lambda\epsilon\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$ for $\lambda\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$.

It drops the Reduplication in Verbs beginning with two consonants, as $\epsilon\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\sigma\tau\eta\kappa\alpha$ for $\beta\epsilon\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\sigma\tau\eta\kappa\alpha$.

It repeats the two first letters of the Present before the Augment of Verbs beginning with α , ϵ , \omicron ; as $\acute{\omicron}\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega$, $\acute{\omega}\lambda\epsilon\kappa\alpha$, $\acute{\omicron}\lambda\acute{\omega}\lambda\epsilon\kappa\alpha$.

It forms the 1st Fut. and Perfect of Verbs in ω , as from $\epsilon\omega$; thus $\theta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega$, $\theta\epsilon\lambda\acute{\eta}\sigma\omega$, $\tau\epsilon\theta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\eta\kappa\alpha$, as if from $\theta\epsilon\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omega$.¹

It drops σ in the 1st Future, as $\nu\omicron\mu\iota\tilde{\omega}$ circumflexed for $\nu\omicron\mu\acute{\iota}\sigma\omega$, $\kappa\omicron\rho\acute{\epsilon}\epsilon\iota$ for $\kappa\omicron\rho\epsilon\sigma\sigma\epsilon\iota$.

It changes ϵ in the penultima of the Perf. Act. into \omicron , as $\epsilon\sigma\tau\rho\omicron\phi\alpha$ from $\sigma\tau\rho\acute{\epsilon}\phi\omega$, $\epsilon\iota\lambda\omicron\chi\alpha$ for $\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\chi\alpha$.

It forms the Pluperfect in η , $\eta\varsigma$, η or $\epsilon\iota\nu$.

It changes $\epsilon\tau\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$ and $\alpha\tau\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$ in the 3d Person Plural Imperative into $\omicron\nu\tau\omega\nu$ and $\alpha\nu\tau\omega\nu$, as $\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\acute{\omicron}\nu\tau\omega\nu$ for $\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\acute{\epsilon}\tau\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$; $\tau\upsilon\psi\acute{\alpha}\nu\tau\omega\nu$ for $\tau\upsilon\psi\acute{\alpha}\tau\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$; and $\sigma\theta\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$ into $\sigma\theta\omega\nu$ as $\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\theta\omega\nu$, $\tau\upsilon\pi\tau\acute{\epsilon}\sigma\theta\omega\sigma\alpha\nu$.

It makes the Optative of Contracts in $\eta\nu$, as $\phi\iota\lambda\omicron\iota\eta\nu$ for $\phi\iota\lambda\omicron\iota\tilde{\mu}\iota$.²

It changes μ before $\mu\alpha\iota$ in the Perfect Passive of the 4th Conjugation into σ , as $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\phi\alpha\sigma\mu\alpha\iota$ for $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\phi\alpha\rho\mu\alpha\iota$.³

loves a concourse of vowels, as $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\epsilon\alpha\iota$ for $\tau\acute{\upsilon}\pi\tau\eta$, $\sigma\epsilon\lambda\eta\nu\alpha\iota\eta$ for $\sigma\epsilon\lambda\acute{\eta}\nu\eta$.

Its favourite letter is η , which it uses for α and ϵ .

It puts soft for aspirate, and aspirate for soft, Mutes; as, $\epsilon\nu\theta\alpha\upsilon\tau\alpha$ for $\epsilon\nu\tau\alpha\upsilon\theta\alpha$, $\kappa\iota\theta\omega\nu$ for $\chi\iota\tau\omega\nu$.

It prefixes and inserts ϵ , as $\epsilon\omega\nu$ for $\acute{\omega}\nu$, $\pi\omicron\iota\eta\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega\nu$ for $\pi\omicron\iota\eta\tau\acute{\omega}\nu$.

It inserts ι , as $\rho\acute{\epsilon}\iota\alpha$ for $\acute{\rho}\acute{\epsilon}\alpha$; and adds instead of subcribing it, as $\Theta\rho\acute{\eta}\iota\kappa\epsilon\varsigma$ for $\Theta\rho\acute{\alpha}\kappa\epsilon\varsigma$, $\rho\eta\acute{\iota}\delta\iota\omicron\varsigma$ for $\acute{\rho}\acute{\alpha}\delta\iota\omicron\varsigma$.

In Nouns of the First Declension, it changes the Genitive $\omicron\nu$ into $\epsilon\omega$, as $\pi\omicron\iota\eta\tau\acute{\epsilon}\omega$ for $\pi\omicron\iota\eta\tau\acute{\omicron}\delta$.

It changes the Dative Plural into $\eta\varsigma$ and $\eta\sigma\iota$, as $\delta\epsilon\iota\nu\eta\varsigma$ $\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\eta\sigma\iota$, Hes. for $\delta\epsilon\iota\nu\alpha\iota\varsigma$, $\kappa\epsilon\phi\alpha\lambda\alpha\iota\varsigma$.

In the Second it adds ι to the Dative Plural, as $\tau\omicron\iota\tau\iota$ $\epsilon\rho\gamma\omicron\iota\sigma\iota$, Her. for $\tau\omicron\iota\varsigma$ $\epsilon\rho\gamma\omicron\iota\varsigma$, neglecting ν before a vowel in prose.⁴

In the third it changes ϵ into η , as $\beta\alpha\sigma\iota\lambda\acute{\eta}\omicron\varsigma$ for $\beta\alpha\sigma\iota\lambda\acute{\epsilon}\omicron\varsigma$.

It changes the Accusative of Contracts in ω and $\omicron\varsigma$ into $\alpha\nu\nu$, as $\alpha\acute{\iota}\delta\omicron\theta\nu$ for $\alpha\acute{\iota}\delta\acute{\omicron}\alpha$.

In Verbs it removes the Augment, as $\beta\eta$ for $\epsilon\beta\eta$.

breviated into $\sigma\epsilon\iota\tilde{\omicron}$ and $\epsilon\tilde{\omicron}$, afterwards changed into $\sigma\epsilon\tilde{\omicron}$ and $\epsilon\tilde{\omicron}$, or $\sigma\omicron\tilde{\omicron}$ and $\omicron\tilde{\omicron}$, but by the Ionians into $\sigma\epsilon\iota\omicron$ and $\epsilon\iota\omicron$.

1. These Verbs have no other form, $\beta\omicron\lambda\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$, $\epsilon\acute{\rho}\beta\omega$, $\theta\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\omega$, $\kappa\alpha\theta\epsilon\acute{\omicron}\delta\omega$, $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\omega$, $\mu\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\epsilon\iota$, $\omicron\iota\omicron\mu\alpha\iota$.

2. The Third Person Plural is always regular, $\phi\iota\lambda\omicron\iota\tilde{\epsilon}\nu$. Verbs in $\alpha\omega$ make $\acute{\omega}\eta\nu$.

3. In the construction of sentences, it uses a license, probably occasioned by the love of liberty which characterised the Athenians.

4. The addition of ι is frequent in poetry.

It terminates the Imperfect and Aorists in σκον, as τύπτεσκον, τύψασκον, for ἔτυπτεν, ἔτυψα.

It adds σι to the Third Person Subjunctive, as τύπηται for τύπη.

It changes ειν, εις, ει of the Pluperfect into εα, εας, εε, &c. as ἔτετέφεα, ας, &c.

It forms the Third Person plural of the Passive in ται and το, as τυπτάται for τύπτονται, ἐτιθάτο for ἐτίθεντο, ἔατο for ἔητο.

It resumes in the Perfect the consonant of the Active, as τετέφεται for τετυμμένοι εισί.

THE DORIC

loves a broad pronunciation; its favourite letter is α, which it uses for ε, η, ο, ω, and ου.

It changes ζ into σδ, as σδω for δζω.¹

In Nouns of the First Declension, it changes ου of the Genitive into α, as ἀττα for ἀττου.

In the Second Declension it changes ου of the Genitive into ω, as θεῶ for θεου; and ους of the Accusative Plural into ος and ως, as θεῖος for θεους, ἀνθρώπως for ἀνθρώπους.

In the Third Declension it changes ους of the Genitive into εως, as χείλεως for χείλεος.

In Verbs, it forms the 2d and 3d Persons Singular of the Present in ες and ε, as τύπτες, τύπτε, for τύπτεις, τύπτει.

It changes ομεν of the 1st, and ουσι of the 3d Person Plural into ομες and οντι, as λέγομες, λέγοντι, for λέγομεν, λέγουσι.

It forms the Infinitive in μεν and μναι, as τυπόμεν and τυπόμεναι for τύπτειν.²

It forms the Feminine of Participles in οισα, εσσα, and ωσα, as τύπτοισα, τύπτουσα, and τύπωσα, for τύπτοουσα.

It forms the first Aorist Participle in αις, αισα, αιν, as τύψ-αις, αισα, αιν, for τύψ-ας, ασα, αν.

In the Passive it forms the 1st Person Dual in εσθον, and Plural in εσθα, as τυπτόμ-εσθον, εσθα, for τυπτόμ-εθον, εθα.³

It changes ου of the 2d Person into ευ, as τύπτευ for τύπτον.

In the Middle, it circumflexes the First Future, as τυψοῦμαι for τύνομαι.

It forms the 1st Person Sing. of the Future in εμαι, and the 3d Plural in ευνται, as τυψεῖμαι, τυψεύνται.

THE ÆOLIC

changes the Aspirate into the Soft breathing, as ἡμέρα for ἡμέρα.⁴

1. Z is composed of δς; the Doric only reverses the order of those letters.

2. It has been thought that τυπόμεναι was the original form, which was shortened by Apocope into τυπόμεν; the next abbreviation was τύπτειν, which was contracted into τύπτειν. The Doric shortened it still more into τύπτεν.

3. Some forms are promiscuously used by more than one dialect. Thus those in εσθον and εσθα are Attic as well as Doric.

4. On the same principle, the Latin dialect had originally no aspirate; hence fama from φήμη, fuga from φύγη, cano from χαίνω, fallo from σφάλω, vespa from σφήξ. It used ædus for hædus, ircus for hircus. Afterwards the aspiration was imitated from the Greek; and, in consequence of the propensity to extremes natural to mankind, the Latins carried

It draws back the Accent, as ἔγω for ἐγὼ, φῆμι, for φημι, σύνειδα, for συν-εἶδα, ἀγαθος for ἀγαθός; and circumflexes acuted monosyllables, as Ζεὺς for Ζεύς.

It puts θα for θεν, as ἐπισθα for ἐπισθεν.

In Nouns of the First Declension it changes ον into αο, as ἀίδας for αἰδον.

It changes ων of the Genitive Plural into άων, and ας of the Accusative into αις, as μουσάων, μουσαις, for μουσών, μούσας.

In the 2d Declension it drops the ι subscript in the Dative, as κόσμω for κόσμῳ.

In the 3d Declension it changes the Accusative of Contracts in ω and ως into ων, as αἰδῶν for αἰδῶα; and the Genitive ους into ως.

It forms the 3d Person Plural of the Imperfect and Aorists of the Indicative and Optative in σαν, as ἐτύπτοσαν for ἐτυπτον.¹

It changes the Infinitive in αν and ον into αις and οις, as γέλαῖς for γέλαν, χρυσοῖς for χρυσον.

It changes ειν of the Infinitive into ην, as τύπτην for τύπτειν.

have several peculiarities of inflection.

They use all the dialects; but not indiscriminately, as will be seen in the perusal of the best models in each species of poetry. In general they adopt the most ancient forms, as remote from the common dialect.²

They lengthen short syllables, by doubling the consonants, as ἔσσεται for ἔσεται, ἔδδεις for ἔδεις; by changing a short vowel into a diphthong, as εἰν for έν, μόνος for μόνος, εἰλήλουθμεν for εληλύθαμεν; or by ν final, as εσ-τίν φίλον.

They add syllables, as φῶς for φῶς, δράν for δρᾶν, σασσόμεναι for σώσεν.

They drop short vowels in pronunciation, to diminish the number of syllables, as δμάω for δαμάω, έγεντο for έγένετο.

They drop syllables, as ἄλφιτον, κρί for κρίνον, λίπα for λίπαρον; δύνα for δύνασαι, σάω for εἰσάωσι, &c.

In Nouns they form the Gen. and Dat. in φι; as κεφαλῆφι from κεφαλῆ, στρατόφι from στρατός, δχεσφι from δχος, ναῖφι for ναῖσι. So αὐτόφι for αὐτοῖς.

In the 2d Declension they change the Genitive ον into οιο, as πολέμοιο κακοῖο for πολέμον κακοῦ, Hom.³ and οιν in the Dual into οιῖν, as λόγοιῖν for λόγοιν.

In the 3d Declension, they form the Dative Plural by adding ι or σι to the Nominative Plural, as παῖς, παῖδες, παῖδεσι or παῖδεσι.

In Neuters they change α into ει or εσι, as βήματα, βημάτεσι.

They form several Verbs of a peculiar termination, in θω, σγω, σθω, σχω, ξω, ειω, εινω, ηω, οιω, ουω, and ωω, as βεβρώθω, ἔξω, &c. So δρσω from δρω, &c.

They have Particles peculiar to themselves, as εμαι, δθηα, εκητι, ημος, μεσφα, νέρθε, δχα, κε, βα, &c.

the use of aspirates to a ridiculous excess, some pronouncing præhones for præcones, chēturiones for centuriones, chommoda for commoda.

1. This is chiefly used, in the Alexandrian dialect, by the Septuagint.

2. Thus they frequently omit the Augment, which was not used in the earliest Ionic and Attic forms.

3. The Tragic poets adopt this change in the choruses only.

1. This Verb will appear less irregular, if it is observed that it forms its Tenses in every dialect from ἔω, ἐμὶ, ἐμὶ or εἰμὶ, and ἔσομὶ. From ἔω are formed ἔεις; ἔει contracted into εἶς; εἶ; and from its Future ἔσω is formed its Middle ἔσομαι. From εἰμὶ and ἔσομὶ are formed εἶ, ἐστί, or ἐστί, &c. From εἰμὶ we have εἶσι, &c. Thus the Tenses of the Verb sum, are formed from sum, fuo, forem, ἔω and εἰμὶ.
